In view of concurrent sentences imposed upon convictions for assault with intent to kill while armed and assault with a dangerous weapon, the mildness of the punishment adjudged, the trial judge's recommendation for psychiatric treatment and the necessity for conserving judicial resources, the Court of Appeals would not reach question as to whether the crime of assault with dangerous weapon merged into crime of assault with intent to kill while armed with a dangerous weapon, but would vacate the convictions on the four counts which charged assault with a dangerous weapon. United States v. J. Hill (1972, 470 F. 2d 361, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 213).

New trial

Defendant, who had been convicted of assault with intent to commit robbery and armed robbery, was not entitled to new trial on ground of newly discovered evidence consisting of his posttrial information that an attempt had been made on his life by the "real" robber, whom defendant and another witness could identify, and that defendant had not given his attorney the information prior to trial because of fear for his life, as defendant had been apprehended on strength of positive identifications it was unlikely that the additional testimony, which would merely have been cumulative of defense of innocent presence, would have produced a different result. E. Quick v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 316 A. 2d 875).

Prosecutor's comments

Trial court did not err in refusing to give curative instruction after prosecutor suggested, in closing argument, that defendant may have carried his pistol prior to the incident in question with intent of using it to commit a crime since that statement was a proper rebuttal to defense counsel's argument that defendant had been carrying the gun to defend himself and that the government had failed to show any motive for the shooting and, in addition, court subsequently instructed jury that arguments of counsel are not evidence. A. C. Fletcher v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 335 A.2d 248).

Any error in allowing government to comment, in closing argument, on failure of the defendant to call one of his companions, who was present at scene, is harmless, notwithstanding that court had denied government's request for a missing witness instruction, where challenged remarks were limited to observation that such individual had not testified and did not directly urge jury to draw from that fact an adverse inference and defendant had previously explained that he had not attempted to secure such witness because he did not believe that the witness would be willing to incriminate himself. Id.

Prosecutor's closing comment that assault victim had the courage to take stand and had the guts to get up and tell what happened does not constitute reversible error as improper comment on defendants' failure to testify; in view of fact that statements by prosecutor were merely an attempt to rehabilitate victim, who was only prosecution witness who testified as to circumstances of shooting, after attack on his testimony, it cannot be said that jury would naturally and necessarily draw an adverse inference against the silent defendants; in any event, court emphasized that defendants had an absolute right not to testify. E. Blango v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 335 A.2d 230).

Comments of prosecutor during assault trial to the effect, inter alia, that missing witness was too scared to come and testify, that defendants were killers and were dressed like gangsters, that one defendant was a "young buck," that guilty verdict would be a matter of achievement and courage, and that presumption of innocence might not apply as much to defendants as it might to others in less serious cases did not rise to the level of substantial prejudice necessary for reversal, in light of the strength of the Government's case and correcting instructions by the trial court. R. L. Smith v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 315 A. 2d 163; cert. denied 95 S. Ct. 174, 419 U.S. 896).

Prosecutor's closing and rebuttal arguments which referred to defenses of insanity interposed by famous defendants in other cases and to actions of Hitler and Napoleon were improper and were so highly prejudicial as to require reversal. United States v. W. E. Hawkins (1973, 480 F. 2d 1151, 156 U.S. App. D.C. 259).

Where prosecutor's improper closing and rebuttal arguments were so highly prejudicial as to require reversal of conviction of defendant who relied upon insanity as a defense and was convicted of first-degree murder and assault with intent to kill while armed, judgment of conviction of codefendant, who was charged as an aider and abettor, asserted lack of intent to commit murder, and was convicted of second-degree murder, would also be nullified. Id.

Question for jury

Whether defendant and his accomplice intended to deprive off-duty security officer for apartment complex of some property at time he was forced at gunpoint to submit to successive searches by accomplice during robbery of rental office of complex was jury question, in prosecution for assault with intent to commit robbery while armed, even though nothing was taken from victim and robbers apparently only intended to assure themselves that the security officer was not armed while they were engaged in stealing money of rental company in contradistinction to money or valuables of individual employees. W. Dowtin, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 330 A.2d 749).

Remand

Where evidence established offense of assault but not assault with intent to commit rape, remand was appropriate to determine whether new trial should be ordered or conviction entered for assault. United States v. C. I. Tremble (1972, 470 F. 2d 1272, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 363).

Right to counsel

Where defendant was arrested on probable cause for assault with intent to commit rape and was advised of right to counsel but did not request counsel, defendant's constitutional right to counsel was not infringed by the administration of a benzidine test by trained police technician to determine presence of blood on penis shortly after assault. United States v. L. Smith (1972, 470 F. 2d 377, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 229).

If counsel had been present and had advised defendant, validly arrested on probable cause for assault with intent to commit rape, against submitting to benzidine test to determine presence of blood on penis such advice would have been futile, since police were entitled to make such test which was one of the preparatory steps excluded from Sixth Amendment right to counsel. Id.

Search and seizure

Where defendant was accused of assault with intent to commit rape and taken to police station where there was administered to him shortly after his arrival at station and after a warning of his constitutional rights, a benzidine test to determine presence of blood on penis, the administration of the chemical test by a trained police technician was pursuant to valid arrest for which there was probable cause and was a constitutionally valid search. United States v. L. Smith (1972, 470 F. 2d 377, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 229).

Severance

In prosecution of defendants on murder and rape charges, trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying motion of defendant brothers for a severance from codefendant, who had fatally stabbed the victim, notwithstanding defendants' claim that the evidence against the codefendant was much stronger than the evidence against them. United States v. B. J. Heinlein (1973, 490 F. 2d 725, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 157).

Speedy trial

Defendant is not denied speedy trial by virtue of court's granting continuance of trial date from November 2 to January 15 of succeeding year where delay was not instigated by prosecutor but was due solely to court's involvement in other litigation, trial was conducted less than eight months after alleged crime, and defendant made no objection in trial court to continuance and asserted no Sixth Amendment rights prior to his appeal. J. Coleman, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 332 A.2d 355).

Twenty-five month delay between attempted street robbery and trial did not deny defendant his constitutional right to speedy trial where first ten months were largely consumed by exigencies of indictment, pretrial motions, and efforts to reach disposition by plea, where ensuing 14-month delay was caused by trial court's heavy involvement in other litigation, where defendant voiced no speedy trial considerations until two days before trial, where there was no substantial showing of prejudice, and where defendant was free on bail for 17 of the 25 months. United States v. M. E. Jones (1973, 475 F. 2d 322, 154 U.S. App. D.C. 211).

Witnesses

Trial court, which denied a defense motion during trial to have key prosecution witness, who was a chronic alcoholic, subjected to a psychiatric examination with respect to his competency, did not abuse its discretion in refusing to treat the witness as a person of actual or potential incompetency, notwithstanding the claims of defendants, in support of their motion, that the testimony given by the witness was highly confusing and that hospital records indicated he had a clinical history which rendered him wholly unreliable. United States v. B. J. Heinlein (1973, 490 F. 2d 725, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 157).

Competency of mentally retarded 18-year-old prosecutrix to testify in prosecution for assault with intent to commit rape while armed, assault with a dangerous weapon and carrying a dangerous weapon, was a threshold question of law committed to the trial court's discretion; it remained for the jury, however, to assess credibility of the witness and the weight to be given her testimony. United States v. H. Benn, Jr. (1973, 476 F. 2d 1127, 155 U.S. App. D.C. 180).

§ 22-502. Assault with intent to commit mayhem or with dangerous weapon.NOTES TO DECISIONS*Abuse of discretion

In prosecution of defendant on charges of cruelty to a child and assault with a dangerous weapon, namely, a belt, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in permitting the government to introduce, during its direct case, evidence of defendant's prior conviction of having assaulted the same child, where intent was placed clearly in issue by the contention in defendant's opening statement that an assault episode, involving the child's head being struck by a pliers tossed by defendant, was accidental. K. Robinson v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 317 A. 2d 508).

Allen charge

Where Allen charge was given after jury which had not been sequestered had deliberated 2 hours and 20 minutes and announced that they had reached a verdict on charge of carrying a dangerous weapon but were deadlocked on charge of assault with deadly weapon and after court took jury verdict of acquittal on carrying charge and where jury deliberated only 25 minutes before returning verdict of guilty on assault charge, Allen charge was not coercive to the point of requiring reversal of conviction. F. C. Winters v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 317 A. 2d 530).

Arrest

Totality of facts and circumstances, including information from radio report about fleeing pedestrian and pursuing citizen, and identification of pursuing citizen, justified warrantless arrest of pedestrian while he was being transported by officers to scene of reported incident, even though sum total of information available to officers when they placed pedestrian under arrest came from an unidentified victim of an undiscovered robbery and assault. G. W. Bates v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 327 A. 2d 542).

Assistance of counsel

Even if pretrial identifications which resulted from one lineup and one two-man showup were improper, defendant was not denied effective assistance of counsel because of counsel's failure to move, pretrial, for suppression of the identifications where there was abundant evidence of sources independent of those pretrial identifications to support the in-court identifications. S. S. Shelton v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 323 A. 2d 717).

Where an attorney has represented a convicted defendant at trial and, as defendant's attorney on appeal, concludes in good faith that a legitimate issue exists as to the constitutional adequacy of his representation of the defendant at trial, it is the duty of the attorney to move to withdraw as counsel on appeal. Id.

Construction

Where language of statute or statutory scheme in general does not fix punishment clearly and without ambiguity, a "rule of lenity" requires that court resolve doubts against turning a single transaction into multiple offenses. United States v. G. Alexander and B. Murdock (1972, 471 F. 2d 923, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 371; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 541, 409 U.S. 1044).

Cross-examination

In prosecution for unlawful entry and assault with deadly weapon, trial court did not improperly limit defendant's attempts to cross-examine government witnesses as to their possible desire to protect their employer from civil suit. J. F. Hyman v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 342 A.2d 43).

Where defendant, charged with possession of prohibited weapon and with assault with a dangerous weapon, called as a character witness his employer who testified that defendant had a good reputation in the community of keeping the peace and good order, cross-examination of employer as to whether he had heard that defendant had been convicted of the crime of false pretenses was proper. S. M. Darden v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 342 A.2d 24).

Where government's only witness to fact that stabbing was intentional was victim, refusal to permit defense counsel to cross-examine witness, with whom defendant had been living, as to whether or not she was aware of another woman in defendant's life was error. S. White v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 297 A. 2d 766).

Dangerous weapon

An imitation or blank pistol used in an assault by pointing it at another is a "dangerous weapon" in that it is likely to produce great bodily harm. E. Harris, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 333 A.2d 397).

Discovery

Where matter which prosecution had not disclosed prior to trial of indictment is inadmissible hearsay, i.e., a street rumor which remained unverified despite immediate investigation by police detective, and where detective did not abandon investigation until after positive identification of defendant had been made by principal victim and defendant had confessed to the crime, undisclosed information is not kind of material which prosecution should have furnished defendant in advance of trial. United States v. A. D. Sedgwick (D.C. App. 1975, 345 A.2d 465; cert. denied 96 S. Ct. 1751, —U.S.—).

Refusal, in criminal prosecution in which accused was convicted of sodomy, taking indecent liberties with a minor and assault with a deadly weapon and in which three potential government witnesses were of tender age, to grant accused discovery of names and addresses of government witnesses was not abuse of discretion. J. C. Davis v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 315 A. 2d 157).

Refusal to grant accused access to complaining witness' subpoenaed school records, which reflected no prior homosexual or other serious behavioral problems, was not reversible error. Id.

Double jeopardy

Where trial court, acting on good faith but erroneous belief that defendant had been entitled to certain information long before trial, first suggested continuance, which was declined by defendant, and then unsuccessfully sought defendant's consent to mistrial, and finally declared mistrial and discharged jury, without any insistence by defendant upon any right to completion of the trial by the first jury, jeopardy did not attach. United States v. A. D. Sedgwick (D.C. App. 1975, 345 A.2d 465; cert. denied 96 S. Ct. 1751, —U.S.—).

Elements of offense

Intent to use unlawfully is a required element in both the offense of assault with a dangerous weapon and the offense of possession of a dangerous weapon with intent to use unlawfully against another. United States v. V. B. Brooks (D.C. App. 1974, 330 A. 2d 245).

In prosecution on charges of cruelty to child and assault with a dangerous weapon, namely, a belt, intent was an essential element of the offenses and hence had to be proved by the Government beyond a reasonable doubt. K. Robinson v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 317 A. 2d 508).

Evidence—Admissibility

With respect to defendant's defense to charge of assault with a dangerous weapon that he was "only joking" when he pointed weapon at another, evidence that defendant was suffering withdrawal from heroin and was in need of money on the day of the incident and exhibited physical symptoms inconsistent with a frivolous state of mind is relevant to show intent or to negate lack thereof. E. Harris, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 333 A.2d 397).

Spectrographic identification of defendant as maker of telephone call to which police officer was responding when shot was not sufficiently accepted by scientific community as a whole to form a basis for a jury's determination of guilt or innocence, and was inadmissible. United States v. R. Addison (1974, 498 F. 2d 741, 162 U.S. App. D.C. 199; aff'g 337 F. Supp. 641).

Erroneous admission of testimony based on spectrogram or so-called "voice print" analysis did not fatally infect jury's verdict and did not require a reversal, in light of overwhelming evidence of guilt. Id.

Admitting colored photographs of complainant showing scars on upper portion of her body was not an abuse of discretion, in prosecution for, inter alia, assault with a dangerous weapon and malicious disfigurement, where photographs were not inflammatory and were clearly probative of the condition of complainant's body and, thus, were material on issue of malicious disfigurement. B. F. Villines v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 320 A. 2d 313).

In prosecution on charges of cruelty to a child and assault with a dangerous weapon, prior assault by defendant on the same child, which occurred some 17 months earlier, was not too remote to preclude its receipt in evidence on the question of intent. K. Robinson v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 317 A. 2d 508).

Evidence as to defendant's prior assault on the same child unquestionably was relevant as to whether he had the requisite intent to support verdicts finding him guilty of the charges of cruelty to a child and assault with a dangerous weapon, namely, a belt. Id.

Where only connection between gun and defendant was that gun, similar to one complainant said defendant had used, was found nearly five hours after alleged assault had occurred, not within neighborhood of hotel where assault took place, in an automobile owned and driven by defendant's brother and in which a short time before defendant had been a passenger, any connection between gun produced and alleged assault would be purely conjectural and where vital issue was whether gun was used in the altercation, admission of gun should have been rejected because connection with defendant was too conjectural and remote. R. C. Burleson v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 306 A. 2d 659).

— Good character

Prosecutor cannot offer bad character evidence unless accused first introduces evidence of good character, and even then prosecutor's proof is restricted to community reputation and to trait and traits to which accused's own character evidence related. United States v. J. A. Lewis (1973, 482 F. 2d 632, 157 U.S. App. D.C. 43).

When character witness, either for accused or for prosecution, is offered, he is subject to cross-examination as to his testimonial qualifications just like any other witness, and probe on cross-examination may extend to those matters, among others, which legitimately affect witness' knowledge of accused's community reputation for the character trait or traits which he confirms. Id.

Where at time judge ruled, during second trial for armed robbery and related offenses, that if defense put on good character witnesses then prosecution could cross-examine such witnesses to determine if they were aware of defendant's arrest for narcotics two weeks before commencement of second trial but ten months after the occurrence of offenses for which he was being tried, judge did not know whether witness would speak to reputation for peace and good order or as to reputation for truth and veracity, trial judge did not have essential information and ruling was error, but in view of government's case error was not prejudicial. Id.

— Sufficiency

Testimony by prison guards that they were locked in a cell and held as hostages, that defendant frequently checked the cell where the guards were confined, that he told the guards that he "had nothing to lose by going out looking," that defendant separated himself from a group of inmates who did not want to escape immediately before rebellious inmates clustered for breakout attempt, and that defendant thereafter came by the cell many times armed with a short piece of steel with a sharp end and threatened the hostages was sufficient to sustain defendant's convictions for attempted escape, armed kidnapping, robbery, and riot. United States v. J. Bridgeman (1975, 523 F.2d 1099, 173 U.S. App. D.C. 150; cert. denied 96 S. Ct. 1743, 1744, — U.S. —).

Evidence, including testimony of identification witness, was sufficient to sustain conviction of armed robbery and assault with deadly weapon. United States v. J. Jones, Jr. (1975, 517 F.2d 176, 170 U.S. App. D.C. 362).

Evidence, even though resting solely upon victim's identification of defendant, was sufficient to go to jury on issue of identification of victim's assailant. K. Smith v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 343 A.2d 40).

Uncontradicted evidence that defendant grabbed pistol out of hand of complainant and, as he threw pistol to his brother, yelled at brother to kill victim is sufficient for jury to find that defendant was guilty of assault with a dangerous weapon. E. Blango v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 335 A.2d 230).

Evidence, including testimony that shotgun shells similar to those used in gun used in armed robbery were found in defendant's automobile, is sufficient to sustain convictions of armed robbery and assault with dangerous weapon. D. Borrero v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 332 A.2d 363).

Positive identification by one eyewitness and somewhat tentative identifications by two other eyewitnesses were sufficient basis for finding juvenile guilty of robbery and assault with dangerous weapon. In the Matter of W. K. (D.C. App. 1974, 323 A.2d 442).

Evidence was sufficient to sustain conviction for assault with a deadly weapon charged as separate and distinct from armed robbery offense. C. M. Dixon, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 320 A.2d 318).

While the development of direct testimony on the beating of child was less than a model of precision, the evidence as a whole was adequate to sustain jury's verdict finding defendant guilty of assault with a dangerous weapon, namely, a belt. K. Robinson v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 317 A.2d 508).

Evidence was sufficient to support convictions of first-degree burglary and of assault with a deadly weapon despite claim that, absent corroborating evidence, testimony of complaining witness alone could not support findings of guilt. United States v. R. Carmichael (1972, 469 F.2d 937, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 197).

Where evidence disclosed a single act on part of defendant directed simultaneously at two persons, so that only a single conviction for assault on two persons was supported by evidence, convictions of first-degree burglary and of one assault would be affirmed, but conviction of an additional assault would be set aside, and sentences would be vacated and case would be remanded for resentencing. Id.

Identification

Identification procedure whereby occupants of car were returned in police van to site of gunshots where witness identified defendant from five persons in van, without any assistance from police, was not unduly suggestive. G. S. Crawley v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 314 A.2d 487).

Knowledge on part of an eyewitness that persons on trial were arrested for crime may be taken into account where there is other indication of suggestivity, but mere fact that suspects are included within lineup and that witnesses know or assume this to be the case is an inescapable aspect of lineup identification procedure and does not, without more, provide reason for exclusion of pretrial and in-court identifications. United States v. C. L. Pearson (1973, 478 F.2d 659, 155 U.S. App. D.C. 455).

Pretrial and in-court identifications of defendant by eyewitness to crime were not subject to exclusion by reason of fact that investigating officer told witness at lineup that she had "done well," where there was no reason to suppose that officer's remark was more than a comforting gesture to witness, who was, quite naturally, on edge, and jury had before it testimony as to (slightly more tentative) lineup identification and was likely to credit this, which was uninfluenced by subsequent remark, far more than taken for granted in-court identification. Id.

Where there was substantial doubt as to validity of uncorroborated identification evidence, which was provided by two alleged victims in prosecution for robbery and assault with dangerous weapon and on which conviction was based, case would be remanded to permit district court to make fresh determination as to action which should be taken in interest of justice. United States v. L. Harris (1973, 475 F.2d 359, 154 U.S. App. D.C. 248).

Indictment

Proof that defendant pointed a blank or gas cartridge-type pistol at another is not at variance with indictment charging that the weapon was a "pistol," and, in any event, no prejudice to defendant exists in view of defendant's admission that he knew the nature of the weapon seized from him. E. Harris, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 333 A.2d 397).

Insanity defense

Where defendant, indicted for sodomy, assault with dangerous weapon and mayhem, neither raised defense of insanity prior to return of jury verdict of guilty nor brought to court's attention prior imprisonment for sex-related crime or attempted suicide while in prison and confinement there for psychiatric treatment, defendant had not been improperly deprived of defense of insanity during trial. E. T. Hughes v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 308 A.2d 238).

Instructions

Trial court properly instructed jury on testimony of accomplices rather than testimony of informers with respect to testimony of witness who had pled guilty to one count of indictment under which he and defendant were charged on the day before defendant's trial and who had participated in the crime with defendant. United States v. M. W. Thorne (1975, 527 F.2d 840, — U.S. App. D.C. —).

Where soon after retiring jury requested instruction on whether aiding and abetting instruction applied to armed robbery count of indictment as well as assault charge, trial court's charging jury that aiding and abetting instruction was applicable to both counts in absence of defendant was, at most, harmless error. United States v. J. Jones, Jr. (1975, 517 F.2d 176, 170 U.S. App. D.C. 362).

Giving of instruction that jury must acquit unless prosecution proved each element beyond a reasonable doubt is not plain error on ground that instruction compelled jury to find defendant guilty. R. S. Hammond v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 345 A.2d 140).

The failure of trial court to give a model identification instruction sua sponte is not reversible error, even though prosecution was based on identification of only one witness, especially in view of other instructions apprising jury of duty to find identification convincing beyond a reasonable doubt. K. Smith v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 343 A.2d 40).

Under the circumstances, trial judge did not abuse his discretion in denying requested "missing witness instruction." Id.

Promptly corrected misstatement of instruction by court to effect that no specific intent and only general intent need be found for conviction on count charging possession of a prohibited weapon was not so confusing as to prevent fair deliberation of defendant's innocence by jury which convicted him of the greater offense of assault with a dangerous weapon, the general intent crime, and reached no verdict, as it was instructed, on lesser included offense of possession of a prohibited weapon. S. M. Darden v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 342 A.2d 24).

Where police officers testified that they arrived at apartment in response to disorderly conduct complaint, that they were confronted by defendant who was kicking at the door and yelling profanities, that they placed her under arrest, which she resisted violently, that she broke away and obtained a knife, and that she advanced on the officers, requiring them to draw their guns and seek reinforcements to subdue her, and where defendant testified that she had not threatened any officer with a knife but had herself been attacked by the officers, defendant is not entitled to an instruction on self-defense. C. L. Holt v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 340 A.2d 827).

Jury instruction that if jury found beyond reasonable doubt that defendant had committed acts which constituted essential elements of crimes charged, then he must be found guilty, was equivalent to trial judge directing verdict of guilty, and was plain error. S. Watts v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 328 A.2d 770).

Even if aiding and abetting instruction was unwarranted in proceeding on charge of assault, giving of it did not necessitate reversal of defendant's conviction on assault counts, where the jury's acquittal of defendant on two counts of second degree murder indicated that it had not found defendant guilty of assault on aiding and abetting theory and there was strong evidence that defendant had committed his own assault upon such persons. United States v. G. Alexander and B. Murdock (1972, 471 F.2d 923, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 371; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 541, 409 U.S. 1044).

Jencks Act

Refusal to strike testimony of witnesses on account of prosecution's failure to preserve and produce their grand jury testimony was not error where it appeared that their testimony was not recorded due to a malfunction of a recording device, without negligence or bad faith on Government's part. D. L. Washington v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 343 A.2d 560).

Joinder

In view of fact that scene of armed robbery and assaults on January 17 was different from that of armed robbery and assault on January 11 and assaults on January 16, the victims were different, and only common factor was that in each case the offender was a man wearing a fur coat and fur hat, and that there was no evidence of a common scheme or plan embracing commission of all of the offenses, it was prejudicial error to join trial of charges relating to offenses on January 17 with trial on other counts alleging offenses on January 11 and January 16, notwithstanding Government's contention that evidence of each offense was simple and distinct so that jury could not possibly have been confused. United States v. T. E. Carter (1973, 475 F. 2d 349, 154 U.S. App. D.C. 238).

Judge's comments

In prosecution for, inter alia, carrying a dangerous weapon, where comment by the court that if there was any believable evidence in the case, it was to effect that pistol was carried outside defendants' home or place of business was sustained by uncontradicted evidence and judge explicitly charged that all matters of fact were to be determined by the jury, no harm could result to defendants, who, in any event, failed to object. United States v. T. B. Dixon (1972, 469 F. 2d 940, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 200).

Lesser included offense

Where armed assault was essential part of proof establishing armed rape, armed assault was lesser offense included within the armed rape, and assault conviction was vacated. United States v. E. Edmonds, Jr. (1975, 524 F. 2d 62, 173 U.S. App. D.C. 241).

Conviction of assault with dangerous weapon upon individual is vacated as lesser included offense of armed rape against such individual. M. Bell v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 332 A.2d 351).

Conviction of assault with dangerous weapon upon individual in connection with liquor store holdup is not vacated, where it is the only offense against such individual for which defendant was charged, despite fact that assaults against other individuals were vacated as lesser included offenses of armed robbery and armed rape against such individuals. Id.

Assault with dangerous weapon on motel clerk was lesser included offense of armed robbery of same person, and conviction of former could not stand as conviction for another offense. United States v. H. E. Lee (1974, 509 F.2d 400, 166 U.S. App. D.C. 67; cert. denied 95 S. Ct. 1451, 420 U.S. 1006).

Assaults of bank tellers with dangerous weapons were lesser included offenses of armed robberies of tellers and defendants could not be convicted of both the robberies and the assaults. United States v. E. L. Cooper (1974, 504 F. 2d 260, 164 U.S. App. D.C. 191).

Assault with dangerous weapon was lesser included offense in armed robbery offense, and additional convictions for assault with dangerous weapon would accordingly be vacated where defendant had been convicted on three armed robbery counts. United States v. S. Kearney, Jr. (1974, 498 F. 2d 61, 162 U.S. App. D.C. 110).

Where concurrent sentences imposed on each conviction for assault with a dangerous weapon were adjudged to run concurrently with burglary and armed robbery convictions, no remand for resentencing was necessary on vacation of convictions for assault with a dangerous weapon. Id.

Assault with dangerous weapon is lesser included offense of principal offense of armed robbery; accordingly, defendant could not be convicted of lesser offense in addition to greater. United States v. E. L. Inge, Jr. (1974, 494 F. 2d 1102, 161 U.S. App. D.C. 183).

Inasmuch as assault with a dangerous weapon is included in armed robbery, and defendant was convicted of both offenses, judgments and sentences for assault with a dangerous weapon were required to be vacated. United States v. J. F. Anderson (1974, 490 F. 2d 785, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 217).

It was improper to convict defendant both for assault with a dangerous weapon and armed robbery where the assault was a necessary part of the evidence needed to support the count of armed robbery. R. Taylor v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 324 A. 2d 683).

Since evidence showed that offenses arose out of separate acts no need existed to consider whether assault with a dangerous weapon was a lesser included charge of malicious disfigurement. B. F. Villines v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 320 A. 2d 313).

Counts of assault with a dangerous weapon were lesser included offenses of offenses of assault with attempt to commit robbery and armed robbery and, therefore, defendant could not be convicted of the former offenses in addition to the latter. E. Quick v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 316 A. 2d 875).

Assault with dangerous weapon was lesser included offense of armed robbery; thus, defendants could not be convicted of both three counts of armed robbery and three counts of assault with a deadly weapon and convictions of assault would be reversed. United States v. T. McKinley (1973, 485 F. 2d 1059, 158 U.S. App. D.C. 280).

Offense of assault with dangerous weapon is included in armed robbery; thus defendant should not have been sentenced to concurrent terms of five to 15 years on counts charging armed robbery and to terms of three to ten years on counts charging assault with dangerous weapon and the sentences imposed for assault with dangerous weapon must be vacated. United States v. E. C. Thomas (1973, 485 F. 2d 1012, 233 U.S. App. D.C. 158).

Assault with a dangerous weapon is a lesser included offense of assault with intent to commit robbery while armed, and thus defendant could not be convicted of the lesser as well as the greater offense. United States v. G. L. Alston (1973, 483 F. 2d 1264, 157 U.S. App. D.C. 261).

Assault with a dangerous weapon convictions were vacated as lesser included offenses in armed robbery and armed rape. United States v. R. E. Adams, Jr. (1973, 481 F. 2d 1099, 156 U.S. App. D.C. 415).

Assault with dangerous weapon is lesser included offense of assault with intent to rob while armed. United States v. W. J. Chavis, Jr. (1973, 476 F. 2d 1137, 155 U.S. App. D.C. 190).

Assault with a dangerous weapon is a lesser included offense of robbery while armed. United States v. J. Johnson (1973, 475 F. 2d 1297, 155 U.S. App. D.C. 28).

Where jury returned a verdict of guilty on each of four counts of robbery while armed involving different victims it was error to receive verdicts from the jury on the four counts of assault with a dangerous weapon, a lesser included offense, with respect to the same victims. Id.

Crime of assault with a dangerous weapon is a lesser included offense within the crime of armed robbery and where defendant was sentenced upon conviction of both crimes, sentence on crime of assault with a dangerous weapon was vacated. J. L. Skinner v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 310 A. 2d 231).

Mental capacity

Record, including testimony of a private psychiatrist who examined defendant at government expense, was sufficient to support finding that criminal acts committed by defendant (armed robbery, assault with a dangerous weapon, and carrying a dangerous weapon) were not so proximately tied to defendants mental impairment as to require his exculpation. United States v. G. A. Wilson (1972, 471 F. 2d 1072, 153 U.S. App. D.C. 104; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 1431, 410 U.S. 957).

Merger of offenses

Where, in course of armed robbery, shotgun was pointed at two distinct individuals at different times, there was no error in entering separate judgments of conviction of armed robbery and assault with dangerous weapon. D. Borrero v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 332 A.2d 363).

Where assault with dangerous weapon offense was submitted to jury on specific instruction that it could convict on assault with dangerous weapon charge only if it found that separate and apart from pointing the gun at complaining witness, the complaining witness were beaten with the gun, and jury returned verdict of guilty, assault with dangerous weapon was not a lesser included offense within the armed robbery, offenses did not merge, and punishment for both did not constitute cumulative punishment. C. M. Dixon, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 320 A. 2d 318).

Convictions of assault with a dangerous weapon merged with armed robbery convictions connected with same robbery of drugstore and would thus be set aside. United States v. T. R. Toy (1973, 482 F. 2d 741, 157 U.S. App. D.C. 152).

Where armed robberies and assaults with a dangerous weapon were committed against same persons, latter offenses merged into former, and convictions on assault charges could not stand, though a remand for resentencing was not required where defendant had been given separate sentences, and all sentences were set to run concurrently. United States v. A. Holiday (1973, 482 F. 2d 729, 157 U.S. App. D.C. 140).

A count charging assault with a dangerous weapon is merged with a count charging armed robbery. J. N. Smith v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 312 A. 2d 781).

In view of concurrent sentences imposed upon convictions for assault with intent to kill while armed and assault with a dangerous weapon, the mildness of the punishment adjudged, the trial judge's recommendation for psychiatric treatment and the necessity for conserving judicial resources, the Court of Appeals would not reach question as to whether the crime of assault with dangerous weapon merged into crime of assault with intent to kill while armed with a dangerous weapon, but would vacate the convictions on the four counts which charged assault with a dangerous weapon. United States v. J. Hill (1972, 470 F. 2d 361, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 213).

Mistrial

Refusal to declare a mistrial, on ground that disturbance which occurred outside the courtroom but in jury's presence, which involved defendant and his father and which was prompted by removal of the father for creating a disturbance in the courtroom, is not abuse of discretion where after full hearing trial judge found that incident was prompted by defendant, without provocation from prosecution, and court fully instructed jury to disregard incident and reach a verdict based solely on evidence presented in the courtroom. R. S. Hammond v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 345 A.2d 140).

Plain error

In prosecution for cruelty to a child and assault with a dangerous weapon, it was not plain error for the trial judge to read to the jury evidence of defendant's prior guilty plea to a charge of assault involving the same child. K. Robinson v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 317 A. 2d 508).

The identification of defendant's photograph by assault victim, the two lineup identifications, the composite drawing, defendant's presence in the area of the attack, the two in-court identifications of him, and the clothing recovered from his home left so small a probability that probable cause was lacking in the case that the discretion of the Court of Appeals to consider plain error would not be wisely exercised by entertaining unraised issue regarding the trial court's alleged error in not suppressing identifications flowing from photographs taken of defendant when he was allegedly taken to police station without probable cause. R. E. Adams, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 302 A. 2d 232).

Prearrest delay

Record was devoid of any indication that delay in arresting defendant, which occurred ten months after date of the offenses, was the product of any deliberate effort by police to gain an advantage, record furnished abundant evidentiary support for finding that a reasonable endeavor was made to locate defendant and, in addition, record sustained additional finding that, in any event, defendant was not harmed by the delay, in prosecution for armed robbery, assault with a dangerous weapon, and for carrying a pistol without a license. United States v. L. Parish (1972, 468 F. 2d 1129, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 72; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 1430, 410 U.S. 957).

Prejudicial error

Where defendant's guilt on charge of assault with dangerous weapon turned wholly on credibility of complainant's testimony, refusal of trial court to permit defense counsel to ask complainant with whom defendant had been living whether she was aware of another woman in defendant's life was prejudicial error. S. White v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 297 A. 2d 766).

Prosecution

Where juvenile, who had stopped at roadblock but on spying an opening swerved toward opening and approaching officer, with officer leaping to safety as vehicle brushed his trousers, was charged with, among other things, assault on a police officer and assault with a dangerous weapon, i. e., the automobile, dismissal of count charging assault on a police officer did not also require dismissal of charge of assault with a dangerous weapon. In the Matter of J. A. H. (D.C. App. 1974, 315 A. 2d 825).

The conviction of defendant for federal bank robbery by force and violence and in addition thereto for assault with a dangerous weapon under the D.C. Code permitting a maximum sentence of up to 30 years, whereas if defendant had been charged with federal crime of assault with a dangerous weapon in connection with bank robbery his maximum sentence would have been no more than 25 years, was plain error, since it permitted Government to obtain a sentence longer than the maximum authorized under highest tier of bank robbery scheme. United States v. C. L. Canty (1972, 469 F. 2d 114, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 103).

Under the sovereign doctrine a state could prosecute defendant for robbery or assault even though he had already been tried for federal bank robbery in a federal court and thus make it possible for defendant to serve longer sentence than Congress had authorized in federal statute, but doctrine had no application where the federal bank robbery statute and the D.C. Code were enacted by the same sovereign. Id.

Prosecutor's comments

Where, although issue of witness' credibility was salient, Government's evidence was strong, objection to improper argument was promptly made and statement stricken, and only one such statement was made over entire course of prosecutor's closing and rebuttal arguments, no prejudicial error occurred when prosecutor told jury that it could fairly conclude that defendant "almost appeared irrational" on stand. J. F. Hyman v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 342 A. 2d 43).

Comments of prosecutor during assault trial to the effect, inter alia, that missing witness was too scared to come and testify, that defendants were killers and were dressed like gangsters, that one defendant was a "young buck," that guilty verdict would be a matter of achievement and courage, and that presumption of innocence might not apply as much to defendants as it might to others in less serious cases did not rise to the level of substantial prejudice necessary for reversal, in light of the strength of the Government's case and correcting instructions by the trial court. R. L. Smith v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 315 A. 2d 163; cert. denied 95 S. Ct. 174, 419 U.S. 896).

Prosecutor's closing and rebuttal arguments which referred to defenses of insanity interposed by famous defendants in other cases and to actions of Hitler and Napoleon were improper and were so highly prejudicial as to require reversal. United States v. W. E. Hawkins (1973, 480 F. 2d 1151, 156 U.S. App. D.C. 259).

Where prosecutor's improper closing and rebuttal arguments were so highly prejudicial as to require reversal of conviction of defendant who relied upon insanity as a defense and was convicted of first-degree murder and assault with intent to kill while armed, judgment of conviction of codefendant, who was charged as an aider and abettor, asserted lack of intent to commit murder, and was convicted of second-degree murder, would also be nullified. Id.

Search and seizure

Where police officers proceeded to area where gunshots were heard, where they were told "they went down the street in a red car," where officers observed red car traveling without lights within three or four blocks of such location, and where they observed occupants acting as if they were hiding something, officers acted properly in stopping car and ordering occupants out of it, thereby giving one officer opportunity to be in position to obtain plain view of shotgun and pistol. G. S. Crawley v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 314 A. 2d 487).

Where police officers had reason to believe that revolver used by defendant charged with assault with a dangerous weapon might be concealed in defendant's truck and that bags of pastry and eyeglasses left behind by victims who had successfully escaped from the truck were also in the truck, warrantless search of the truck following arrest of defendant was lawful, and thus evidence seized in such search was admissible. United States v. A. E. Bowles, Jr. (D.C. App. 1973, 304 A. 2d 277).

Sentence

Imposition of consecutive sentences for assault with a dangerous weapon and carrying a dangerous weapon is proper, notwithstanding that offenses arose out of the same transaction, since offense of carrying a dangerous weapon requires proof that the weapon was unlicensed while offense of assault with a dangerous weapon does not. R. S. Hammond v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 345 A.2d 140).

Convictions arising from separate indictments handed down on same date can not be relied on to enhance punishment as third offender. D. L. Washington v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 343 A. 2d 560).

Defendant's assault on child with a dangerous weapon, namely, a belt, and his assault on the same child the following night with a dangerous weapon, namely, a pliers, were two separate offenses, and the trial court's imposition of consecutive sentences for them was within the area of its permissible discretion. K. Robinson v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 317 A. 2d 508).

Where defendant had been convicted of assault with intent to kill armed with dangerous weapon, with sentence of from three to nine years, for assault with dangerous weapon, with concurrent two to six-year sentence, and carrying pistol without license, with concurrent one-year sentence, two to six-year sentence would be vacated on appeal, without remand. United States v. E. T. Wimbush (1973, 475 F. 2d 347, 154 U.S. App. D.C. 236).

Sentence of ten years' imprisonment, and refusal to commit defendant to institution for treatment of sexual psychopathy, did not constitute cruel and unusual punishment of defendant after conviction of sodomy and assault with dangerous weapon. E. T. Hughes v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 308 A. 2d 238).

Trial judge's statement that it was almost inconceivable that youth, who had been convicted of two counts of assault with a dangerous weapon, and one count of carrying a dangerous weapon, could be handled under Federal Youth Corrections Act in view of his prior convictions of armed robbery and assault with dangerous weapon, his extensive juvenile record and fact that he had repeatedly absconded from juvenile correctional facilities constituted a sufficient affirmative on-the-record finding that youth would not benefit from treatment under the Act and trial judge's refusal to sentence youth under the Act was within his discretion. L. T. Paul v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 301 A. 2d 226).

Imposition of separate convictions and consecutive sentences for assault with dangerous weapon was improper where defendant, by single act, put in fear four different members of a group toward whom his actions were collectively directed. United States v. G. Alexander and B. Murdock (1972, 471 F. 2d 923, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 371; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 541, 409 U.S. 1044).

Separate offenses

Evidence sustained determination that assaults with dangerous weapons upon persons other than bank tellers, committed in connection with bank robbery, were separate assaults rather than a single group assault. United States v. E. L. Cooper (1974, 504 F. 2d 260, 164 U.S. App. D.C. 191).

Where by a single act or course of action a defendant has put in fear different members of a group toward which the action is collectively directed, he is guilty of but one offense and multiple convictions and consecutive sentences will be appropriate only where distinct, successive assaults have been omitted upon the individual victims. United States v. G. Alexander and B. Murdock (1972, 471 F. 2d 923, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 371; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 541, 409 U.S. 1044).

Severance

Issue of whether severance should have been granted after codefendant testified in such manner as to negate planned joint defense was not preserved for appeal, where no motion was made to trial court upon which it could have exercised its discretion to grant a severance, and where defendant did not demonstrate any prejudice occasioned by his codefendant's testimony which would justify a holding of plain error in allowing the joint trial to proceed. W. J. Edwards, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 328 A. 2d 90).

Where most delay was attributable to Government's successful interlocutory appeal on motion to suppress evidence, where there was release on recognizance and defendant's irrational actions contributed materially to delay in setting of trial date and there was no prejudice to conduct of defense, and where, after motion to suppress was resolved, there was further delay of only four to five months prior to date set by judge, with consent of counsel, for trial, there was no denial of speedy trial. United States v. M. H. Rosenbloom (1974, 511 F.2d 777, 167 U.S. App. D.C. 211).

Fifteen-month delay between arrest and trial was such as to constitute a denial of defendant's right to a speedy trial where delay was not, at all times, attributable to defendant, who suffered personal prejudice by reason of fact that he was confined throughout period, though he continually pressed his motion for release pending trial, and where personal prejudice resulting from pretrial incarceration was exacerbated by fact that defendant was a youth being confined in an adult jail and fact that defendant was especially handicapped by his social and educational background. United States v. W. H. Calloway (1974, 505 F. 2d 311, 164 U.S. App. D.C. 204).

Thirteen months' delay between arrest and trial did not deny defendants their right to speedy trial where first seven months' delay was at least partially justifiable, one defendant was incarcerated only during that portion of period between arrest and trial in which delay was justifiable and longer period that other defendant spent in pretrial detention was attributable to fact that, having been released pending trial, he violated conditions of release and was reincarcerated. United States v. E. L. Cooper (1974, 504 F. 2d 260, 164 U.S. App. D.C. 191).

Right to speedy trial of defendant, charged with armed robbery, assault with dangerous weapon, and of carrying a pistol without a license, was not impinged by nine-month delay extending from his indictment to his trial where, during the first two months defendant was still at large and police were doing their best to locate him, where defendant did not press a speedy trial right until five months after he was arrested, and where record was sufficient to sustain finding that defendant suffered no prejudice to his defense which could be attributed to the delay at the postarrest stage of the prosecution. United States v. L. Parish (1972, 468 F. 2d 1129, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 72; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 1430, 410 U.S. 957).

Verdict

In prosecution for armed robbery and for assault with a dangerous weapon, trial court did not erroneously permit jury to return a separate verdict on assault with a dangerous weapon charge, where evidence disclosed that after armed robbery of cash register of store defendant forced victim at gunpoint to walk to rear of store where she was searched and on leaving defendant warned victim about possibility of being shot if she came out before defendant got out of store. G. W. Bates v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 327 A. 2d 542).

Fact that jury acquitted defendant on charge of carrying a dangerous weapon did not require them to find defendant not guilty on charge of assault with deadly weapon. F. C. Winters v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 317 A. 2d 530).

Witnesses

Failure of trial court to admit into evidence prior inconsistent statement of a witness, after witness did not deny its truth, was error, but such error was not prejudicial where the inconsistent statement was read in whole by the witness to the jury and was used extensively by defense counsel in cross-examination. C. A. Jefferson v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 328 A. 2d 85).

Prior inconsistent statement is admissible only to impeach credibility of a witness and may not be used as affirmative proof of its contents. Id.

Evidence that defendant's sole defense witness had been charged with obstruction of justice for her alleged efforts to persuade complaining witness not to identify codefendant, her brother, should not have been admitted over objection, in prosecution for assault and armed robbery, to impeach witness, where testimony of complaining witness revealed to jury facts which were basis for charge; prejudicial effect of admission of arrest and charge outweighed probative substance. United States v. C. Maynard (1973, 476 F. 2d 1170, 155 U.S. App. D.C. 223).

Competency of mentally retarded 18-year-old prosecutrix to testify in prosecution for assault with intent to commit rape while armed, assault with a dangerous weapon and carrying a dangerous weapon, was a threshold question of law committed to the trial court's discretion; it remained for the jury, however, to assess credibility of the witness and the weight to be given her testimony. United States v. H. Benn, Jr. (1973, 476 F. 2d 1127, 155 U.S. App. D.C. 180).

§ 22-504. Assault or threatened assault in a menacing manner.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Cause for arrest

Police officer who had interviewed alleged assault victim and concluded that his complaint, to the effect that accused had pointed a gun at him and threatened to kill him, was genuine, had probable cause to believe that an armed assault had taken place and that accused had committed it, and in light of the exigent nature of the circumstances had probable cause to arrest accused without an arrest warrant. United States v. H. Simpson (D.C. App. 1975, 330 A.2d 756).

Cross-examination

In prosecution for simple assault and obstructing justice, limiting cross-examination of complaining witness on issues of his credibility and bias is not abuse of discretion. C. W. Hall v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 343 A.2d 35).

Evidence—Admissibility

In prosecution for assault and threats to do bodily harm, admission of defendant's prior conviction of manslaughter was not error, where at time prior conviction was introduced and during final instructions trial court informed jury that it should consider the conviction only in evaluating defendant's credibility. W. B. Davis v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 313 A. 2d 886).

Merger of offenses

Simple assault is not a lesser included offense of obstruction of justice and thus charge of simple assault does not merge into accused's conviction of obstruction of justice. C. W. Hall v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 343 A.2d 35).

Prosecutor's comments

Prosecutor's allusion, in simple assault case, to complainant's belief that he was coming to court for defendant's sentencing, rather than his retrial, was not necessary to an effective rebuttal of defense counsel's insinuations and was therefore improper, but, viewing the trial as a whole, including the weight of the Government's case against defendant, it could not be said that the judgment of the jury against defendant was substantially swayed by the error. F. S. Medina v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 315 A. 2d 169).

Search and seizure

Police, who had learned of armed assault committed by accused, and, who, before entering accused's apartment, heard close of squeaky door, were entitled to make an arrest and effect a limited search for weapons incident thereto, for their own safety, and .38 revolver found in stove which was readily accessible to the three people in the room was admissible against the accused, subsequently identified by the victim, even though the accused was a functional cripple and was not arrested until the pistol had been seized. United States v. H. Simpson (D.C. App. 1975, 330 A.2d 756).

§ 22-505. Assault on member of police force or fire department.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Abuse of discretion

Where action of government in regard to missing disciplinary report describing alleged assault on correctional officer for which defendant was being prosecuted did not amount to bad faith and did not rise to level of gross negligence but simply amounted to negligence, failure to apply sanction under Jencks Act (18 U.S.C. 3500) in striking testimony of correctional officer, who made report, and ordering new trial is not abuse of discretion. H. B. Johnson v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 336 A.2d 545; cert. denied 96 S. Ct. 793, 423 U.S. 1058).

Consecutive sentences

Trial court did not err in imposing consecutive sentences for separate assaults on two groups of police officers, one group of which was initially at scene and the other group of which arrived just before the shooting began. A. C. Fletcher v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 335 A.2d 248).

Construction

This section, proscribing interfering with member of police force operating in District of Columbia, proscribing assaulting district employee charged with supervision of juveniles confined in district facility located within District or elsewhere and proscribing assaulting member of fire department operating in District, contains three different "laws," within meaning of section 11-923 providing that Superior Court has jurisdiction of any criminal case under any law applicable exclusively to District; thus Superior Court has jurisdiction of prosecution for assault on police officer in District, even if that Court has no jurisdiction over prosecution for assault on supervisor of confined juvenile on ground that it is an extra-territorial offense. United States v. I. C. Thompson et ano. (D.C. App. 1975, 347 A. 2d 581).

This section making it unlawful to assault, without justifiable and excusable cause, any officer of any penal or correctional institution does not contemplate a level of conduct measurably different from simple assault. H. B. Johnson v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 298 A. 2d 516).

Elements of offense

Fact that defendant knew or should have known that complainants were police officers is an element of offense of assault on a police officer with a dangerous weapon. A. C. Fletcher v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 335 A.2d 248).

Evidence

Evidence sustained conviction for assault on police officer while armed with dangerous weapon. United States v. H. E. Lee (1974, 509 F.2d 400, 166 U.S. App. D.C. 67; cert. denied 95 S. Ct. 1451, 420 U.S. 1006).

— Admissibility

Spectrographic identification of defendant as maker of telephone call to which police officer was responding when shot was not sufficiently accepted by scientific community as a whole to form a basis for a jury's determination of guilt or innocence, and was inadmissible. United States v. R. Addison (1974, 498 F. 2d 741, 162 U.S. App. D.C. 199; aff'g 337 F. Supp. 641).

Erroneous admission of testimony based on spectrogram or so-called "voice print" analysis did not fatally infect jury's verdict and did not require a reversal, in light of overwhelming evidence of guilt. Id.

Defendant's statement to epidemiologist, after epidemiologist had assisted in subduing defendant following attack on correctional officer and in response to epidemiologist's inquiry as to why defendant had attacked officer, that defendant had nothing to lose as he was a lifer was admissible in prosecution for assault on correctional officer and of assaulting and interfering with officer. E. L. Smith v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 318 A. 2d 891).

Inferences

Evidence that defendant fired at police officers at close range before they drew their guns, knowing them to be police officers, would support inference that defendant acted with specific intent to kill. A. C. Fletcher v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 335 A.2d 248).

Instructions

Where police officers testified that they arrived at apartment in response to disorderly conduct complaint, that they were confronted by defendant who was kicking at the door and yelling profanities, that they placed her under arrest, which she resisted violently, that she broke away and obtained a knife, and that she advanced on the officers, requiring them to draw their guns and seek reinforcements to subdue her, and where defendant testified that she had not threatened any officer with a knife but had herself been attacked by the officers, defendant is not entitled to an instruction on self-defense. C. L. Holt v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 340 A.2d 827).

Jurisdiction

This section, proscribing interfering with member of police force operating in District of Columbia, proscribing assaulting district employee charged with supervision of juveniles confined in district facility located within District or elsewhere and proscribing assaulting member of fire department operating in District, contains three different "laws," within meaning of section 11-923 providing that Superior Court has jurisdiction of any criminal case under any law applicable exclusively to District; thus Superior Court has jurisdiction of prosecution for assault on police officer in District, even if that Court has no jurisdiction over prosecution for assault on supervisor of confined juvenile on ground that it is an extra-territorial offense. United States v. I. C. Thompson et ano. (D.C. App. 1975, 347 A. 2d 581).

Lesser included offense

Assault on a correctional officer was a lesser included offense of assault on a correctional officer while armed and conviction for the former could not stand in face of conviction of the latter. E. L. Smith v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 318 A. 2d 891).

Plain error

Permitting clinical psychologist to testify about a psychiatric diagnosis reached at a staff conference which he did not attend did not constitute plain error in view of fact that no attempt was made to introduce any staff conference report nor were any further references made to substance of staff conference recommendation either in direct or cross-examination and Government produced as a second witness a psychiatrist whose opinion, for which he gave reasons, also was that defendant was not mentally ill. E. L. Smith v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 318 A. 2d 891).

In prosecution for carrying a dangerous weapon, assaulting a police officer, and unlawful possession of narcotic drug, sustaining as valid Fifth Amendment privilege claimed by defense witness called to corroborate testimony of defendant, who did not claim infringement of his own Fifth Amendment privilege against self-incrimination, was not plain error, on theory that he was denied a fair trial, where there was no pretense the record would support an inference of prosecutorial misconduct or that Government's case was buttressed by the witness' exercise of the privilege against self-incrimination, and where witness was called by defense counsel with full prior knowledge that privilege would be invoked. R. W. Mack v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 310 A. 2d 234).

Trial court did not err in refusing to give curative instruction after prosecutor suggested, in closing argument, that defendant may have carried his pistol prior to the incident in question with intent of using it to commit a crime since that statement was a proper rebuttal to defense counsel's argument that defendant had been carrying the gun to defend himself and that the government had failed to show any motive for the shooting and, in addition, court subsequently instructed jury that arguments of counsel are not evidence. A. C. Fletcher v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 335 A.2d 248).

Any error in allowing government to comment, in closing argument, on failure of the defendant to call one of his companions, who was present at scene, is harmless, notwithstanding that court had denied government's request for a missing witness instruction, where challenged remarks were limited to observation that such individual had not testified and did not directly urge jury to draw from that fact an adverse inference and defendant had previously explained that he had not attempted to secure such witness because he did not believe that the witness would be willing to incriminate himself. Id.

Refusal to declare a mistrial after prosecuting attorney stated in his summation that assaulting a correctional officer was basically no different from regular assault did not constitute error. H. B. Johnson v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 298 A. 2d 516).

Speedy trial

Where most delay was attributable to Government's successful interlocutory appeal on motion to suppress evidence, where there was release on recognizance and defendant's irrational actions contributed materially to delay in setting of trial date and there was no prejudice to conduct of defense, and where, after motion to suppress was resolved, there was further delay of only four to five months prior to date set by judge, with consent of counsel, for trial, there was no denial of speedy trial. United States v. M. H. Rosenbloom (1974, 511 F.2d 777, 167 U.S. App. D.C. 211).

§ 22-506. Mayhem or maliciously disfiguring.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Evidence—Admissibility

Golf club used in beatings was properly admitted into evidence in prosecution for, inter alia, malicious disfigurement, where complainant, who shared apartment with defendant, consented to warrantless search of the apartment. B. F. Villines v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 320 A. 2d 313).

Admitting colored photographs of complainant showing scars on upper portion of her body was not an abuse of discretion, in prosecution for, inter alia, assault with a dangerous weapon and malicious disfigurement, where photographs were not inflammatory and were clearly probative of the condition of complainant's body and, thus, were material on issue of malicious disfigurement. Id.

Insanity defense

Where defendant, indicated for sodomy, assault with dangerous weapon and mayhem, neither raised defense of insanity prior to return of jury verdict of guilty nor brought to court's attention prior imprisonment for sex-related crime or attempted suicide while in prison and confinement there for psychiatric treatment, defendant had not been improperly deprived of defense of insanity during trial. E. T. Hughes v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 308 A. 2d 238).

Lesser included offense

Since evidence showed that offenses arose out of separate acts no need existed to consider whether assault with a dangerous weapon was a lesser included charge of malicious disfigurement. B. F. Villines v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 320 A. 2d 313).

§ 22-507. Threats to do bodily harm.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Construction

This section making it unlawful for one to threaten to do bodily harm does not require that threats be communicated directly to the threatened individual. J. N. Gurley v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 308 A. 2d 785).

Evidence—Admissibility

In prosecution for assault and threats to do bodily harm, admission of defendant's prior conviction of manslaughter was not error, where at time prior conviction was introduced and during final instructions trial court informed jury that it should consider the conviction only in evaluating defendant's credibility. W. B. Davis v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 313 A. 2d 886).

— Sufficiency

Evidence was sufficient to sustain conviction for threatening to do bodily harm of defendant whose threats were overheard by police officer and not by the intended victim. J. N. Gurley v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 308 A. 2d 785).

Chapter 7.—BRIBERY—OBSTRUCTING JUSTICE

§ 22-701. Definition and penalty.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Search and seizure

Where defendant asserted on redirect examination that he was no longer addicted to narcotic drugs and had not possessed such drugs during month of his arrest, testimony regarding packages of cocaine obtained from defendant at time of his arrest by means of illegal seizure is admissible for purposes of impeachment. L. A. Cowan v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 331 A.2d 323).

§ 22-702. Offering or receiving money, property, or valuable consideration to procure office or promotion from District of Columbia Commissioners.

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

§ 22-703. Obstructing justice.

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Cross-examination

In prosecution for simple assault and obstructing justice, limiting cross-examination of complaining witness on issues of his credibility and bias is not abuse of discretion. C. W. Hall v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 343 A.2d 35).

Elements of offense

It is not necessary to establish that an assault has been committed in order to prove a violation of this section, proscribing one from corruptly, by threats or force, endeavoring to influence, intimidate or impede any witness in the discharge of his duties; acts such as blackmail and unfulfilled threats of violence can support an obstruction of justice charge. C. W. Hall v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 343 A.2d 35).

Estoppel

After accused was acquitted of a threat to do bodily harm and bribery and jury "hung" on charge of obstruction of justice, Government is not collaterally estopped from retrying accused on charge of obstruction of justice on theory that verdict of not guilty on "threats" charge determined the issue with respect to identical threats alleged in obstruction of justice charge. United States v. L. M. Smith (D.C. App. 1975, 337 A.2d 499).

Evidence—Sufficiency

Evidence in prosecution for obstructing justice and simple assault is sufficient to support a finding that alleged assault was intended to prevent further cooperation of the complaining witness in a criminal case. C. W. Hall v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 343 A.2d 35).

Indictment

Indictment, which alleged, inter alia, that accused "corruptly endeavored * * * to influence, intimidate and impede" specified victim "in the discharge of his duties as a witness," implies, with sufficient clarity, knowledge that victim was a witness and in intent to impede witness in furtherance of his duties and such indictment sufficiently charges offense of obstruction of justice. C. W. Hall v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 343 A.2d 35).

Merger of offenses

Simple assault is not a lesser included offense of obstruction of justice and thus charge of simple assault does not merge into accused's conviction of obstruction of justice. C. W. Hall v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 343 A.2d 35).

Chapter 9.—DOMESTIC RELATIONS

§ 22-901. Cruelty to children.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Abuse of discretion

In prosecution of defendant on charges of cruelty to a child and assault with a dangerous weapon, namely, a belt, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in permitting the government to introduce, during its direct case, evidence of defendant's prior conviction of having assaulted the same child, where intent was placed clearly in issue by the contention in defendant's opening statement that an assault episode, involving the child's head being struck by a pliers tossed by defendant, was accidental. K. Robinson v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 317 A. 2d 508).

Elements of offense

In prosecution on charges of cruelty to child and assault with a dangerous weapon, namely, a belt, intent was an essential element of the offenses and hence had to be proved by the Government beyond a reasonable doubt. K. Robinson v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 317 A.2d 508).

Evidence—Admissibility

In prosecution on charges of cruelty to a child and assault with a dangerous weapon, prior assault by defendant on the same child, which occurred some 17 months earlier, was not too remote to preclude its receipt in evidence on the question of intent. K. Robinson v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 317 A. 2d 508).

Evidence as to defendant's prior assault on the same child unquestionably was relevant as to whether he had the requisite intent to support verdicts finding him guilty of the charges of cruelty to a child and assault with a dangerous weapon, namely, a belt. Id.

In prosecution for murder, deceased's prior conviction based on plea of guilty to an indictment that charged that deceased did "beat, abuse and otherwise willfully maltreat" his six-year-old son was admissible to prove deceased's violent character and court's barring of the evidence was improper. United States v. J. H. Burks (1972, 470 F. 2d 432, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 284).

—Sufficiency

Defendant's action in holding child under shower in such a manner as to cause child to fight for air, and in repeatedly slapping and kicking the child after removing him from the shower, supported verdict of guilty on charge of cruelty to a child, irrespective of fact that child was also beaten with a belt and defendant was also convicted of assault with a dangerous weapon. K. Robinson v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 317 A. 2d 508).

Instructions

Evidence required to warrant "intoxication-defense" instruction must reveal such a degree of complete drunkenness that a person is incapable of forming the necessary intent essential to commission of crime charged. C. G. Smith, Sr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 309 A. 2d 58).

Where only evidence as to defendant's alleged intoxication came from defendant who testified that although he "had been drinking" he was not "dead drunk," evidence failed to warrant giving of requested instruction on issue of intoxication as bearing upon specific intent to commit charged offense of cruelty to children. Id.

Plain error

In prosecution for cruelty to a child and assault with a dangerous weapon, it was not plain error for the trial judge to read to the jury evidence of defendant's prior guilty plea to a charge of assault involving the same child. K. Robinson v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 317 A. 2d 508).

Chapter 11.—DISORDERLY CONDUCT

§ 22-1107. Unlawful assembly—Profane and indecent language.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Arrest—Probable cause

Arrests, during mass demonstrations, of persons predicated solely on the profanity of the arrestee, without a showing of likelihood of inciting violence, were without probable cause and thus unlawful. Washington Mobilization Committee et al. v. M. J. Cullinane et al. (1975, 400 F. Supp. 186).

Police officer who, while walking his beat in an area considered high in narcotic traffic, noticed defendant and two other young men standing in the shadows of a building, who observed that their hands were "passing and changing" among them, who crossed the street to investigate whereupon defendant began to walk away rapidly, who called out "I would like to talk with you a minute," in response to which defendant, within the earshot of pedestrians, shouted a four-letter expletive and ran, had probable cause to arrest defendant for disorderly conduct; thus, the ensuing search for weapons incident to the arrest, which search yielded a bag of heroin, was likewise lawful. W. Von Sleichter v. United States (1972, 472 F. 2d 1244, 153 U.S. App. D.C. 169; aff'g 267 A. 2d 336; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 555, 409 U.S. 1063).

Construction

Disorderly conduct statute is not applicable for mere use of indecent or obscene words, but only if the language is, under contemporary community standards, so grossly offensive to members of the public who actually overhear it as to amount to a nuisance. W. Von Sleichter v. United States (1972, 472 F. 2d 1244, 153 U.S. App. D.C. 169; aff'g 267 A. 2d 336; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 555, 409 U.S. 1063).

Elements of offense

Simply talking back to a policeman does not justify an arrest for disorderly conduct. W. Von Sleichter v. United States (1972, 472 F. 2d 1244, 153 U.S. App. D.C. 169; aff'g 267 A. 2d 336; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 555, 409 U.S. 1063).

Search and seizure

While disorderly conduct is a crime without physical evidence or fruits, a policeman apprehending the possibility of danger may conduct a search incident to a lawful arrest for disorderly conduct for the purpose of discovering and removing weapons, and may command the person arrested to place his hands where they can be seen. W. Von Sleichter v. United States (1972, 472 F. 2d 1244, 153 U.S. App. D.C. 169; aff'g 267 A. 2d 336; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 555, 409 U.S. 1063).

§ 22-1112. Lewd, indecent, or obscene acts.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Arrest—Notification of employer

Although trial court properly dismissed informations charging violations of statute making it unlawful to commit a lewd, obscene and indecent act on theory that statute was unconstitutionally vague, order purporting to enjoin police department from notifying employers of fact of arrest of an employee for other sex offenses until "formal charges" had been filed, when there was no person before the court who had sustained a direct injury as a result of the notification policy, was an abuse of discretion. District of Columbia v. H. Walters et al. (D.C. App. 1974, 319 A. 2d 332; cert. denied 95 S. Ct. 650, 419 U.S. 1065).

Constitutionality

"Sexual proposal" clause of this section providing that it shall be unlawful for any person to make any lewd, obscene, or indecent sexual proposal may be fairly construed to proscribe only proposals to commit sodomy, indecent exposure, or, in case of sexual proposals addressed to children, to perform some sexual act, and as so construed is not so vague as to amount to deprivation of due process of law. District of Columbia v. A. Garcia (D.C. App. 1975, 335 A.2d 217).

Advocacy of sodomy as socially beneficial, and solicitation to commit sodomy, present entirely distinguishable threshold questions in terms of First Amendment freedom of speech; the latter is not protected speech. Id.

This section is not unconstitutional as applied to proposals to commit consensual sexual acts in private where, while sexual proposal made by defendant to officer was made in apparent privacy of parked automobile, it is clear from stipulated facts in the record that officer was not a "consenting person." Id.

Statute making it an offense to commit a lewd, obscene and indecent act is unconstitutionally vague in failing to give clear notice of what conduct is forbidden and in investing police with excessive discretion to decide, after the fact, who has violated the law, and statute could not be sustained on theory that police department practice supported construction of statute to mean the deliberate touching in public of one's own or another's genitals for purpose of sexual arousal or on theory that the indelicacy of the subject matter excused the failure to spell out precisely the acts covered. District of Columbia v. H. Walters et al. (D.C. App. 1974, 319 A. 2d 332; cert. denied 95 S. Ct. 650, 419 U.S. 1065).

Statute making it unlawful to commit a lewd, obscene and indecent act was unconstitutionally vague as applied to defendants who were arrested inside a commercial establishment "engaging in acts of mutual masturbation." Id.

Construction

Of the various forms of sexual conduct prohibited by statute, such as adultery, indecent exposure, incest, fornication, seduction, indecent liberties with children, and sodomy, only sodomy, indecent exposure, and indecent sexual acts with children can reasonably be deemed "lewd, obscene or indecent," within meaning of this section, with the result that "sexual proposal" clause of this section can be fairly construed to prohibit only proposals to commit sodomy, indecent exposure, or in the case of sexual proposals with children, to perform some sexual act. District of Columbia v. A. Garcia (D.C. App. 1975, 335 A.2d 217).

Elements of offense

Words used in cases under this section may or may not be obscene in themselves; what matters is that sexual acts proposed are lewd, obscene or indecent and lawfully prohibited by statute, not the character of the particular words in which the proposal is framed. District of Columbia v. A. Garcia (D.C. App. 1975, 335 A.2d 217).

Trial

Where reviewing court was unable to conduct meaningful review of the record because of the frequency and manner of the trial court's intrusions into the interrogation of the witnesses in nonjury trial, the trial did not meet minimum standards for the administration of criminal justice and conviction would not be permitted to stand. F. L. Shannon v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 319 A. 2d 135).

§ 22-1115. Interference with foreign diplomatic and consular offices, officers, and property.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Construction

Second, third and fourth prohibitions of this section come into play only where there is a display of a flag, banner, placard, or device designed or adapted to produce one or more of the several consequences specified in those provisions; these demonstrative elements are essential, and speech alone is not prohibited. S. Zaimi v. United States (1973, 476 F. 2d 511, 155 U.S. App. D.C. 66; rev'g 261 A. 2d 233).

Evidence—Sufficiency

Defendant, who shouted inter alia, that Shah of Iran had come to Washington to purchase bombs to suppress people of Iran, could not be properly convicted of violating statute making it unlawful to bring into public disrepute any officer of any foreign government within 500 feet of any building used or occupied by foreign government or its representatives for official purposes, where there was no congregating, and where banner which defendant at one time carried was never displayed. S. Zaimi v. United States (1973, 476 F. 2d 511, 155 U.S. App. D.C. 66; rev'g 261 A. 2d 233).

Offenses

Under this section making it unlawful to bring into public disrepute any officer of any foreign government within 500 feet of any building used or occupied by foreign government or its representatives for official purposes, an offense is not committed simply by utterances unaccompanied by a congregating or a display of a flag, banner, placard, or other device which is designed or adapted to accomplish an end which the section undertakes to forbid. S. Zaimi v. United States (1973, 476 F. 2d 511, 155 U.S. App. D.C. 66; rev'g 261 A. 2d 233).

§ 22-1121. Disorderly conduct—Generally.NOTES TO DECISIONS*Construction

When this section is construed to prohibit police from ordering persons in a demonstration to move on unless a breach of the peace is threatened or intended and so as to require an officer to consider the presence of a substantial risk of violence in determining whether a breach of the peace has occurred or will occur, it may be constitutionally enforced against persons arrested in demonstrations. Washington Mobilization Committee et al. v. M. J. Cullinane et al. (1975, 400 F.Supp. 186).

Enforcement

Police department's practice of improperly using police lines and sweeps and invocation of failure-to-move-on provision of this section in a manner which maximized chance of arresting persons who were innocent of any wrongdoing did not constitute the least restrictive means available to accomplish limited objective of regulating the demonstrations and are thus improper. Washington Mobilization Committee et al. v. M. J. Cullinane et al. (1975, 400 F.Supp. 186).

§ 22-1122. Rioting or inciting to riot—Penalties.NOTES TO DECISIONS*Construction

With the exception of requirement that five persons participate, this section's prohibition against riot or inciting to riot is intended to subsume all aspects of the common-law crime. United States v. J. Bridgeman (1975, 523 F.2d 1099, 173 U.S. App. D.C. 150; cert. denied 96 S. Ct. 1743, 1744, —U.S. —).

This section is sufficiently comprehensive to cover disturbance which occurred at District of Columbia jail when inmates attempted to escape and held certain persons hostage and attacked and beat them. Id.

"Riot" is a breach of the peace which causes public terror and which is committed by an unlawful assembly of the stated number of persons, in the case of the District of Columbia, five. Id.

It is a "breach of the peace" when acts or threats of violence cause consternation and alarm and thus disturb the tranquility of the citizens or of a community, threatening their security and invading the protection which the law affords to every citizen. Id.

Elements of offense

Location of a disturbance is immaterial to the determination of whether it fits the statutory definition of riot; riot may take place in a penitentiary or in a military camp. United States v. J. Bridgeman (1975, 523 F.2d 1099, 173 U.S. App. D.C. 150; cert. denied 96 S. Ct. 1743, 1744, —U.S. —).

Terror inflicted by rioting inmates on director of corrections department whom they held hostage and whom they continually beat and assaulted, to the point where he, at one time, asked them to kill him rather than to continue to torture him, satisfied "public disturbance" requirements of this section. Id.

Evidence—Admissibility

Since evidence that homosexual rapes were perpetrated by rioting inmates on hostages was indispensable in proving allegation of serious bodily harm for purpose of this section, testimony concerning sexual assaults on one of the hostages was properly admitted over objections that prejudicial effect outweighed its probative value; evidence was admissible although government also alleged that the riot in question had resulted in property damage and section refers to riot involving property damage or serious bodily harm in the alternative. United States v. J. Bridgeman (1975, 523 F.2d 1099, 173 U.S. App. D.C. 150; cert. denied 96 S. Ct. 1743, 1744, —U.S. —).

— Sufficiency

Disturbance at District of Columbia jail in which several inmates attempted to escape and in which numerous persons were held hostage, in which many of the hostages were beaten and sexually assaulted, which resulted in media coverage with several hundred members of the public congregated outside, forcing the police to surround the jail and block the streets around it, involved sufficient "public terror" to constitute violation of this section. United States v. J. Bridgeman (1975, 523 F.2d 1099, 173 U.S. App. D.C. 150; cert. denied 96 S. Ct. 1743, 1744, —U.S. —).

Testimony by prison guards that they were locked in a cell and held as hostages, that defendant frequently checked the cell where the guards were confined, that he told the guards that he "had nothing to lose by going out looking," that defendant separated himself from a group of inmates who did not want to escape immediately before rebellious inmates clustered for breakout attempt, and that defendant thereafter came by the cell many times armed with a short piece of steel with a sharp end and threatened the hostages was sufficient to sustain defendant's convictions for attempted escape, armed kidnapping, robbery, and riot. Id.

Where defendant removed automobiles, which either had valid license tags or were virtually undamaged and could not therefore have reasonably have been regarded as abandoned, from parking lot under authorization by property managers, who did not have authority to contract with defendant for removal of such vehicles, defendant had no right to tow away such automobiles and thus was properly found guilty of taking property without right. L. R. Fogle, Sr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 336 A.2d 833).

Chapter 14.—FORGERY—FRAUDS§ 22-1401. Forgery.*NOTES TO DECISIONS*Cross-examination

Defendant charged with uttering forged bank checks was entitled to cross-examine principal government witness to determine whether on plea of guilty to same charge witness had entered into agreement with Government for favorable recommendation in regard to his sentence in exchange for his testimony. C. E. McCoy v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 301 A. 2d 218).

Evidence—Admissibility

Codefendant's statement to arresting officer, to effect that defendant had given codefendant check in question, was admissible in uttering prosecution in which codefendant testified and affirmed statement and was subjected to cross-examination. J. Q. Ellsworth v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 300 A. 2d 456).

Evidence that codefendant had told arresting officer that defendant had given codefendant check in question was not hearsay in uttering prosecution, where used not to prove truth of matter asserted but to corroborate codefendant's testimony and rebut inference of recent fabrication, and defendant was not entitled to instruction that statement could be used only in determining codefendant's guilt, although defendant would have been entitled to cautionary instruction limiting use of evidence to corroboration and rebutting inference. Id.

— Sufficiency

Evidence that defendant, owner of a detective agency, gave employees forged special police officer commissions, and that detective agency received more income from its customers because of use of such commissions, was sufficient to justify submitting to jury counts accusing defendant of forgery. J. D. Payton, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 305 A. 2d 512).

Evidence, in prosecution for forging or uttering a forged document, that credit card taken from robbery victim was used to procure gasoline and services from filling stations, that automobile license recorded on sales slips coincided with registration of defendant's car and that it was highly probable that handwriting on the slips was that of defendant made admissible case. H. M. Long v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 298 A. 2d 213).

Fair trial

Where Government's case in prosecution for forgery, uttering and receiving stolen property rested on documents and unchallenged identification of accused, seven-month nondeliberate delay between date of such offenses and accused's arrest did not deprive accused of fair trial in violation of due process, notwithstanding contentions that if accused had been charged more promptly, he might have remembered what he was doing when he was accused of being in certain shop and could have located "former marine buddy" who assertedly accompanied accused to a second shop. G. Hurt v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 314 A. 2d 489).

Indictment

Indictment charging defendant with uttering forged checks was fatally defective for failure to allege that defendant had knowledge that checks were forged. D. Rosser v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 307 A. 2d 752).

Instructions

Where no evidence was adduced as to identity of forger, court erred in giving aiding and abetting instruction. J. D. Payton, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 305 A. 2d 512).

Joinder

Joinder of receiving stolen property count with forgery and uttering counts was not prejudicial misjoinder where all counts related to offenses at certain shop, where evidence on all counts was sufficient for jury and where, though evidence was elicited as to accused's use of stolen credit card at another shop, such evidence was probative as corroborative of handwriting evidence and limiting instruction was given. G. Hurt v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 314 A. 2d 489).

Sentence

When the trial court imposes adult punishment on a youth offender the record (1) must show that the sentencing judge was aware of defendant's eligibility for Youth Act treatment before imposing adult sentence and (2) must contain an explicit and reasoned determination that defendant would not derive rehabilitative benefit from Youth Act treatment. C. D. Small v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 304 A. 2d 641).

Sentence of youthful offender to term of imprisonment on conviction of forgery was required to be vacated and case remanded for resentencing where explicit and reasoned determination that defendant would not derive benefit from Youth Act treatment was absent from the record. Id.

§ 22-1411. Fraudulent advertising.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Construction

This section making unlawful the publication of false advertising does not punish only a course of conduct but punishes each publication of a false advertisement. J. Green et ano. v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 312 A. 2d 788; cert. denied 95 S. Ct. 45, 419 U.S. 827).

Evidence—Sufficiency

Evidence was sufficient to support finding in prosecution for publishing fraudulent advertising about sewing machines for sale that defendant who admitted he was in charge of advertising for sewing machines caused fraudulent advertising to be inserted in newspaper. J. Green et ano. v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 312 A. 2d 788; cert. denied 95 S. Ct. 45, 419 U.S. 827).

Separate offense

Each daily publication of fraudulent advertising about sewing machines for sale in newspaper during 60-day period was properly treated as a separate offense of publishing fraudulent advertising. J. Green et ano. v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 312 A. 2d 788; cert. denied 95 S. Ct. 45, 419 U.S. 827).

§ 22-1412. Prosecution under section 22-1411.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Jurisdiction

Superior Court has jurisdiction over prosecution of defendant publishing fraudulent advertising in newspaper. J. Green et ano. v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 312 A. 2d 788; cert. denied 95 S. Ct. 45, 419 U.S. 827).

Prosecution

Proceeding by way of indictment charging defendant with 60 counts of publishing fraudulent advertising was not error. J. Green et ano. v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 312 A. 2d 788; cert. denied 95 S. Ct. 45, 419 U.S. 827).

§ 22-1413. Penalty under section 22-1411.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Sentence

Sentence provided for in written judgment finding defendant guilty of 60 counts of publishing fraudulent advertising was not invalid because trial court in its oral pronouncement of sentence did not use words "for each" count, where court did state orally "all counts to run consecutively." J. Green et ano. v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 312 A. 2d 788; cert. denied 95 S. Ct. 45, 419 U.S. 827).

Chapter 15.—GAMBLING

§ 22-1501. Lotteries—Promotion—Sale or possession of tickets.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Evidence—Sufficiency

Evidence that defendant and others had been observed going from stores to parked automobile and handing small pieces of white paper and money to occupant of automobile, that pieces of paper were recognized by officer as "numbers slips," that paper bag which defendant had placed behind trash can was recovered and found to contain numbers slips and that numbers slips, gambling paraphernalia and money were recovered from parked automobile is sufficient to sustain convictions of being concerned in a lottery and of possession of lottery tickets. United States v. F. E. Loundmannz (1972, 472 F. 2d 1376, 153 U.S. App. D.C. 301; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 1431, 410 U.S. 957).

Probable cause for arrest

Where one police officer, through binoculars, observed defendant exiting from stores, walking to automobile and handing small pieces of white paper and money to occupant and other persons carrying on same type of activity in vicinity and then went to within three to five feet of parked automobile and observed several of the other persons pass money and slips which he recognized as "numbers slips" to occupant of automobile, there was probable cause for arrest of defendant pursuant to radio orders given to arresting officers by officer who had observed defendant and the other persons. United States v. F. E. Loundmannz (1972, 472 F. 2d 1376, 153 U.S. App. D.C. 301; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 1431, 410 U.S. 957).

§ 22-1502. Possession of lottery or policy tickets.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Evidence—Sufficiency

Evidence that defendant and others had been observed going from stores to parked automobile and handing small pieces of white paper and money to occupant of automobile, that pieces of paper were recognized by officer as "numbers slips," that paper bag which defendant had placed behind trash can was recovered and found to contain numbers slips and that numbers slips, gambling paraphernalia and money were recovered from parked automobile is sufficient to sustain convictions of being concerned in a lottery and of possession of lottery tickets.

United States v. F. E. Loundmannz (1972, 472 F. 2d 1376, 153 U.S. App. D.C. 301; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 1431, 410 U.S. 957).

§ 22-1505. Gambling premises—Definition—Prohibition against maintaining—Forfeiture—Liens—Deposit of moneys in Treasury—Penalty—Subsequent offenses.

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Evidence—Sufficiency

Evidence not objected to was sufficient to support finding that money seized in execution of search warrant was the product of an illegal activity. E. A. Short v. District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1973, 300 A. 2d 450).

Forfeiture—Hearing

Fact that in preliminary hearing stage a judge of the District of Columbia Court of General Sessions had discharged defendant on basis of suppressibility of evidence due to unlawful execution of search warrant did not foreclose District of Columbia from a hearing in libel action aimed at property seized during execution of the warrant inasmuch as only legal issue before judge at preliminary hearing was question of probable cause to hold defendant for action of grand jury and preliminary hearing judge was not competent to decide question of admissibility of seized evidence. District of Columbia v. C. Ray, Jr. (D.C. App. 1973, 305 A. 2d 531).

Determination of federal district court, on motion to suppress in prior criminal action, that search warrant was illegally executed did not foreclose District of Columbia from a hearing on legality of the seizure in libel action aimed at money and equipment seized during execution of the search warrant; rather, the Congressional mandate that the District of Columbia should have status in libel action precluded Court of the District from fashioning such a quasi-collateral estoppel rule. Id.

Trial by jury

Claimant of property, which was not per se unlawful and which was sought to be forfeited pursuant to statute authorizing forfeiture of property used or to be used in gambling enterprise, was entitled to trial by jury to decide issue whether property was illegally employed. W. B. Carithers v. District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1974, 326 A. 2d 798).

§ 22-1506. Three-card monte and confidence games.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Construction

"Three-card monte" statute does not apply to commission of classic "short con" game known as "pigeon drop." J. Pender v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 310 A. 2d 252).

Three-card monte statute can not be applied for purpose of prosecuting the obtaining of money by trick. J. A. Bond v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 310 A. 2d 221).

Conduct of defendant, in two-man scheme procuring money from victim to place in envelope, with subsequent substitution of envelope for another containing newspaper clippings, was not violative of this section prescribing confidence game known as "three-card monte" and any other such games or swindles. T. Mozelle v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 310 A. 2d 213).

Since the thrust of this section prescribing penalty for practicing the confidence game known as three-card monte "or any other confidence game, play, or practice" is against gambling, the doctrine of ejusdem generis is controlling and the general language "any other confidence game, play, or practice" must be limited in application to gambling activities similar to "three-card monte." United States v. D. L. Brown et ano. (D.C. App. 1973, 309 A. 2d 256).

Under the doctrine of "ejusdem generis," where general words follow the enumeration of specific classes of persons or things, the general words will be construed as applicable only to the persons or things of the same general nature or class as those enumerated. Id.

Elements of offense

The elements of the crime of "confidence game" are (1) an intentional false representation to the victim as to some present fact, (2) knowing it to be false, (3) with intent that the victim rely on the representation, (4) the representation being made to obtain the victim's confidence and thereafter his money and property, (5) which confidence is then abused by defendant. United States v. D. L. Brown et ano. (D.C. App. 1973, 309 A. 2d 256).

Indictment

Indictments charging that defendants practice a confidence game and swindle the nature of which was to persuade victim to entrust money to defendants, which money defendants allegedly intended to fraudulently convert to their own use, did not sufficiently state the elements of the offense called the "confidence game or swindle known as three-card monte." United States v. D. L. Brown et ano. (D.C. App. 1973, 309 A. 2d 256).

Prosecution

Though denominated a misdemeanor by this section, prescribed penalty of up to five years imprisonment made offense of "three-card monte and confidence games" prosecutable only by indictment. United States v. D. L. Brown et ano. (D.C. App. 1973, 309 A. 2d 256).

Since the "three-card monte" statute deals with gambling, it is not a proper vehicle for prosecuting other forms of fraud or deceit. Id.

§ 22-1510. Penalty for bucketing or keeping bucket-shop.

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

§ 22-1515. Presence in illegal establishments.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Search and seizure

Where on executing warrant authorizing search of after-hours club or bar for a "gaming table and other related gambling paraphernalia," police officers knocked twice and announced they were police officers with a search warrant, after hearing someone run away from the door, officers waited approximately 30 seconds and then forced door open and from previous observations police had probable cause to believe that extensive gambling was being carried on, police had sufficient grounds to search the individuals present and tinfoil packet found on in-depth search of an occupant was properly seized and would be admissible in prosecution for possession of heroin; officers had reasonable cause to believe that occupants possessed, concealed and were about to remove or destroy evidence for which they had a search warrant. United States v. W. Miller (D.C. App. 1972, 298 A. 2d 34).

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Mooring

Mooring barge lengthwise under span of highway bridge over Potomac river so that it occupied 93 feet of a 133-foot wide passage violated Harbor Regulation of the District of Columbia Code requiring that moored vessel be secured so as to keep long axis of vessel parallel with that of the channel. E. S. Petersen et al. v. Head Construction Company (1973, 367 F. Supp. 1072).

Chapter 18.—BURGLARY

- § 22-1801. Burglary—Penalties.

CROSS REFERENCE

Unlawful entry, see § 22-3102.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Adequate assistance of counsel

Where during 45-day interval between defendant's arrest and his rearrest he was free on his own recognition and in a position to assist counsel in locating necessary witnesses, where after his rearrest he remained free on bond until his arraignment approximately a month later, and where there was no reasonable explanation of counsel's failure to seek defendant's assistance in finding defense witnesses during this period, trial judge's failure to comply with mandate of the Court of Appeals with respect to amount of bond did not deprive defendant of effective assistance of counsel. M. A. Hampton v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 340 A.2d 813).

It is not denial of effective assistance of counsel for defendant's trial counsel to make a conscientious decision not to put on alibi testimony which, after investigation, he is convinced would be perjured. J. Herbert, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 340 A.2d 802).

Appeal and error

Failure to give standard instruction on identification in prosecution for burglary was not prejudicial error where identification was not a telling issue. R. Massey v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 320 A. 2d 296).

Consent to entry

Even if entry against will of occupants was required for first-degree burglary in District of Columbia, there was vitiation of consent and thus entry against will of occupants, where consent to enter was obtained by use of pretense, subterfuge, misrepresentation and concealment. United States v. S. Kearney, Jr. (1974, 498 F. 2d 61, 162 U.S. App. D.C. 110).

Construction

Common-law crime of burglary has been replaced by statutory crime, denominated first-degree burglary, in the District of Columbia, and the common-law crime no longer exists. United States v. S. Kearney, Jr. (1974, 498 F. 2d 61, 162 U.S. App. D.C. 110).

Convictions—Mutually exclusive

Convictions of second defendant for burglary and grand larceny were mutually exclusive with conviction for receiving stolen property and bringing it into the District of Columbia, and vacating the burglary and larceny convictions which carried longer sentences cured any prejudice which resulted from the failure to properly instruct. United States v. M. Lemonakis (1973, 485 F. 2d 941, 158 U.S. App. D.C. 162; cert. denied 94 S. Ct. 1586, 1587, 415 U.S. 989).

Cross-examination

Refusal, in prosecution for felony-murder, first-degree murder, armed robbery, robbery and second-degree burglary, to permit cross-examination of accomplice, who testified for government and whose counsel had been informed that government would be willing, with regard to unrelated narcotics and robbery charges against accomplice, to accept plea of guilty to one misdemeanor, as to whether government had made any disposition of such unrelated charges was reversible error when considered in conjunction with other errors. United States v. I. E. Leonard (1974, 494 F. 2d 955, 161 U.S. App. D.C. 36).

Defendant's absence during trial

Defense counsel's tactical decision not to let complainant see defendant before trial at suppression hearing is binding upon defendant and waiver of his presence at hearing does not constitute reversible error. A. L. Fludd v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 336 A.2d 539).

Defenses

Under this section defining burglary as entry without breaking with intent to commit any criminal offense, consent to enter is not defense where one is shown to have entered with the requisite criminal intent. United States v. S. Kearney, Jr. (1974, 498 F. 2d 61, 162 U.S. App. D.C. 110).

Discovery

With the exception of records of impeachable convictions, the criminal records and records of arrests of government witnesses were not discoverable and the suppression of the testimony of government witnesses, as sanction for disobedience of pretrial discovery order, was in excess of trial court's authority. United States v. W. C. Engram et ano. (D.C. App. 1975, 337 A.2d 488; cert. denied 96 S. Ct. 793, 423 U.S. 1058).

Double jeopardy

Where trial court, acting on good faith but erroneous belief that defendant had been entitled to certain information long before trial, first suggested continuance, which was declined by defendant, and then unsuccessfully sought defendant's consent to mistrial, and finally declared mistrial and discharged jury, without any insistence by defendant upon any right to completion of the trial by the first jury, jeopardy did not attach. United States v. A. D. Sedgwick (D.C. App. 1975, 345 A. 2d 465; cert. denied 96 S. Ct. 1751, — U.S. —).

Elements of offense

First-degree burglary, an offense against habitation, is completed when individual enters occupied dwelling with intent to commit criminal offense. W. Strickland, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 332 A.2d 746).

Neither the unlawful entry statute nor the forcible entry statute engrafts any additional elements on first-degree burglary statute of the District of Columbia; unlawful entry statute does not purport to amend burglary statutes and does not do so by operation of law, expressly or impliedly, nor do requirements of unlawful entry statute constitute additional elements of every second-degree burglary. United States v. S. Kearney, Jr. (1974, 498 F. 2d 61, 162 U.S. App. D.C. 110).

It is not necessary to burglary conviction that the theft or crime intended at time of entry be consummated. R. Massey v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 320 A. 2d 296).

Element that distinguishes burglary from unlawful entry is the intent to commit crime once unlawful entry has been accomplished. United States v. T. Melton, Jr. (1973, 491 F. 2d 45, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 252).

While burglary does not include element of breaking or force, offense of forcible entry does. Id.

Proof of larceny does not, in itself, establish burglary. H. L. White v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 300 A. 2d 716).

Where defendant was not present at government building when actual theft of equipment occurred, he could only be convicted of theft of government property and second-degree burglary as an aider and abettor. United States v. W. J. Barlow, Jr. (1972, 470 F. 2d 1245, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 336).

Evidence—Admissibility

In burglary prosecution, Confrontation Clause of Sixth Amendment barred admission of officer's rebuttal testimony as to defendant's companion's out-of-court statement that he was with defendant for only five minutes. United States v. R. E. Yates (1975, 524 F.2d 1282, 173 U.S. App. D.C. 308).

Where, in prosecution for burglary of jewelry store, after prosecutor's introduction of evidence that store owner did not have insurance, court ruled that the evidence was not relevant and should be stricken from the record and gave cautionary instruction to the jury, defendant was amply protected from hazard of impermissible influence and the question and answer do not constitute such plain error as to require reversal. C. R. Manago v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 331 A.2d 335).

Testimony by accomplices as to statements which were made to them by defendant during commission of crimes charged in prosecutions for felony-murder, first-degree murder, armed robbery, robbery and second-degree burglary and which incriminated codefendants, were admissible under either exception to hearsay rule for contemporaneous declarations which partake of the event or exception for spontaneous declarations of excited utterances. United States v. I. E. Leonard (1974, 494 F. 2d 955, 161 U.S. App. D.C. 36).

Error, if any, in introduction into evidence of recordings between since deceased accomplice-informer and first defendant was not reversible error, in prosecution for conspiracy, burglary, grand larceny, interstate transportation of stolen property and bringing stolen property into the District of Columbia. United States v. M. Lemonakis (1973, 485 F. 2d 941, 158 U.S. App. D.C. 162; cert. denied 94 S. Ct. 1586, 1587, 415 U.S. 989).

Admission into evidence of recorded conversations between since deceased accomplice-informer and first defendant which contained references to second defendant in joint trial did not violate second defendant's rights under the confrontation clause. Id.

Introduction in evidence in joint trial of recordings of conversation between first defendant and since deceased accomplice-informer was not improper on ground that recordings, which were made outside the presence of counsel, denied defendants' right to counsel. Id.

Government informer's suicide note, written six days prior to suicide, and which contained language exculpating second defendant, was not within the dying declaration hearsay rule exception where the note was not made with belief that death was imminent and did not concern the cause or circumstances of what was believed to be impending death. Id.

Accomplice-informer's handwritten suicide note, which contained language exculpating second defendant, was not admissible as declaration against the informer's penal interest where there was no corroboration of the exculpatory statement. Id.

Where codefendants denied actual knowledge of the stolen contents of two boxes with which they were connected, rebuttal evidence relating to prior suspicious acts not charged in indictment was properly admitted on question of intent or absence of mistake; since codefendants were only charged as aiders and abettors, with respect to the theft of government property and second-degree burglary counts such testimony was appropriately admitted to establish possible common scheme or plan whereby codefendants might be directly connected with the actual perpetrator of the crime; testimony of codefendants rendered evidence of prior suspicious activity of sufficient probative value in rebuttal to overcome possible prejudicial effect. United States v. T. E. Fench (1972, 470 F. 2d 1234, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 325; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 964, 410 U.S. 909).

— Disclosure to defense

Where matter which prosecution had not disclosed prior to trial of indictment is inadmissible hearsay, i.e., a street rumor which remained unverified despite immediate investigation by police detective, and where detective did not abandon investigation until after positive identification of defendant had been made by principal victim and defendant had confessed to the crime, undisclosed information is not kind of material which prosecution should have furnished defendant in advance of trial. United States v. A. D. Sedgwick (D.C. App. 1975, 345 A.2d 465; cert. denied 96 S. Ct. 1751, — U.S. —).

— Hearsay

Where evidence clearly established defendant's guilt of burglary and petit larceny of grocery store, admission in evidence of hearsay testimony of proprietor of store that he had heard that defendant had stolen his keys to store was not substantial or prejudicial error. P. T. Fredericks v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 306 A. 2d 268).

— Sufficiency

Evidence was not sufficient to support convictions for arson, second-degree burglary while armed with a Molotov cocktail and possession of a Molotov cocktail. United States v. L. S. Carter (1975, 522 F.2d 666, 173 U.S. App. D.C. 54).

In proceeding in which accused was convicted of burglary and grand larceny and in which accused's fingerprint in burglarized house was assertedly the only evidence linking accused to the offenses, evidence satisfies government's burden of negating the most reasonable explanations under which such fingerprint evidence would be consistent with innocence and of showing that fingerprint was made during commission of the offenses. In re M. M. J. (D.C. App. 1975, 341 A.2d 421).

Evidence, in prosecution for burglary of jewelry store, is sufficient to support conviction of defendant who, at 4:00 a.m., was seen by officers hastily running from window in vacant building through which burglars had gained access to jewelry store and who was apprehended in the possession of several pieces of jewelry, all identified as having been taken from the store. C. R. Manago v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 331 A.2d 335).

Evidence that defendant made early morning forcible entry into bar and grill, prepared to carry away items of value, and attempted to conceal his actions inside the premises was sufficient on element of entry with intent to steal to make submissible case of second-degree burglary. R. Massey v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 320 A. 2d 296).

Burglary conviction was sustained by evidence including testimony that defendant and codefendant were first seen about five feet from place of breaking and entry, in the middle of the night, that bags which appeared to have been hastily filled with merchandise were there, that officers saw defendant and codefendant running side by side and testimony that defendant gave two conflicting explanations for his presence at scene together with evidence that defendant as retail dealer had recently purchased goods from the burglarized wholesale firm which had then refused him more credit and that goods stolen would have had actual value only to one in retail business. B. D. Forsyth v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 318 A. 2d 292).

Where there was no evidence of a breaking or evidence placing defendant within building, fact that defendant was in possession of recently stolen goods belonging to business did not establish burglary II. H. L. White v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 300 A. 2d 716).

Evidence, including evidence that defendant's fingerprints were found on both sides of pane of glass removed from back door to apartment and that prints were found on surface of glass covered by molding strips which secured window in door, were sufficient to sustain determination that defendant was person who entered complainant's apartment. United States v. J. E. Cary (1972, 470 F. 2d 469, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 321).

Evidence was sufficient to support convictions of first-degree burglary and of assault with a deadly weapon despite claim that, absent corroborating evidence, testimony of complaining witness alone could not support findings of guilt. United States v. R. Carmichael (1972, 469 F. 2d 937, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 197).

Where evidence disclosed a single act on part of defendant directed simultaneously at two persons, so that only a single conviction for assault on two persons was supported by evidence, convictions of first-degree burglary and of one assault would be affirmed, but conviction of an additional assault would be set aside, and sentences would be vacated and case would be remanded for resentencing. Id.

— Suppression

When, within minutes of a reported early morning burglary, officers came upon defendant in an area proximate to scene of crime, wearing clothing which effectively fit the description given police by complaining witness, officers had probable cause to arrest, and thus, irrespective of voluntary nature of defendant's return to the scene, trial judge is not required to suppress either identification testimony of complainant or clothing worn by defendant at time of arrest. M. A. Hampton v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 340 A.2d 813).

Identification

Where witness did not have opportunity to see the face of the large man outside liquor store at close range because witness was watching from an eighth floor window, but the parking lot outside the liquor store was illuminated, the witness did observe the man's general facial features, the cut of his hair, the shape of his head, his race, his height and his build and only 20 to 25 minutes elapsed between the crime and the identification, the on-the-scene identification procedures were permissible. B. I. Nichols v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 343 A.2d 336).

Witness's identification of the defendant's clothes as identical to those worn by driver of automobile observed at burglary scene was not impermissibly suggestive because the defendant was observed alone in patrol wagon where witness had had two opportunities to view the driver's clothes both before and after the burglar alarm was activated, the identification occurred only 20 to 25 minutes after the second time witness saw the clothes and the witness identified the defendant's uniform rather than the defendant himself. Id.

Defendant's convictions of first-degree burglary, grand larceny, and malicious destruction of property were not supported by sufficient evidence, where, despite the complainant's testimony that he was able to identify defendant at showup because the image of defendant's face was implanted on his mind, the complainant was unable to identify defendant at trial, where his opportunity to observe the burglars was brief, where he saw them at night under artificial light, where his nearest observation of them was when they were running and 17 feet away, and where there was a significant discrepancy in almost all respects between the description given by complainant to the police and defendant's actual description, both physically and in respect to clothing. W. B. Crawley v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 320 A. 2d 309).

In determining whether out-of-court identification was improper, one must look to totality of circumstances surrounding it; only if procedure followed was so impermissibly suggestive as to give rise to very substantial likelihood of misidentification must testimony concerning the out-of-court identification be held inadmissible. M. E. Conyers v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 309 A. 2d 309).

— In-court

Refusal to suppress in-court identification testimony of burglary eyewitness, who had observed man in hallway close to scene of crime making his way into scene of crime as burglar alarm sounded and then, carrying two paper bags, emerging into the hallway and leaving the premises, and who selected photograph of defendant from among 13 shown her by police 12 hours later, on theory that witness' view of defendant while sitting in courtroom prior to trial, during extended bench conference with respect to defendant's representation, irreparably tainted her in-court identification, was not error. C. J. Brown v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 327 A. 2d 539).

Failure of burglary eyewitness, who had observed man in hallway close to scene of crime making his way into scene of crime as burglar alarm sounded and then, carrying two paper bags, emerging into hallway and leaving the premises, and who selected photograph of defendant from among 13 shown by police 12 hours later, to attend lineup did not render her in-court identification testimony inadmissible. Id.

— Lineup

Record discloses that lineup identification was not tainted by any suggestive photographic identification procedure or by police officer's subsequent remark to complainant that person whose photograph he had selected had been driver of car which complainant had stated he saw suspicious person drive away in. A. L. Fludd v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 336 A.2d 539).

— Photographic

Fact that defendant's clothes in photographic display somewhat resembled clothes which robbery victim said armed robber wore does not render the photographic display impermissibly suggestive in view of total number of pictures, 150, and number of men of comparable age and appearance in the array. J. Herbert, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 340 A.2d 802).

Even if procedure followed in photographic identification process was suggestive because defendant's picture was placed last in book of approximately 50 others, it was not so unduly suggestive as to raise substantial likelihood of irreparable misidentification and does not warrant reversal of conviction. A. L. Fludd v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 336 A.2d 539).

Impeachment

Refusal to rule on whether defendant's prior conviction of attempted house breaking was an impeachable one is improper, but error is harmless, in that since such conviction was admissible for impeachment purposes, defendant's decision whether to testify would have been same if trial judge had expressly ruled on its admissibility. M. A. Hampton v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 340 A.2d 813).

Defendant was properly impeached by use of prior inconsistent statement given by him to representative of District of Columbia Bail Agency in the prosecution of offense for which the Bail Agency statement was given. J. Herbert, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 340 A.2d 802).

Refusal, in criminal prosecution, to admit testimony regarding effect of drug use on perception for purposes of impeaching testimony of accomplice, who testified for government and who was a heroin user, unless it was established that accomplice had used narcotics on day of offenses was not error. United States v. I. E. Leonard (1974, 494 F. 2d 955, 161 U.S. App. D.C. 36).

Inferences

Giving of instruction that jurors were permitted to infer that second defendant was "guilty of the crimes charged," if they determined, beyond a reasonable doubt, that he was found in unexplained, exclusive possession of recently stolen property was reversible error where the presumed fact of guilt of arson, possession of a Molotov cocktail and second-degree burglary while armed with a Molotov cocktail did not flow from possession of recently stolen military rifles. United States v. L. S. Carter (1975, 522 F.2d 666, 173 U.S. App. D.C. 54).

Due process would not be violated by permitting jury to infer from a defendant's possession of recently stolen property that defendant intended to commit an offense at the time of his unlawful entry into building. Id.

Fact of unlawful entry, even in the nighttime, may not support inference that entry was made with intent to steal. United States v. T. Melton, Jr. (1973, 491 F. 2d 45, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 252).

Where there was no proof of burglary, possession of recently stolen property could not give rise to inference respecting commission by possessor of burglary. H. L. White v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 300 A. 2d 716).

Crime of burglary requires, inter alia, breaking or entering without breaking and such must be established before an inference from possession of recently stolen property may properly be indulged to establish defendant's guilt of burglary. Id.

Instructions

There was no plain error in instructions on specific intent required for first-degree burglary even though instructions could have been more expansive on "specific intent" where instructions were not objected to at trial. United States v. P. G. Thornton (1974, 498 F. 2d 749, 162 U.S. App. D.C. 207).

Failure to give an accomplice instruction with regard to accomplices who testified for government was not plain error where nonaccomplice testimony corroborated accomplice testimony to significant extent against one accused and to lesser extent against another and where accomplices did not appear to have extraordinary disposition to prevaricate. United States v. I. E. Leonard (1974, 494 F. 2d 955, 161 U.S. App. D.C. 36).

Refusal to instruct that testimony of accomplices, who testified for government after having been granted immunity, should be considered with caution was reversible error. Id.

Absent waiver of instruction, failure, in prosecution for felony-murder, first-degree murder, armed robbery, robbery and second-degree burglary, to give immediate limiting instruction as to admissibility where testimony of arresting officer was admitted to impeach defendant's testimony that he had not stated that codefendant "lived across the street" was plain error requiring reversal, though general instruction on impeachment evidence was given in very long charge. Id.

Instruction that jury could infer from the unexplained or unsatisfactorily explained possession of stolen money orders that defendants were guilty of taking such money orders, that defendant's possession of the recently stolen property did not shift burden of proof and that Government always had burden of proving beyond reasonable doubt every essential element of offense did not place burden on defendants, alone, to testify and explain satisfactorily their possession of stolen money orders. United States v. J. M. Joyner (1974, 492 F. 2d 650, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 384; cert. denied 95 S. Ct. 94, 419 U.S. 852).

Jury instruction that if jury found beyond reasonable doubt that defendant had committed acts which constituted essential elements of crimes charged, then he must be found guilty, was equivalent to trial judge directing verdict of guilty, and was plain error. S. Watts v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 328 A. 2d 770).

In prosecution based on defendants' unconsented entry into offices of chemical company and their destruction of certain property in it, instruction that Vietnam war was not issue in case and that, if government proved beyond reasonable doubt that one or more of defendants committed elements of crimes charged, law does not recognize as defense that defendants were motivated to commit their acts by sincere political, religious or moral convictions or in obedience to some higher law was not improper despite contention that instructions were coercive, tantamount to directed verdict of guilty and outside proper scope of judicial instruction. United States v. M. R. Dougherty (1972, 473 F. 2d 1113, 154 U.S. App. D.C. 76).

Instructions with respect to identification in prosecution for burglary, rape, and robbery was sufficient for circumstances of case wherein complaining witness did not identify defendant but identity was established from fingerprint evidence. United States v. J. E. Cary (1972, 470 F. 2d 469, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 321).

Intent

Proof that accused entered premises armed and disguised as woman and accompanied by another man who also carried concealed firearm, that they both obtained consent to their entry under pretext and, as soon as money appeared on game table, accused and his companion whipped out their guns, robbed occupants and fled sustained finding that when accused entered apartment, he possessed criminal intent required by this section. United States v. S. Kearney, Jr. (1974, 498 F. 2d 61, 162 U.S. App. D.C. 110).

An intent to steal or commit a crime at the time of entry is a requisite element of proof in burglary case. R. Massey v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 320 A. 2d 296).

Circumstances which together with unauthorized presence in another's premises will support inference of entry with criminal purpose need not include the actual commission of a crime within the premises but are such as might lead reasonable people, based upon common experience, to conclude beyond a reasonable doubt that the accused possessed the requisite intent. Id.

Where there was complete absence of any evidence of an intent to commit crime after unlawful entry, defendant could not be found guilty of first-degree burglary and it was error to submit such charge thereby inviting jury to speculate on why defendant entered dwelling. United States v. T. Melton, Jr. (1973, 491 F. 2d 45, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 252).

Jencks Act

Although trial court was required by Jencks Act to direct prosecution to produce notes taken by prosecutor during interview with witness on morning of trial, trial court's refusal to so order is harmless error and does not prejudice defendant where evidence from sources other than such witness overwhelmingly indicates defendant's guilt. In the Matter of R. D. J. (D.C. App. 1975, 348 A. 2d 301).

Joinder

Joinder of counts concerning second-degree burglary, grand larceny, and attempted burglary, was not improper. L. P. Coleman v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 298 A. 2d 40; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 3070, 413 U.S. 921).

Jury question

In prosecution for theft of government property and second-degree burglary, whether defendant had aided and abetted the larceny by assisting in continuing asportation of property he knew had been stolen was jury question. United States v. W. J. Barlow, Jr. (1972, 470 F. 2d 1245, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 336).

Jury was properly permitted to find guilty participation in burglary from defendant's exclusive possession of recently stolen property. Id.

Merger of offenses

Armed robbery, committed after burglary, is not lesser included offense of first-degree burglary or an offense co-extensive with first-degree burglary but an offense separate and distinct from burglary so that defendant can be convicted of both offenses. W. Strickland, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 332 A.2d 746).

Housebreaking and robbery convictions can stand together since robbery and burglary statutes which codify common law protect distinct societal interests. C. M. Dixon, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 320 A. 2d 318).

Plea bargaining

Where Government as part of plea bargaining only agreed to waive its statutory right of allocation at time of imposing of sentence for burglary, defendant did not have right to reasonably expect that Governments agreement not to allocute would extend to a hearing on his subsequent request that the imposed sentence be reduced and Government was entitled to submit information in opposition to motion to reduce. M. L. Braxton v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 328 A. 2d 385).

Plea of guilty

Where prosecution in its opening statement had outlined overwhelming case against defendants, charged with burglary of political party headquarters, pleas were accepted only after extraordinarily elaborate procedure, stretching over four days, conducted largely in camera, and involving two competent attorneys, and neither counsel, prosecutor, nor judge exerted the slightest pressure on defendants to induce them to plead guilty, withdrawal of pleas would substantially prejudice legitimate prosecution interests, defendants were granted "use immunity" so that they might testify before grand jury and congressional committees and, at time of plea, defendants had denied employment by government intelligence agencies, defendants would not be entitled, eight months after pleading guilty, to withdraw their pleas because they honestly, though mistakenly, believed that "national security" considerations required their silence. United States v. B. L. Barker (1975, 514 F.2d 208, 168 U.S. App. D.C. 312; cert. denied 95 S. Ct. 2420, 421 U.S. 1013).

Where defendant charged with first-degree burglary tendered plea of guilty to lesser-included offense of unlawful entry, and trial judge was presented with a factual basis for the plea, plea should not have been refused simply because defendant refused to accompany his plea with an admission of guilt. United States v. T. Gaskins (1973, 485 F. 2d 1046, 158 U.S. App. D.C. 267).

Prearrest delay

Dismissal of charges against accused is not warranted merely on basis of his assertion that prearrest delay, which was slightly more than three months and with regard to which there had been some lack of diligence on part of police but no intentional delay, deprived him of his ability to present a defense because he could not recall his activities or whereabouts on night of the offenses. In re M. M. J. (D.C. App. 1975, 341 A.2d 421).

Probable cause

When, within minutes of a reported early morning burglary, officers came upon defendant in an area proximate to scene of crime wearing clothing which effectively fit the description given police by complaining witness, officers had probable cause to arrest, and thus, irrespective of voluntary nature of defendant's return to the scene, trial judge is not required to suppress either identification testimony of complainant or clothing worn by defendant at time of arrest. M. A. Hampton v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 340 A.2d 813).

Prosecutor's remarks to jury

Prosecutor's rebuttal argument which was to the effect that all of the evidence came from the Government, which did not mention defendant, which followed defense counsel's previous reminder to the jury that defendant did not testify, and which was not objected to, does not amount to plain error. C. R. Manago v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 331 A.2d 335).

Failure of prosecutor to obtain permission of judge to comment on absence of witness whom defendant allegedly could have produced and whose testimony allegedly would have elucidated transaction in question, was error, but the error was rendered harmless by trial court's prompt instruction to jury to disregard prosecutor's remarks. M. E. Conyers v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 309 A. 2d 309).

Remand

Where defendant's first-degree burglary conviction had to be set aside for lack of proof of intent to commit crime in premises entered but jury necessarily found facts required for conviction of lesser included offense of unlawful entry and the evidence was sufficient to support this determination, Court of Appeals would remand case with instructions to enter, if government consents, judgment of conviction of unlawful entry or, if court believes it in interest of justice, to grant new trial on lesser offense. United States v. T. Melton, Jr. (1973, 491 F. 2d 45, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 252).

Retrial, lesser included offense

Where the evidentiary failure relating to charge of second-degree burglary while armed with Molotov cocktail concerned only circumstance of defendant being armed, retrial of defendant, mandated on other grounds, could properly include lesser charge of second-degree burglary. United States v. L. S. Carter (1975, 522 F.2d 666, 173 U.S. App. D.C. 54).

Review—Record on appeal

Where there was nothing to indicate cause of delay between appointment of counsel on November 11, 1971 and status call on March 1, 1972, where there was no information concerning parole revocation proceedings involving defendant and Court of Appeals was left to speculate as to whether court-appointed counsel aided defendant in these proceedings and was therefore unable to avoid delay and where record did not indicate whether government's complaining witness, who was unavailable for March 17, 1972 trial date, was unavailable for entire period until August 31, 1972 trial, record was inadequate to determine whether defendant was denied his right to speedy trial, and record would be remanded for supplementation. United States v. D. E. Douglas (1973, 488 F. 2d 1331, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 7).

Search and seizure

Warrantless search and seizure which occurred when police officer removed blanket from object which defendant had placed in public hallway while he went next door to make a telephone call and when officer copied serial number from object cannot be justified on basis of a suspicion or hunch on part of officer that a crime had been committed. United States v. R. F. Boswell (D.C. App. 1975, 347 A. 2d 270).

Police officer's brief observation of defendant carrying a blanket-covered object on street, proximity of defendant to object once he left it unattended in a public hallway, i.e., 20 to 30 feet, and reason for leaving object, i.e., to make a telephone call in an adjacent laundromat, do not reasonably allow an inference of an intent on part of defendant to abandon object and, thus, do not operate to preclude defendant from questioning legality of search and seizure which occurred when officer removed blanket and copied serial number from object. Id.

Where police officers on the scene at 5 a.m. had received eyewitness report of the commission of a burglary, corroborated by missing pane of glass near apartment door, and had received positive identification of the perpetrator which included name and address, and where officers then received another eyewitness report from complainant that suspect was at that very moment in an apartment across the street, warrantless search of the latter apartment was justified by probable cause to believe that fleeing felon was within and by exigent circumstances which precluded obtaining an arrest warrant. W. L. Dunston v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 315 A. 2d 563).

Sentence

Where concurrent sentences imposed on each conviction for assault with a dangerous weapon were adjudged to run concurrently with burglary and armed robbery convictions, no remand for resentencing was necessary on vacation of convictions for assault with a dangerous weapon. United States v. S. Kearney, Jr. (1974, 498 F. 2d 61, 162 U.S. App. D.C. 110).

Severance

Refusal to grant severance in prosecution for felony-murder, first-degree murder, armed robbery, robbery and second-degree burglary, was not prejudicial to defendant due to fact that evidence placing a codefendant at scene of crime was quantitatively and qualitatively greater than evidence against defendant where evidence against defendant was both substantial and compelling, jury was specifically instructed to determine guilt of each defendant by considering only his own conduct and evidence which applied to him and where verdicts demonstrated that jury fulfilled its obligation under charge. United States v. I. E. Leonard (1974, 494 F. 2d 955, 161 U.S. App. D.C. 36).

Fact that there was conflict in accused's defenses, in that codefendants relied on separate alibi defenses and defendant admitted his presence at scene of offenses and in that such defendants' efforts to discredit testimony that he and a codefendant knocked out victim assertedly undetermined such codefendant's alibi defense and fact that defendant did not testify and thus codefendants were precluded from cross-examining him did not so prejudice codefendants as to render refusal to grant severance an abuse of discretion where damaging implications of defendant's defense were corroborated by substantial testimony. Id.

Admission, in criminal prosecution in which a defendant did not testify, of admissible testimony as to such defendant's hearsay statements which incriminated codefendants did not require severance on ground that admission violated codefendants' right of confrontation where, even if codefendants were tried separately, such testimony would have been admissible and defendant probably would have invoked Fifth Amendment, where there was substantial other eyewitness testimony incriminating codefendants and where, since defendant was an accomplice, reliability of his hearsay declaration was "inevitably suspect." Id.

Where count of indictment charging defendant with carrying pistol on day of his arrest was dismissed for failure of proof before case was submitted to jury and indictment was retyped, omitting count, defendant was not prejudiced by court's refusal to sever such properly joined count from counts charging felony murder, first-degree burglary and armed robbery. United States v. J. M. Joyner (1974, 492 F. 2d 650, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 384; cert. denied 95 S. Ct. 94, 419 U.S. 852).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in prosecution for conspiracy, burglary, grand larceny, interstate transportation of stolen property, and bringing stolen property into the District of Columbia by denying severance to second defendant on ground of antagonistic defenses. United States v. M. Lemonakis (1973, 485 F. 2d 941, 158 U.S. App. D.C. 162; cert. denied 94 S. Ct. 1586, 1587, 415 U.S. 989).

Refusal to sever counts, in prosecution for second-degree burglary, grand larceny, and attempted burglary, was not an abuse of discretion where, inter alia, if there had been separate trials on each of the counts there would have been a substantial overlap of the evidence. L. P. Coleman v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 298 A. 2d 40; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 3070, 413 U.S. 921).

Speedy trial

Fifteen-month delay between arrest and trial was such as to constitute a denial of defendant's right to a speedy trial where delay was not, at all times, attributable to defendant, who suffered personal prejudice by reason of fact that he was confined throughout period, though he continually pressed his motion for release pending trial, and where personal prejudice resulting from pretrial incarceration was exacerbated by fact that defendant was a youth being confined in an adult jail and fact that defendant was especially handicapped by his social and educational background. United States v. W. H. Calloway (1974, 505 F. 2d 311, 164 U.S. App. D.C. 204).

Delay of approximately 11 months between indictment and trial, which initially was caused by defendants' confusion of his counsel situation, and which thereafter was contributed to by combination of heavy calendar of the judge and the necessity of trying prior scheduled cases, the impossibility for a long period of securing attendance of complaining witness, judge's commitment to official duties, and to minor extent by the absence on vacation of defendant's counsel, was insufficient to constitute a denial of defendant's right to a speedy trial, in absence of any prejudice. United States v. D. E. Douglas (1974, 504 F. 2d 213, 164 U.S. App. D.C. 144).

Evaluating alleged deprivation of right to speedy trial requires a careful balancing in which conduct of both government and defendant are weighed; relevant factors include length of delay, reason for delay, defendant's assertion of his right, and prejudice to defendant. United States v. D. E. Douglas (1973, 488 F. 2d 1331, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 7).

Witnesses—Appointment of counsel

Where evidence indicates that two minor witnesses were innocent bystanders to burglary, and where witnesses were at all times willing to testify against defendant, defendant does not have standing to assert that trial court's refusal to appoint counsel for such minor witnesses before they testified was violation of witnesses' Fifth Amendment privilege against self-incrimination. In the Matter of R. D. J. (D.C. App. 1975, 348 A.2d 301).

— Missing

If a party has it peculiarly within his power to produce witnesses whose testimony would elucidate transaction in question, fact that he does not do so creates presumption that testimony, if produced, would be unfavorable and comment by counsel and instruction by judge as to absent witnesses is permitted. M. E. Conyers v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 309 A. 2d 309).

— Immunity

Provisions of Organized Crime Control Act requiring prosecutor to obtain authorization from Attorney General before granting immunity to witnesses who refuse to testify does not bar prosecutor's grant of immunity to minor witnesses who at no time refused to testify and who were merely innocent bystanders of burglary with which defendant was charged. In the Matter of R. D. J. (D.C. App. 1975, 348 A.2d 301).

Chapter 20.—OBSCENITY

§ 22-2001. Certain obscene activities and conduct declared unlawful—Definitions—Penalties—Affirmative defenses—Exception.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Community standards

Question of national standards of obscenity is matter of proof at trial. F. P. Hermann v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 304 A. 2d 22).

Where Government rested after court viewed allegedly obscene film exhibited by defendants, and expert witness for defense then expressed opinion film did not violate contemporary national community standards, burden of proceeding shifted back to the Government to prove beyond a reasonable doubt a violation of contemporary national community standards. Id.

Obscenity per se relieves Government from offering any evidence of community standards to make a prima facie case. Id.

Construction

District of Columbia obscenity statute, using language similar to that used in federal statutes, is to be given same construction as the federal statute and is constitutional. United States v. Sherpiz, Inc. (1975, 512 F.2d 1361, 168 U.S. App. D.C. 121).

Although Court of Appeals was not presented with an authoritative construction of District of Columbia obscenity statute in view of the Miller decision, that is, that obscenity prosecution is limited to hard core sexual conduct specifically defined by the regulating state law, as written or construed, the Court would not undertake a definitive interpretation of the statute since it was convinced that the statute would receive a limiting construction that would maintain its application to the facts of the instant case. United States v. T. E. Gower (1974, 503 F. 2d 189, 164 U.S. App. D.C. 98; aff'g 316 F. Supp. 1390).

Elements of offense

Where at time of distribution and exhibition of allegedly obscene film by defendants a judicially declared test of obscenity was whether material was utterly without redeeming social value but, at the time of trial, court had revised test so as to require, for obscenity, only that the material lack serious literary, artistic, political or scientific value, defendants could be convicted only if material could be found to be obscene under both tests. United States v. Sherpix, Inc. (1975, 512 F.2d 1361, 168 U.S. App. D.C. 121).

Elements which must be proved before material or a performance can be found obscene are: appeal to a prurient interest in sex, utterly without redeeming social value, and violation of contemporary national community standards. F. P. Hermann v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 304 A. 2d 22).

Although expert testimony would often substantially assist trial court determinations regarding obscenity as well as independent review on appeal, expert testimony is not required as matter of course to establish the elements on which material or a performance can be obscene. Id.

Evidence—Admissibility

Where a United States commissioner found probable cause to believe that suspect films were obscene and issued a search warrant prior to their seizure, promptly after execution of warrant the Government arranged a hearing before a district judge at which defendant was afforded opportunity to oppose the Government's obscenity claim, and defendants made no effort to resist the claim but instead disclaimed the proceeding, use of films as evidence at defendant's trial was not impermissible because no adversary hearing leading to an affirmative determination of obscenity was held before they were seized. United States v. D. E. Pryba (1974, 502 F. 2d 391, 163 U.S. App. D.C. 389; cert. denied 95 S. Ct. 815, 419 U.S. 1127).

— Of community standards

District Court in obscenity cases has wide discretion in its determination to admit and exclude evidence, and this is particularly true in case of expert testimony; although Government is not required to introduce expert testimony on community standards, defense should be free to introduce appropriate expert testimony, and summary exclusion of all testimony on community standards would thus be inappropriate. United States v. Sherpix, Inc. (1975, 512 F.2d 1361, 168 U.S. App. D.C. 121).

Hard-core pornography

Conviction of book sellers for violating District of Columbia obscenity statute by possession and sale of obscene photographs and films, which showed nude males and females engaged in explicit sexual intercourse, fellatio, cunnilingus and masturbation, was not required to be overturned in face of the Miller decision, that is, that obscenity prosecutions is limited to hard core sexual conduct specifically defined by the regulating state law, since reviewing court was convinced that the court-tried case would have reached exactly the same result if the case had been tried after Miller and had been conducted strictly in accordance with its instructions. United States v. T. E. Gower (1974, 503 F. 2d 189, 164 U.S. App. D.C. 98; aff'g 316 F. Supp. 1390).

In view of grave doubt as to whether "lesbian" pictures, which did not show ultimate sexual acts were violative of narrow and specific prohibitions that mark limit of constitutionality, elementary constitutional considerations precluded affirmance of conviction for violating indecent publication statute, where jury was not instructed that it was its task, as surrogate for community, to determine whether there was depiction of sexual conduct to a point of patent offensiveness. V. W. Huffman and D. E. Pryba v. United States (1974, 502 F. 2d 419, 163 U.S. App. D.C. 417; rev'g and rem'g 259 A. 2d 342).

Intent to disseminate

Defendant enjoyed no immunity from prosecution for violation of this section outlawing possession of obscene matter with intent to disseminate by virtue of fact that only dissemination planned was a gift of copies of films to another. United States v. D. E. Pryba (1974, 502 F. 2d 391, 163 U.S. App. D.C. 389; cert. denied 95 S. Ct. 815, 419 U.S. 1127).

Obscene per se

Film that was sexually morbid, grossly perverse and bizarre, and wholly without any artistic or scientific justification was properly found to be obscene per se. J. J. Kaplan v. United States (D.C. App. 1971, 277 A. 2d 477; cert. granted, judgment vacated, and remanded 93 S.Ct. 3030, 413 U.S. 913; aff'd on remand 311 A. 2d 506; cert. denied 94 S. Ct. 3229, 418 U.S. 942).

Scienter

Defendant, who was working at downtown arcade on more than one occasion when obscene film was being displayed and who had ownership interest in the arcade, had requisite knowledge that the film being exhibited in particular machine was obscene. J. J. Kaplan v. United States (D.C. App. 1971, 277 A. 2d 477; cert. granted, judgment vacated, and remanded 93 S.Ct. 3030, 413 U.S. 913; aff'd on remand 311 A. 2d 506; cert. denied 94 S. Ct. 3229, 418 U.S. 942).

Search and seizure

Magistrate's determination of probable cause to seize allegedly obscene film was entitled to "great deference"; affidavit which was lengthy account of film, describing each scene in detail and with explicit language, furnished substantial basis for his decision, and seizure of film pursuant to the warrant was valid though magistrate did not personally view the film. United States v. Sherpix, Inc. (1975, 512 F.2d 1361, 168 U.S. App. D.C. 121).

Ex parte hearings may be properly used to grant warrants authorizing seizure of limited amounts of alleged obscene materials. V. W. Huffman and D. E. Pryba v. United States (1974, 502 F. 2d 419, 163 U.S. App. D.C. 417; rev'g and rem'g 259 A. 2d 342).

Since the search warrant for film contained in peep-show machine located in downtown arcade was issued upon detailed affidavit, only one machine out of a number was seized and it contained a single 12-minute peep-show reel, and arcade owner was offered hearing on propriety of the seizure the day after the seizure, the defendant-arcade owner was not entitled to hearing prior to issuance of the warrant. J. J. Kaplan v. United States (D.C. App. 1971, 277 A. 2d 477; cert. granted, judgment vacated, and remanded 93 S.Ct. 3030, 413 U.S. 913; aff'd on remand 311 A. 2d 506; cert. denied 94 S. Ct. 3229, 418 U.S. 942).

Chapter 21.—KIDNAPING

§ 22-2101. Definition and penalty—Conspiracy.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Discovery

With the exception of records of impeachable convictions, the criminal records and records of arrests of government witnesses were not discoverable and the suppression of the testimony of government witnesses, as sanction for disobedience of pretrial discovery order, was in excess of trial court's authority. United States v. W. C. Engram et ano. (D.C. App. 1975, 337 A.2d 488; cert. denied 96 S. Ct. 793, 423 U.S. 1058).

Evidence—Admissibility

In prosecution of, inter alia, jail inmates for crimes arising out of jail break attempt in which they took District of Columbia Commissioner of Corrections hostage, there was no error in excluding from evidence statements which allegedly promised defendants immunity from prosecution in view of fact that neither District of Columbia Commissioner of Corrections nor federal district judge, who made such statements, had such power and fact that statements were made while Commissioner was under duress. United States v. F. Gorham, Jr. (1975, 523 F.2d 1088, 173 U.S. App. D.C. 139; rehearing en banc denied 536 F.2d 410, — U.S. App. D.C. —).

— Sufficiency

Evidence, including testimony of complainant and others concerning incident, reasonably permitted a finding of guilt on charges of armed kidnapping, armed assault with intent to kill, and carrying a dangerous weapon. R. N. Wooten v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 343 A. 2d 281).

Prosecution

Commissioner of Corrections' agreement not to prosecute jail inmates for crimes arising out of jail break attempt, made while he was their hostage, was not enforceable, in view of fact that Commissioner had no authority to make such agreement, agreement lacked consideration of knowing relinquishment of constitutional right, agreement involved performance of preexisting duty, agreement was induced by duress, and, agreements involving forbearance of prosecution are contrary to public policy. United States v. F. Gorham, Jr. (1975, 523 F.2d 1088, 173 U.S. App. 139; rehearing en banc denied print was made during commission of the offenses. In re

Chapter 22.—LARCENY—RECEIVING STOLEN GOODS

§ 22-2201. Grand larceny.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Aid and abet

Under statute authorizing charging of aiders and abettors as principals, particular defendants who distributed allegedly obscene motion picture film could be convicted of knowingly presenting the film in the District of Columbia where such defendants supplied film to exhibitor therein in return for share of proceeds from the exhibition. United States v. Sherpax, Inc. (1975, 512 F.2d 1361, 168 U.S. App. D.C. 121).

Construction

While larceny remains an offense against possession, robbery is basically a crime against the person. United States v. T. B. Dixon (1972, 469 F. 2d 940, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 200).

Convictions—Mutually exclusive

Convictions of second defendant for burglary and grand larceny were mutually exclusive with conviction for receiving stolen property and bringing it into the District of Columbia, and vacating the burglary and larceny convictions which carried longer sentences cured any prejudice which resulted from the failure to properly instruct. United States v. M. Lemonakis (1973, 485 F. 2d 941, 158 U.S. App. D.C. 162; cert. denied 94 S. Ct. 1586, 1587, 415 U.S. 989).

Discovery

With the exception of records of impeachable convictions, the criminal records and records of arrests of government witnesses were not discoverable and the suppression of the testimony of government witnesses, as sanction for disobedience of pretrial discovery order, was in excess of trial court's authority. United States v. W. C. Engram et ano. (D.C. App. 1975, 337 A.2d 488; cert. denied 96 S. Ct. 793, 423 U.S. 1058).

Evidence—Admissibility

Error, if any, in introduction into evidence of recordings between since deceased accomplice-informer and first defendant was not reversible error, in prosecution for conspiracy, burglary, grand larceny, interstate transportation of stolen property and bringing stolen property into the District of Columbia. United States v. M. Lemonakis (1973, 485 F. 2d 941, 158 U.S. App. D.C. 162; cert. denied 94 S. Ct. 1586, 1587, 415 U.S. 989).

Admission into evidence of recorded conversations between since deceased accomplice-informer and first defendant which contained references to second defendant in joint trial did not violate second defendant's rights under the confrontation clause. Id.

Introduction in evidence in joint trial of recordings of conversation between first defendant and since deceased accomplice-informer was not improper on ground that recordings, which were made outside the presence of counsel, denied defendants' right to counsel. Id.

Government informer's suicide note, written six days prior to suicide, and which contained language exculpating second defendant, was not within the dying declaration hearsay rule exception where the note was not made with belief that death was imminent and did not concern the cause or circumstances of what was believed to be impending death. Id.

Accomplice-informer's handwritten suicide note, which contained language exculpating second defendant, was not admissible as declaration against the informer's penal interest where there was no corroboration of the exculpatory statement. Id.

Where officer had victim point out suspects, officer took victim to office of prosecutor for protection and upon returning was unable to find defendant and another and then went to motel at which defendant was reportedly staying and arrested defendant and his companion as they were about to leave the city, arrest without a warrant, effectuated by unconsented to entry into motel room, for not only violations of the three-card monte statute but grand larceny was valid and paraphernalia seized as incident to arrest were admissible. J. A. Bond v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 310 A. 2d 221).

Any conceivable prejudice by reception of testimony of arresting officers concerning nature of articles, which were characterized by officer as typical confidence game paraphernalia, as incident to proper arrest was cured by subsequent rejection of the exhibits as irrelevant in absence of a showing that the items were actually used in the particular incident on which prosecution for violation of three-card monte statute and grand jury was based. Id.

— Sufficiency

In proceeding in which accused was convicted of burglary and grand larceny and in which accused's fingerprint in burglarized house was assertedly the only evidence linking accused to the offenses, evidence satisfies government's burden of negating the most reasonable explanations under which such fingerprint evidence would be consistent with innocence and of showing that fingerprint was made during commission of the offenses. In re M. M. J. (D.C. App. 1975, 341A.2d 421).

Evidence as to value of stolen articles was sufficient to support conviction of grand larceny, especially in view of testimony of buyer that articles stolen and recovered had a retail value of $248 and a wholesale value of $124. L. Saunders v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 317 A. 2d 867).

Evidence that defendant drove off in car owned by another, which was parked in parking lot with keys in ignition, without permission of owner, supported conviction of defendant of grand larceny and unauthorized use of vehicle. P. T. Fredericks v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 306 A. 2d 268).

Evidence sustained larceny conviction of defendant who had been observed entering alleyway without certain goods in automobile and who was observed some time thereafter leaving alley with goods taken from business in automobile. H. L. White v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 300 A. 2d 716).

Identification

Defendant's convictions of first-degree burglary, grand larceny, and malicious destruction of property were not supported by sufficient evidence, where, despite the complainant's testimony that he was able to identify defendant at showup because the image of defendant's face was implanted on his mind, the complainant was unable to identify defendant at trial, where his opportunity to observe the burglars was brief, where he saw them at night under artificial light, where his nearest observation of them was when they were running and 17 feet away, and where there was a significant discrepancy in almost all respects between the description given by complainant to the police and defendant's actual description, both physically and in respect to clothing. W. B. Crawley v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 320 A. 2d 309).

Where identification of defendant during and immediately after lineup was uncertain, such uncertainty diminished overall strength of prosecuting witness' identification testimony and it was thus clear beyond reasonable doubt that guilty verdict would have resulted even if jury had never heard such challenged testimony, and such testimony was therefore harmless beyond reasonable doubt. J. Pender v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 310 A. 2d 252).

Where prosecuting witness had more than ample opportunity to observe and retain image of defendant while she was committing crime, and also identified defendant's photograph the day after crime from volumes given her by police, and at trial testified firmly and positively that her in-court identification was based on her observations of defendant during commission of crime, in-court identification was based on source independent of lineup and was admissible. Id.

Inferences

Unexplained or unsatisfactorily explained possession of property recently stolen permits inference that possessor is person who stole it. H. L. White v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 300 A. 2d 716).

Where prosecution established corpus delicti of grand larceny, it was proper for jury to infer that defendant found in possession of stolen goods was guilty of the larceny. Id.

Intent

Defendant, who towed bus with valid tags without authorization to remove vehicle from housing authority parking lot, who used forged authority from housing authority to sell vehicle to used car dealer, and who, after rightful owner learned of such sale and contacted used car dealer, repurchased vehicle and took it to shredder at junkyard, had necessary felonious intent to sustain his conviction for grand larceny. L. R. Fogle, Sr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 336 A.2d 833).

Grand larceny, as defined by this section, does not require intent to appropriate property permanently, but proof must merely manifest intent to appropriate property to use inconsistent with owner's rights. P. T. Fredericks v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 306 A. 2d 268).

Jencks Act

Although trial court was required by Jencks Act to direct prosecution to produce notes taken by prosecutor during interview with witness on morning of trial, trial court's refusal to so order is harmless error and does not prejudice defendant where evidence from sources other than such witness overwhelmingly indicates defendant's guilt. In the Matter of R. D. J. (D.C. App. 1975, 348 A.2d 301).

Joinder

Joinder of counts concerning second-degree burglary, grand larceny, and attempted burglary, was not improper. L. P. Coleman v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 298 A. 2d 40; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 3070, 413 U.S. 921).

Lesser included offense

If evidence in armed robbery prosecution did not warrant findings that the $500 involved was taken from victim's person or immediate actual possession, then jury could only have properly found defendants guilty of the lesser included offense of grand larceny. United States v. T. B. Dixon (1972, 469 F. 2d 940, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 200).

Plea of guilty

No abuse of discretion was shown in denying defendant's request for withdrawal of guilty plea on ground that he was suffering withdrawal from methadone, in light of trial court's extensive questioning of defendant, prior to accepting plea, with awareness that defendant was receiving methadone treatment, so that trial court was capable of ascertaining that plea was voluntarily and intelligently made. C. Durante v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 309 A. 2d 321).

Poisonous tree doctrine

Even assuming the illegality of prior arrest of defendant, he could not successfully invoke the poisonous tree doctrine where he pointed to no particular fruit of the alleged poisonous tree which was introduced into evidence against him and assuming that there was such actual fruit sought to be suppressed the connection between the fruits and the assertedly unlawful arrest and the evidence presented at trial for grand larceny in violation of three-card monte statute was so tenuous that any taint was dissipated. J. A. Bond v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 310 A. 2d 221).

Poisonous tree doctrine does not operate so broadly as to bar all subsequent prosecutions but rather operates on particular evidence, either tangible or testimonial, and if properly invoked causes exclusion only of such evidence. Id.

Prearrest delay

Dismissal of charges against accused is not warranted merely on basis of his assertion that prearrest delay, which was slightly more than three months and with regard to which there had been some lack of diligence on part of police but no intentional delay, deprived him of his ability to present a defense because he could not recall his activities or whereabouts on night of the offenses. In re M. M. J. (D.C. App. 1975, 341 A.2d 421).

Probable cause

Where officer observed accused looking or searching behind desk in room of office building and observed him depart as soon as officer's presence became known and accused answered "Nothing" when officer addressed defendant outside building and asked him what he had been doing in the office, officer had probable cause to arrest accused and fruits of larcenies seized from accused's person incident to the arrest were admissible. W. Arrington v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 311 A. 2d 838).

Review—Record on appeal

Where there was nothing to indicate cause of delay between appointment of counsel on November 11, 1971 and status call on March 1, 1972, where there was no information concerning parole revocation proceedings involving defendant and Court of Appeals was left to speculate as to whether court-appointed counsel aided defendant in these proceedings and was therefore unable to avoid delay and where record did not indicate whether government's complaining witness, who was unavailable for March 17, 1972 trial date, was unavailable for entire period until August 31, 1972 trial, record was inadequate to determine whether defendant was denied his right to speedy trial, and record would be remanded for supplementation. United States v. D. E. Douglas (1973, 488 F. 2d 1331, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 7).

Search and seizure

Warrantless search and seizure which occurred when police officer removed blanket from object which defendant had placed in public hallway while he went next door to make a telephone call and when officer copied serial number from object cannot be justified on basis of a suspicion or hunch on part of officer that a crime had been committed. United States v. R. F. Boswell (D.C. App. 1975, 347 A.2d 270).

Police officer's brief observation of defendant carrying a blanket-covered object on street, proximity of defendant to object once he left it unattended in a public hallway, i.e., 20 to 30 feet, and reason for leaving object, i.e., to make a telephone call in an adjacent laundromat, do not reasonably allow an inference of an intent on part of defendant to abandon object and, thus, do not operate to preclude defendant from questioning legality of search and seizure which occurred when officer removed blanket and copied serial number from object. Id.

Severance

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in prosecution for conspiracy, burglary, grand larceny, interstate transportation of stolen property, and bringing stolen property into the District of Columbia by denying severance to second defendant on ground of antagonistic defenses. United States v. M. Lemonakis (1973, 485 F. 2d 941, 158 U.S. App. D.C. 162; cert. denied 94 S. Ct. 1586, 1587, 415 U.S. 989).

Refusal to sever counts, in prosecution for second-degree burglary, grand larceny, and attempted burglary, was not an abuse of discretion where, inter alia, if there had been separate trials on each of the counts there would have been a substantial overlap of the evidence. L. P. Coleman v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 298 A. 2d 40; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 3070, 413 U.S. 921).

Delay of approximately 11 months between indictment and trial, which initially was caused by defendant's confusion of his counsel situation, and which thereafter was contributed to by combination of heavy calendar of the judge and the necessity of trying prior scheduled cases, the impossibility for a long period of securing attendance of complaining witness, judge's commitment to official duties, and to minor extent by the absence on vacation of defendant's counsel, was insufficient to constitute a denial of defendant's right to a speedy trial, in absence of any prejudice. United States v. D. E. Douglas (1974, 504 F. 2d 213, 164 U.S. App. D.C. 144).

Evaluating alleged deprivation of right to speedy trial requires a careful balancing in which conduct of both government and defendant are weighed; relevant factors include length of delay, reason for delay, defendant's assertion of his right, and prejudice to defendant. United States v. D. E. Douglas (1973, 488 F. 2d 1331, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 7).

Value—Evidence of Evidence of value of items stolen by defendant and accomplices based on estimate of current market value and not original cost is sufficient to support defendant's conviction for grand larceny. In the Matter of R. D. J. (D.C. App. 1975, 348 A. 2d 301).

For purposes of determining whether chattel which was subject to larceny had value of $100 or more, market value may be established by testimony of its nonexpert owner. L. Saunders v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 317 A. 2d 867).

In determining whether value of article which was subject of larceny was $100 or more, testimony of management employee as to value of chattel is generally acceptable. Id.

For purposes of determining whether value of article which was subject to larceny was $100 or more, the relevant market value is usually the retail value. Id.

Witnesses—Appointment of counsel

Where evidence indicates that two minor witnesses were innocent bystanders to burglary, and where witnesses were at all times willing to testify against defendant, defendant does not have standing to assert that trial court's refusal to appoint counsel for such minor witnesses before they testified was violation of witnesses' Fifth Amendment privilege against self-incrimination. In the Matter of R. D. J. (D.C. App. 1975, 348 A. 2d 301).

— Immunity

Provisions of Organized Crime Control Act requiring prosecutor to obtain authorization from Attorney General before granting immunity to witnesses who refuse to testify does not bar prosecutor's grant of immunity to minor witnesses who at no time refused to testify and who were merely innocent bystanders of burglary with which defendant was charged. In the Matter of R. D. J. (D.C. App. 1975, 348 A. 2d 301).

§ 22-2202. Petit larceny—Order of restitution.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Defendant's absence during proceedings

Defense counsel's tactical decision not to let complainant see defendant before trial at suppression hearing is binding upon defendant and waiver of his presence at hearing does not constitute reversible error. A. L. Fludd v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 336 A.2d 539).

Evidence—Hearsay

Where evidence clearly established defendant's guilt of burglary and petit larceny of grocery store, admission in evidence of hearsay testimony of proprietor of store that he had heard that defendant had stolen his keys to store was not substantial or prejudicial error. P. T. Fredericks v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 306 A. 2d 268).

— Sufficiency

Evidence was not sufficient to support conviction of petit larceny as an aider and abettor by pushing victim at the very time that pickpocket pushed the victim from the rear and removed victim's wallet from his pocket. G. G. Quarles v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 308 A. 2d 773).

— Suppression

Where defendant, charged with petit larceny, made no pretrial motion to suppress allegedly stolen notebooks which were introduced at trial without objection, any objection to evidence was waived by defendant who claimed on appeal that the notebooks should have been suppressed as having been seized illegally. T. Grennett v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 318 A. 2d 589).

Identification—Lineup

Record discloses that lineup identification was not tainted by any suggestive photographic identification procedure or by police officer's subsequent remark to complainant that person whose photograph he had selected had been driver of car which complainant had stated he saw suspicious person drive away in. A. L. Fludd v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 336 A.2d 539).

— Photographic

Even if procedure followed in photographic identification process was suggestive because defendant's picture was placed last in a book of approximately 50 others, it was not so unduly suggestive as to raise substantial likelihood of irreparable misidentification and does not warrant reversal of conviction. A. L. Fludd v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 336 A.2d 539).

Jencks Act

In prosecution for petit larceny, failure of prosecution to provide defense counsel, who had requested all Jencks Act materials with original form on which special officer employed by store had initially recounted alleged shoplifting incident did not entitle defendant to hearing concerning existence and location of the original form and did not require that special officer's testimony be struck where, inter alia, original form was not within possession of prosecution and defense counsel had been furnished with a subsequent form which was a copy of the original with certain details added and grammatical changes made. B. A. Johnson v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 322 A. 2d 590).

Peremptory challenges

Defendant who was charged with petit larceny, a misdemeanor for which maximum punishment was one year, was entitled to only the three peremptory charges available to defendant charged with such an offense notwithstanding fact that Government had filed notice that, if convicted, defendant would be subjected to additional penalties of the third offender statute. C. E. Tatum v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 330 A. 2d 522).

Probable cause

Where police officers, accompanied by neighbor and owner of car from which battery had been stolen a short time before, came upon two men, immediately identified as the thieves by the passengers in the police car, working with battery cables under the raised hood of a car, the police officers had probable cause both to arrest defendant and his companion and to search the car for the stolen battery. D. M. Robinson v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 322 A. 2d 271).

Where officer observed accused looking or searching behind desk in room of office building and observed him depart as soon as officer's presence become known and accused answered "Nothing" when officer addressed defendant outside building and asked him what he had been doing in the office, officer had probable cause to arrest accused and fruits of larcenies seized from accused's person incident to the arrest were admissible. W. Arrington v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 311 A. 2d 838).

Prosecution

Had defendant, charged with misdemeanor of petit larceny, been entitled to have prosecution commenced by way of indictment, because of possible imposition of more than one year sentence under recidivist statute, failure to so prosecute would have constituted plain error requiring reversal, in absence of waiver. E. Smith v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 304 A. 2d 28; cert. denied 94 S. Ct. 846, 414 U.S. 1114).

Review—Record on appeal

Where there was nothing to indicate cause of delay between appointment of counsel on November 11, 1971 and status call on March 1, 1972, where there was no information concerning parole revocation proceedings involving defendant and Court of Appeals was left to speculate as to whether court-appointed counsel aided defendant in these proceedings and was therefore unable to avoid delay and where record did not indicate whether government's complaining witness, who was unavailable for March 17.

1972 trial date, was unavailable for entire period until August 31, 1972 trial, record was inadequate to determine whether defendant was denied his right to speedy trial, and record would be remanded for supplementation. United States v. D. E. Douglas (1973, 488 F. 2d 1331, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 7).

Sentence

Eighteen months' sentence for petit larceny, a misdemeanor, did not constitute punishment for the offense itself and thus did not cause the noninfamous offense, which may be prosecuted by information, to be transformed later to an infamous offense which must be prosecuted by indictment, unless waived. E. Smith v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 304 A. 2d 28; cert. denied 94 S. Ct. 846, 414 U.S. 1114).

Where, at sentencing proceeding, trial court neglected to clearly inform defendant of prior convictions allegedly warranting enhancement of punishment on conviction of petit larceny or to inquire whether defendant affirmed or denied each conviction and court merely inquired of defendant regarding a prior petit larceny conviction not listed in pretrial information, which conviction she affirmed, 18 months' sentence was required to be set aside and case remanded for resentencing, notwithstanding that defendant had failed to file written answer to information. Id.

Trial court did not erroneously fail to sentence youth under Federal Youth Corrections Act for misdemeanors he had admitted committing, where trial court expressly found that youth, who had committed the misdemeanors in question while still awaiting sentence by United States district court for attempted robbery and who had left without permission a development center and a halfway house while awaiting determination of armed robbery charges, was unlikely to be rehabilitated by Youth Corrections Act treatment. R. J. Hubb v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 298 A. 2d 512).

Delay of approximately 11 months between indictment and trial, which initially was caused by defendant's confusion of his counsel situation, and which thereafter was contributed to by combination of heavy calendar of the judge and the necessity of trying prior scheduled cases, the impossibility for a long period of securing attendance of complaining witness, judge's commitment to official duties, and to minor extent by the absence on vacation of defendant's counsel, was insufficient to constitute a denial of defendant's right to a speedy trial, in absence of any prejudice. United States v. D. E. Douglas (1974, 504 F. 2d 213, 164 U.S. App. D.C. 144).

Evaluating alleged deprivation of right to speedy trial requires a careful balancing in which conduct of both government and defendant are weighed; relevant factors include length of delay, reason for delay, defendant's assertion of his right, and prejudice to defendant. United States v. D. E. Douglas (1973, 488 F. 2d 1331, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 7).

§ 22-2203. Larceny after trust.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Instructions

In prosecution under this section, giving instruction which correctly stated that evidence of similar criminal acts was admissible to prove intention but which was overly broad in further stating that evidence was admissible on general questions of motive, identity, absence of mistake or inadvertence, or to show common scheme or purpose was not prejudicial error. J. R. Gay v. United States (D.C. App. 1969, 259 A. 2d 593; see also 93 S. Ct. 2152, 411 U.S. 974).

§ 22-2204. Unauthorized use of vehicles.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Arrest

Where, after being stopped for having run stop sign, defendant was unable to furnish officers with either driver's permit or vehicle registration and police were unable to verify ownership by other means because of computer malfunction, police had probable cause to believe that vehicle was being used without authorization and to arrest defendant on that basis. R. A. Botts v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 310 A. 2d 237).

Defense

Testimony by accused that he believed car in question had been abandoned is relevant to specific intent offense but such testimony is not, per se, a defense to charge of unauthorized use of motor vehicle. C. Williams v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 337 A.2d 772).

Double jeopardy

Juvenile, whose counsel had secured oral ruling of acquittal on charge of unauthorized use of a motor vehicle, had waived any potential double jeopardy claim when his trial counsel acquiesced in continuation of hearing and reopening of count when registered owner of vehicle appeared in courtroom. In the Matter of J. A. H. (D.C. App. 1974, 315 A. 2d 825).

Even if double jeopardy claim had not been waived by defense counsel's failure to object to reopening following oral granting of motion for judgment of acquittal, such reopening would not have placed juvenile in double jeopardy since oral ruling was not equivalent to a final, written judgment. Id.

Evidence

In delinquency proceeding where juvenile was charged with unauthorized use of a vehicle, testimony of police officer that defendant resided in Laurel, Maryland, and that one of other youths in vehicle had told officer that white shoes found in vehicle belonged to juvenile's sister and that juvenile had been wearing them was hearsay and should not have been admitted, but error in admitting testimony is not prejudicial, where juvenile's place of residence was a matter of record which could be noticed by court, and evidence in respect to shoes was probative of nothing more than that juvenile was a passenger in vehicle, a fact that was established by other admissible evidence and was not contested at trial. In the Matter of T. T. B. (D.C. App. 1975, 333 A.2d 671).

— Sufficiency

Evidence in delinquency proceeding, such as circumstance that juvenile, who was a passenger in a stolen automobile, fled from scene at time vehicle was halted by police and, upon apprehension after a chase of several blocks, made two attempts to free himself, establishes guilty knowledge necessary to establish offense of unauthorized use of a vehicle. In the Matter of T. T. B. (D.C. App. 1975, 333 A.2d 671).

Testimony by two police officers that they saw defendant take gun from his belt and replace it, that they saw defendant enter driver's side of a van, subsequently found to be stolen, that they subsequently saw three men standing near the van with defendant closest to it, and testimony by one of the two officers that he saw defendant drop the gun sustained defendant's convictions for unauthorized use of a motor vehicle and carrying a pistol without a license. D. R. Reed v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 312, A. 2d 775).

Evidence that defendant drove off in car owned by another, which was parked in parking lot with keys in ignition, without permission of owner, supported conviction of defendant of grand larceny and unauthorized use of vehicle. P. T. Fredericks v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 306 A. 2d 268).

Inferences

In delinquency proceeding wherein juvenile was charged with unauthorized use of a vehicle, a justifiable inference of consciousness of guilt can be drawn from evidence of juvenile's initial flight from stolen vehicle and his later attempts to pull away from arresting officer and to leave police cruiser. In the Matter of T. T. B. (D.C. App. 1975, 333 A.2d 671).

Jury could draw an inference of guilt, in prosecution for unauthorized use of motor vehicle and for receiving stolen property, from defendant's possession of stolen vehicle approximately six weeks after it was taken, where court made it clear in its instructions that jury was not required to draw any inferences, that possession of recently stolen property did not shift the Government's burden of proof, and that the inference was forbidden if defendant's possession of the property was satisfactorily explained by independent evidence or by his own testimony. A. Fleming, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 310 A. 2d 214).

Instructions

Evidence in prosecution for unauthorized use of motor vehicle did not warrant instruction on theory that accused lacked requisite criminal intent if he believed that automobile he was using had been abandoned. C. Williams v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 337 A.2d 772).

Instruction in prosecution for unauthorized use of a motor vehicle and for receiving stolen property, which stated that an act is done knowingly if it is done voluntarily and purposefully and not because of mistake, inadvertence, or accident, was consistent with defendant's defense that he was buying the vehicle, and absence of further elaboration did not amount to plain error since there would seem to be no possible way a jury could find the specific intent necessary to find defendant guilty of crime of receiving stolen property without finding the use and operation of the stolen vehicle anything but "unauthorized" as that term appeared in statute. A. Fleming, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 310 A. 2d 214).

Jury

Where defendant charged with receiving stolen property and unauthorized use of vehicle was denied opportunity to inquire on voir dire as to whether jurors would give greater credence to testimony of police officer merely because he was police officer than to any other witness, conviction would be set aside. B. Harvin, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 297 A. 2d 774).

Jury question

Issue of guilt of defendant, who was charged with unauthorized use of a motor vehicle and of receiving stolen property, was properly submitted to jury where evidence presented, including fact that defendant was arrested while driving stolen vehicle approximately six weeks after it was taken, was such that reasonable minds might fairly have a reasonable doubt or might not have such a doubt. A. Fleming, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 310 A. 2d 214).

Review

Since juvenile's counsel, who had previously secured oral ruling of acquittal on charge of unauthorized use of a motor vehicle, did not object to reopening of such count when registered owner of vehicle appeared in courtroom, scope of review was limited to determination of whether reopening constituted plain error. In the Matter of J. A. H. (D.C. App. 1974, 315 A. 2d 825).

—Record on appeal

Where there was nothing to indicate cause of delay between appointment of counsel on November 11, 1971 and status call on March 1, 1972, where there was no information concerning parole revocation proceedings involving defendant and Court of Appeals was left to speculate as to whether court-appointed counsel aided defendant in these proceedings and was therefore unable to avoid delay and where record did not indicate whether government's complaining witness, who was unavailable for March 17, 1972 trial date, was unavailable for entire period until August 31, 1972 trial, record was inadequate to determine whether defendant was denied his right to speedy trial, and record would be remanded for supplementation. United States v. D. E. Douglas (1973, 488 F. 2d 1331, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 7).

Search and seizure

Where arrestee requested his leather jacket from closet and stepped forward to a point within three or four feet of closet before he was stopped, he thus brought within his immediate control the area where sawed-off shotgun was concealed in partially open suitcase, even though arrestee's arms were handcuffed in front of him, and agent, as incident to arrest, was justified in conducting a warrantless search of the suitcase and in seizing sawed-off shotgun found therein. United States v. D. C. Mason (1975, 523 F. 2d 1122, 173 U.S. App. 173).

Speedy trial

Delay of approximately 11 months between indictment and trial, which initially was caused by defendant's confusion of his counsel situation, and which thereafter was contributed to by combination of heavy calendar of the judge and the necessity of trying prior scheduled cases, the impossibility for a long period of securing attendance of complaining witness, judge's commitment to official duties, and to minor extent by the absence on vacation of defendant's counsel, was insufficient to constitute a denial of defendant's right to a speedy trial, in absence of any prejudice. United States v. D. E. Douglas (1974, 504 F. 2d 213, 164 U.S. App. D.C. 144)

Evaluating alleged deprivation of right to speedy trial requires a careful balancing in which conduct of both government and defendant are weighed; relevant factors include length of delay, reason for delay, defendant's assertion of his right, and prejudice to defendant. United States v. D. E. Douglas (1973, 488 F. 2d 1331, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 7).

CROSS REFERENCE

Bringing stolen property into District, see § 22-108.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Attempt

Defendant, who received a television set, which in fact had not been stolen, after having been advised that the set was a stolen set, did not commit crime of attempted receiving stolen property, since an unsuccessful attempt to do that which is not a crime cannot be held to be an attempt to commit crime specified. United States v. F. Hair (1973, 356 F. Supp. 339).

Corporate property

When ownership of stolen property is claimed to be in a corporation, such claim must be supported by evidence. R. W. Atkinson v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 322 A. 2d 587).

The existence of a corporation, as a victim of theft, may be proven by production of a charter or certificate of incorporation, by a license to do business, or by parol evidence of incorporation or of user or reputation. Id.

Elements of offense

Where prosecution failed to establish the corporate existence of corporation from which pistol was allegedly stolen, it failed to establish an essential element of proof against defendant who allegedly received stolen property by taking the pistol. R. W. Atkinson v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 322 A. 2d 587).

Where there was an unexplained possession of recently stolen property, it was unnecessary for government to prove amount defendant paid for property, since amount paid was not an element of crime, and hence it was not improper to refuse defendant's proposed instruction that government was required to prove specific amount of money paid in order to show knowledge and intent. M. H. Barnes, Sr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 313 A. 2d 106).

Offense of receiving stolen property is composed essentially of four elements: (1) the property must be received, (2) at the time of its receipt the property must be stolen, (3) the receiver must have guilty knowledge that it is stolen property, (4) his intent in receiving it must be fraudulent. L. E. Brown v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 304 A. 2d 21).

Evidence—Admissibility

Where defendant, being held on suspicion of driving automobile without authorization of owner, had not been informed that anything he said could be used against him or that lawyer would be provided for him if he could not afford one, false statement by defendant to officers during questioning that stolen driver's permits found in automobile belonged to his girl friend was not admissible into evidence, though defendant was allegedly "no stranger to the criminal process." R. A. Botts v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 310 A. 2d 237).

—Sufficiency

In prosecution for receiving stolen property, proof of both monetary cost of stolen automobile license tags allegedly received by defendant and fact that tags were current is sufficient to establish that tags had value and to support defendant's conviction. F. P. Jones v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 345 A. 2d 144).

Evidence that juvenile took possession of stolen credit card when automobile in which he was riding was stopped by the police, that he furtively attempted to conceal it under the armrest of the automobile, that he denied having credit card in his possession when asked to hand it over to police officer, that, after card was retrieved by the officer, juvenile disclaimed knowledge of who owned it, and that the credit card was in fact stolen sustains finding that juvenile feloniously possessed stolen goods with specific intent to defraud. In the Matter of V. L. M. (D.C. App. 1975, 340 A.2d 818).

Since stolen property which juvenile was accused of possessing, a currently usable credit card, is of obvious monetary value to its owner and to anyone who might attempt to use it to obtain gasoline on credit and since court found juvenile to have committed only a misdemeanor by finding that the card had no value in excess of $100, finding of delinquency is not improper on theory that government failed to show the value of the stolen credit card. Id.

Where Government showed that defendant had in his possession approximately 2,000 blank government identification cards but Government failed to introduce any evidence that the goods had been stolen, it did not meet its burden of proving beyond a reasonable doubt an element of offense of receiving stolen property. L. E. Brown v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 304 A.2d 21).

Fair trial

Where Government's case in prosecution for forgery, uttering and receiving stolen property rested on documents and unchallenged identification of accused, seven-month nondeliberate delay between date of such offenses and accused's arrest did not deprive accused of fair trial in violation of due process, notwithstanding contentions that if accused had been charged more promptly, he might have remembered what he was doing when he was accused of being in certain shop and could have located "former marine buddy" who assertedly accompanied accused to a second shop. G. Hurt v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 314 A.2d 489).

Indictment

District Court properly refused to dismiss indictment for distribution of cocaine and for receiving stolen property on ground that tape recording of preliminary hearing testimony had been accidentally erased by re-recording company from which magistrate's office had requested transcript, where there was no reason to believe that defense was in any way prejudiced by unavailability of the transcript. United States v. R. R. Carpenter (1975, 510 F.2d 738, 166 U.S. 163 U.S. App. 358).

Fact that suffix "Sr." was not affixed to defendant's name in indictment charging receiving of stolen goods was not prejudicial and fatal to indictment. M. H. Barnes, Sr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 313 A.2d 106).

Inferences

Jury could draw an inference of guilt, in prosecution for unauthorized use of motor vehicle and for receiving stolen property, from defendant's possession of stolen vehicle approximately six weeks after it was taken, where court made it clear in its instructions that jury was not required to draw any inferences, that possession of recently stolen property did not shift the Government's burden of proof, and that the inference was forbidden if defendant's possession of the property was satisfactorily explained by independent evidence or by his own testimony. A. Fleming, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 310 A.2d 214).

Instructions

Instruction which served purpose of warning jury against determining weight of evidence solely on basis of number of witnesses testifying on either side was not required where defense elected not to introduce any witnesses. M. H. Barnes, Sr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 313 A.2d 106).

Instruction in prosecution for unauthorized use of a motor vehicle and for receiving stolen property, which stated that an act is done knowingly if it is done voluntarily and purposefully and not because of mistake, inadvertence, or accident, was consistent with defendant's defense that he was buying the vehicle, and absence of further elaboration did not amount to plain error since there would seem to be no possible way a jury could find the specific intent necessary to find defendant guilty of crime of receiving stolen property without finding the use and operation of the stolen vehicle anything but "unauthorized" as that term appeared in statute. A. Fleming, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 310 A.2d 214).

Joinder

Joinder of receiving stolen property count with forgery and uttering counts was not prejudicial misjoinder where all counts related to offenses at certain shop, where evidence on all counts was sufficient for jury and where, though evidence was elicited as to accused's use of stolen credit card at another shop, such evidence was probative as corroborative of handwriting evidence and limiting instruction was given. G. Hurt v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 314 A.2d 489).

Jury

Where defendant charged with receiving stolen property and unauthorized use of vehicle was denied opportunity to inquire on voir dire as to whether jurors would give greater credence to testimony of police officer merely because he was police officer than to any other witness, conviction would be set aside. B. Harvin, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 297 A.2d 774).

Jury question

Issue of guilt of defendant, who was charged with unauthorized use of a motor vehicle and of receiving stolen property, was properly submitted to jury where evidence presented, including fact that defendant was arrested while driving stolen vehicle approximately six weeks after it was taken, was such that reasonable minds might fairly have a reasonable doubt or might not have such a doubt. A. Fleming, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 310 A.2d 214).

Where there was no indication that prosecution witness' testimony at trial was perjurious, notwithstanding existence of prior inconsistent statement which was undetected or overlooked by defendant at trial, or that acquittal would necessarily follow impeachment of witness through use of said prior inconsistent statements, defendant is not entitled to new trial in interests of justice. H. S. Huggins v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 333 A.2d 385).

Proof

Through indictment charged defendant with receiving as stolen goods one case of vodka one-half pints and one case of vodka pints, whereas at trial it was shown that both cases of vodka were half-pints, variance was not fatal, absent a showing of prejudice. M. H. Barnes, Sr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 313 A.2d 106).

Search and seizure

Warrantless search and seizure which occurred when police officer removed blanket from object which defendant had placed in public hallway while he went next door to make a telephone call and when officer copied serial number from object cannot be justified on basis of a suspicion or hunch on part of officer that a crime had been committed. United States v. R. F. Boswell (D.C. App. 1975, 347 A.2d 270).

Police officer's brief observation of defendant carrying a blanket-covered object on street, proximity of defendant to object once he left it unattended in a public hallway, i.e., 20 to 30 feet, and reason for leaving object, i.e., to make a telephone call in an adjacent laundromat, do not reasonably allow an inference of an intent on part of defendant to abandon object and, thus, do not operate to preclude defendant from questioning legality of search and seizure which occurred when officer removed blanket and copied serial number from object. Id.

Where police officers watched defendants stalk two female pedestrians at 2:00 in the morning, return to their car, depart abruptly, and lead police officers in high-speed chase, and where one occupant had been seen leaning down in the front seat, police officers were justified in stopping the car and searching under the front seat and behind the glove compartment where stolen, unlicensed pistol was found, after the occupants had been removed from the car. United States v. J. W. Thomas and W. L. Sutton (D.C. App. 1974, 314 A.2d 464).

Where officers had probable cause to arrest defendant for unauthorized use of motor vehicle, subsequent search of automobile at station house after defendant stated that vehicle registration must be located there was valid, and stolen driver's permits found during search were admissible in evidence in subsequent trial of defendant on charges of receiving stolen property. R. A. Botts v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 310 A. 2d 237).

Sentence

There is no statutory authority for imposing a fine on conviction of felonious offense of receiving stolen property having a value of $100 or upward. M. H. Barnes, Sr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 313 A. 2d 106).

Stolen goods

Fact that two cases of stolen vodka were delivered to defendant by a private undercover agent did not mean that vodka lost its character as stolen property and was instead "recovered" property under common-law rule governing receipt of stolen-but-recovered property, where, at time of delivery, agent was acting under direction of a third party as part of that individual's general criminal design, so that delivery was performed as a form of observation and surveillance rather than as a recovery of property on behalf of rightful owner. M. H. Barnes, Sr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 313 A. 2d 106).

Chapter 23.—LIBEL—BLACKMAIL—EXTORTION

§ 22-2307. Threatening to kidnap or injure a person or damage his property—Penalty.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Estoppel

After accused was acquitted of a threat to do bodily harm and bribery and jury "hung" on charge of obstruction of justice, Government is not collaterally estopped from retrying accused on charge of obstruction of justice on theory that verdict of not guilty on "threats" charge determined the issue with respect to identical threats alleged in obstruction of justice charge. United States v. L. M. Smith (D.C. App. 1975, 337 A.2d 499).

Chapter 24.—MURDER—MANSLAUGHTER

§ 22-2401. Murder in the first degree—Purposeful killing—Killing while perpetrating certain crimes.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Abuse of discretion

Trial court's interventions during trial did not deny defendant fair trial where they were neither hostile nor coupled with critical remarks. T. Turt v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 337 A.2d 215).

Appeal and error

Even if trial court's initial ruling restricting closing arguments to deny defense counsel opportunity to argue that defendant was mere bystander at scene of murder was error, it lost aura of harmful error when court did in fact allow substantial closing argument to be made as to the identity of the individual who in fact committed the murder. T. Peoples v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 329 A. 2d 446).

Assistance of counsel

Defendant was not denied his Sixth Amendment right to assistance of counsel because the court's refusal to admit defendant's statements at start of his testimony regarding what he had stated to police officer shortly after the murder made it impossible for the defendant to present his case "in the best light legally possible." United States v. L. R. Smith (1974, 490 F. 2d 789, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 221).

Where defendant was described by companions and another on night of murder as tall man with plaid shirt and where eyewitness to murder described gunman as taller of two assailants and was wearing a plaid shirt, court's restricting defense counsel from arguing that defendant was not the gunman did not amount to denial of the effective assistance of counsel or constitute prejudicial error. T. Peoples v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 329 A. 2d 446).

Change of venue

With respect to motion for change of venue which was first granted and was then withdrawn by defendant, no error was shown by contention that transfer was made contingent on relinquishment of right to effective counsel, where counsel who was preparing insanity defense was from the legal aid agency and by statute could not follow the case outside the district, and where issue of replacement counsel in transferee district was never raised since defendant insisted on retaining original counsel and accordingly chose to have case remain in District of Columbia, where his chief counsel assured trial court that defendant could get a fair trial. United States v. B. A. Bryant (1972, 471 F. 2d 1040, 153 U.S. App. D.C. 72; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 923, 409 U.S. 1112).

Confession

Admission of defendant's statement in his confession that he had killed three other people constituted prejudicial error requiring reversal of conviction, where in earlier parts of his confession defendant had admitted in detail that he killed the victim pursuant to a contract "because of numbers," where exclusion of reference to three prior murders could easily have been made without impairing the confession, and where court in its charge to jury made no attempt to limit effect of the evidence concerning the commission of prior offenses. United States v. C. E. Wiggins (1975, 509 F.2d 454, 166 U.S. App. D.C. 121).

There is no requirement that police stop a man from talking when he voluntarily and without solicitation says he wants to confess to a crime. Id.

Notwithstanding defendant's contention that the trial court erred in failing to suppress his alleged confession where it was uncontroverted that he had made known his wish and intention to consult with an attorney, but where the Government had, nevertheless, continued to interrogate him in the absence of an attorney and eventually elicited the confession, the record showed, in support of conclusion that defendant waived his right to the presence of an attorney, that defendant simply indicated he was "undecided" about an attorney and then decided to go ahead and give a statement. United States v. W. H. Howard (1972, 470 F. 2d 406, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 258).

Constitutionality

That the District of Columbia felony murder statute was broader than coverage of federal felony murder statute did not deny equal protection to accused who was prosecuted under such D.C. statute for murder committed during commission of offense of rescuing a federal prisoner. United States v. L. Greene (1973, 489 F. 2d 1145, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 21; cert. denied 95 S. Ct. 239, 419 U.S. 977).

Construction

Under this section requiring that a homicide committed during a felony be done "purposely" unless the felony is "arson, rape, mayhem, robbery, or kidnapping," by eliminating the element of "purpose". Congress intended to apply the common-law felony-murder rule to them, that is, that a homicide committed in course of their perpetration is murder because the "malice" required for murder can be implied from commission of the felony; the doctrine of implied malice obviates the need for the Government to prove that death was "foreseeable" when homicide occurs during any of the five specified felonies. United States v. J. R. Branick (1974, 495 F. 2d 1066, 162 U.S. App. D.C. 10).

Felony-murder statutes do not embody a legislative purpose to deter the commission of felonies to the point of embracing the coincidence rationale. United States v. B. J. Heinlein (1973, 490 F. 2d 725, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 157).

National felonies, including offense of rescuing a federal prisoner, constituted "any offenses" within this section providing in effect that "Whoever, being of sound memory and discretion, kills another purposely, * * * in perpetrating or attempting to perpetrate any offense punishable by imprisonment in the penitentiary" commits felony murder. United States v. L. Greene (1973, 489 F. 2d 1145, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 21; cert. denied 95 S. Ct. 239, 419 U.S. 977).

Cross-examination

Refusal, in prosecution for felony-murder, first-degree murder, armed robbery, robbery and second-degree burglary, to permit cross-examination of accomplice, who testified for government and whose counsel had been informed that government would be willing, with regard to unrelated narcotics and robbery charges against accomplice, to accept plea of guilty to one misdemeanor, as to whether government had made any disposition of such unrelated charges was reversible error when considered in conjunction with other errors. United States v. I. E. Leonard (1974, 494 F. 2d 955, 161 U.S. App. D.C. 36).

Defense

Where only evidence linking defendant with homicides was testimony of confessed accessory who was granted immunity, defendant's theory that accessory committed the killings and lied about defendant to cover up his own guilt was supported by testimony of eye-witnesses who described a man fitting accessory's description as being near scene of crimes, and defense counsel's closing argument seeking to present such theory did not supplement or misstate the record but merely suggested that jury draw certain inferences, restriction of closing argument so as to prevent defense counsel from suggesting that accessory committed the murders impaired defendant's constitutional right to a closing argument in his behalf and was not harmless beyond reasonable doubt. United States v. W. L. DeLoach, Sr. (1974, 504 F. 2d 185, 164 U.S. App. D.C. 116; cert. denied 96 S.Ct. 2232, 426 U.S. —).

Due process

Reindictment of defendants for first-degree murder, after their first trial on charge of second-degree murder had ended with a declaration of mistrial granted on motion of defense counsel, denied defendants due process, of law, absent any showing of justification for the increase in the degree of the crime charged. United States v. Jamison, Jr. (1974, 505 F. 2d 407, 164 U.S. App. D.C. 300).

Since it could not be said that defendants, whose first trial on charge of second-degree murder ended with a declaration of mistrial and who were then reindicted and found guilty on charge of first-degree murder, were not prejudiced by having to defend, on the retrial, against the higher, illegal charge, the Court of Appeals would not, under those circumstances, remand the case with directions to simply enter convictions for second-degree murder. Id.

Elements of offense

Even if at time of shooting of grocery store security guard defendants were "casing" the store preparatory to a later attempt to rob, the intent to rob requisite to felony-murder conviction would not yet have arisen since it is necessary that the felony have progressed beyond mere preparation to an indictable attempt before the homicide occurs. United States v. J. F. Bolden (1975, 514 F.2d 1301, 169 U.S. App. D.C. 60).

To support conviction of aiding and abetting a felony-murder, the homicide must have been committed in the course of the felony and in furtherance of the common purpose to commit the felony, rather than merely coincidental with it. Id.

To prove first-degree murder, Government must introduce facts which provide proof beyond a reasonable doubt that a crime was committed not merely intentionally, in sustained frenzy or heat of passion, but with premeditation and deliberation. United States v. J. L. Peterson (1974, 509 F.2d 408, 166 U.S. App. D.C. 75).

Elements of felony murder under this section are that a felony was attempted or being perpetrated and that during the course of action the deceased was purposely killed. United States v. L. Greene (1973, 489 F. 2d 1145, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 21; cert. denied 95 S. Ct. 239, 419 U.S. 977).

Murder in the first degree is intentional homicide done deliberately and with premeditation, and homicide that is intentional but "impulsive," not done after "reflection and meditation", is murder in the second degree. United States v. A. W. Brawner (1972, 471 F. 2d 969, 153 U.S. App. D.C. 1).

Offense of deliberated and premeditated murder requires a specific intent that cannot be satisfied merely by showing defendant failed to conform to objective standard. Id.

Evidence—Abnormal mental condition

Even when there is no defense of insanity, expert testimony of abnormal mental condition will be admissible when it bears on the existence of specific mental element necessary for a crime, provided trial judge determines that the testimony is grounded in sufficient scientific support, and would aid jury in reaching decision on ultimate issues; overruling Fisher v. United States, 80 U.S. App. D.C. 96, 149 F. 2d 28. United States v. A. W. Brawner (1972, 471 F. 2d 969, 153 U.S. App. D.C. 1).

A defendant who presents evidence that his abnormal condition of the mind has substantially impaired behavioral controls is exculpated if his behavioral controls were not only substantially impaired but were impaired to such extent that he lacked substantial capacity to conform his conduct to the law. Id.

—Admissibility

Statements made by defendants in casual conversation, out of the presence of police and immediately after homicide and robbery, offered to prove that defendants had recently engaged in some violent episode together, were admissible as admissions of a party opponent, each defendant adopting the other's statement. United States v. J. F. Bolden (1975, 514 F.2d 1301, 169 U.S. App. D.C. 60).

On trial of a defendant for one offense, evidence that he committed another is inadmissible to prove his disposition to commit crime; the jury may not be permitted to infer that the defendant is guilty of the crime charged because he committed another similar offense. United States v. C. E. Wiggins (1975, 509 F.2d 454, 166 U.S. App. D.C. 121).

Admission of color photograph of decedent's body is not error in homicide case, where photograph was not so gruesome as to create risk of inflaming jury and was relevant to manner in which murder occurred and therefore to issue of premeditation and deliberation and was also useful to show nature of injuries suffered by decedent, linking blood found on defendant's clothing to the crime. J. C. Womack v. United States. (D.C. App. 1975, 339 A.2d 37).

Testimony by accomplices as to statements which were made to them by defendant during commission of crimes charged in prosecutions for felony-murder, first-degree murder, armed robbery, robbery and second-degree burglary and which incriminated codefendants, were admissible under either exception to hearsay rule for contemporaneous declarations which partake of the event or exception for spontaneous declarations or excited utterances. United States v. I. E. Leonard (1974, 494 F. 2d 955, 161 U.S. App. D.C. 36).

In murder prosecution, wherein defendant proposed to take the stand first and then introduce a written statement which he had made to police officer that defendant had killed victim in self-defense, for purpose of corroborating what defendant was going to state on the stand, such statement was properly excluded at that time as hearsay and as corroborating an exculpatory statement that was self-serving. United States v. L. R. Smith (1974, 490 F. 2d 789, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 221).

In murder prosecution, trial court acted within its discretion in admitting two black and white photographs of inside of house showing where victim was standing when he was shot and where he fell, where photographs were probative of place where victim was shot, and were material on issues in the case. Id.

In murder prosecution, admission of testimony by decedent's wife that her marriage was trouble-free did not constitute plain error and hence was not reviewable, where no objection to its admission was made. Id.

Testimony concerning drugs and drug distribution was admissible in murder prosecution where it had a direct bearing on codefendant's previously being shot by the victim; such testimony was also admissible on question of defendant's motive to avenge codefendant's shooting. J. L. Jackson v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 329 A. 2d 782; cert. denied 96 S. Ct. 95, 423 U.S. 851).

Where, in prosecution of defendant for first-degree murder and carrying dangerous weapon, there was no claim of self-defense, suicide, accidental death or any other plausible issue that would justify inquiry into victim's state of mind, court committed prejudicial error in admitting testimony by victim's wife that victim was frightened that he might be killed by defendant. United States v. R. W. Brown (1973, 490 F. 2d 758, 162 U.S. App. D.C. 10).

— Character

In murder prosecution, there was no error in striking testimony of one witness presented to establish deceased's reputation for violence, where such testimony was cumulative as well as vague and uncertain. T. Hurt v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 337 A.2d 215).

— Disclosure to defense

Prosecutor's failure to provide defense in advance with lineup sheets showing two misidentifications or with four bullets found on defendant after his arrest was not reversible error where the lineup sheets showed that counsel for defendant was present at the lineups and the bullets were easily available to defense counsel in the Government's property office where counsel examined the money taken from his client, United States v. J. F. Bolden (1975, 514 F.2d 1301, 169 U.S. App. D.C. 60).

Evidence in proceeding on motion for new trial, or alternatively, dismissal of indictment, supported trial court's findings that the statements and testimony of witnesses whose statements were allegedly wrongfully withheld from the defense did not include evidence that was relevant or material or that would be helpful to the defense or tend to exculpate accused and that the disclosure to accused prior to trial of the statements would not have led to evidence that was relevant or material or that would tend to be exculpatory of murder and assault with intent to rob charges. United States v. D. J. Bowles (1973, 488 F. 2d 1307, 159 U.S. App. D.C. 407; cert. denied 94 S. Ct. 1591, 415 U.S. 991).

Where statements given by witnesses to police during murder investigation did not include evidence that was relevant or material or that would be helpful in the defense or tend to exculpate accused and the disclosure to accused prior to trial would not have led to evidence that was relevant or material or that would tend to be exculpatory, accused was not denied due process of law because the statements were withheld from the defense. Id.

— Expert testimony

Testimony of defense's expert witness was relevant and admissible to apprise jury of the factual foundation for the witness' conclusion and as evidence as to the credibility of that diagnosis. United States v. J. L. Peterson (1974, 509 F.2d 408, 166 U.S. App. D.C. 75).

— Mental disease or defect

In determining whether to admit evidence on issue whether a defendant's mental condition negated his ability to form the requisite mental state for first-degree murder, judge must determine whether the evidence is sufficiently grounded in scientific fact and whether it directly addresses the mental element at issue so that its introduction will not unduly distract or mislead the jury from the determination it must make. United States v. J. L. Peterson (1974, 509 F.2d 408, 166 U.S. App. D.C. 75).

Before admitting medical testimony on issue whether a defendant's mental condition negated his ability to form the requisite mental state for first-degree murder, court should insist on a complete proffer of the medical testimony. Id.

The introduction or proffer of past criminal and anti-social actions is not admissible as evidence of mental disease unless accompanied by expert testimony, supported by showing of the concordance of a responsible segment of professional opinion, that the particular characteristics of these actions constitute convincing evidence of an underlying mental disease that substantially impairs behavioral controls. United States v. A. W. Brawner (1972, 471 F. 2d 969, 153 U.S. App. D.C. 1).

— Sufficiency

Evidence supported implied finding that murder took place in course of robbery, in prosecution in which defendant contended that evidence was equally consistent with lawful possession of goods or with larceny after the homicide. J. C. Womack v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 339 A.2d 37).

In light of defendant's own admission, in murder prosecution, that he retrieved a pistol after fight with deceased and returned to the scene, where he waited approximately 30 minutes and then shot deceased, on ground that he "wasn't going to take no chance at that particular time," evidence failed to present an issue on provocation such as would reduce the offense to manslaughter. T. Hurt v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 337 A.2d 215).

Evidence as to circumstances surrounding and defendant's state of mind during stabbing of victim was sufficient on issue of deliberation and premeditation for submission of charge of first-degree murder. United States v. J. L. Peterson (1974, 509 F.2d 408, 166 U.S. App. D.C. 75).

Evidence that deceased's rings came into possession of one defendant immediately after deceased had been killed and evidence that defendant stated that she had gotten the rings from the victim and was going to keep them sustained conviction of both persons who kept the ring and person who aided in the murder for felony-murder on the basis of robbery. United States v. M. Mackin (1974, 502 F. 2d 429, 163 U.S. App. D.C. 427; cert. denied 95 S.Ct. 629, 419 U.S. 1052).

Evidence, including the testimony of an eyewitness involving all three defendants in the assault upon victim, was sufficient to support verdict of jury finding defendants guilty of felony-murder and assault with intent to commit rape while armed. United States v. B. J. Heinlein (1973, 490 F. 2d 725, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 157).

Identification

Knowledge on part of an eyewitness that persons on trial were arrested for crime may be taken into account for crime may be taken into account where there is other indication of suggestivity, but mere fact that suspects are included within lineup and that witnesses know or assume this to be the case is an inescapable aspect of lineup identification procedure and does not, without more, provide reason for exclusion of pretrial and in-court identifications. United States v. C. L. Pearson (1973, 478 F. 2d 659, 155 U.S. App. D.C. 455).

Pretrial and in-court identifications of defendant by eyewitness to crime were not subject to exclusion by reason of fact that investigating officer told witness at lineup that she had "done well," where there was no reason to suppose that officer's remark was more than a comforting gesture to witness, who was, quite naturally, on edge, and jury had before it testimony as to (slightly more tentative) lineup identification and was likely to credit this, which was uninfluenced by subsequent remark, far more than taken for granted in-court identification. Id.

Impeachment

Refusal, in criminal prosecution, to admit testimony regarding effect of drug use on perception for purposes of impeaching testimony of accomplice, who testified for government and who was a heroin user, unless it was established that accomplice had used narcotics on day of offenses was not error. United States v. I. E. Leonard (1974, 494 F. 2d 955, 161 U.S. App. D.C. 36).

Instructions

Where jury during deliberations sent questions to judge concerning felony-murder count, inquiring as to timing of formation of intent to rob, and trial court merely reread the murder statute and the standard instruction, and jury could have been left with impression that coincidence in time between murder and robbery was sufficient to support felony-murder conviction, there was error which could not be held harmless. United States v. J. F. Bolden (1975, 514 F.2d 1301, 169 U.S. App. D.C. 60).

In murder prosecution, in which it appeared that defendant shot another person six times at close range during a period of a minute to a minute and one-half, instruction defining malice as a state of mind showing a heart "regardless of social duty," rather than "regardless of the life and safety of others," as suggested in prior opinion of United States Court of Appeals, is not reversible error. T. Hurt v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 337 A.2d 215).

Instruction defining premeditation as "the formation of the intent to kill" was neither prejudicial nor plain error on theory that it equated premeditation with intent to kill. United States v. J. L. Peterson (1974, 509 F.2d 408, 166 U.S. App. D.C. 75).

Although inclusion in standard first-degree murder charge of insanity instruction that in determining whether premeditation and deliberation has been proved beyond a reasonable doubt the jury might consider the testimony as to the defendant's abnormal mental condition, coupled with instruction on role of an expert medical witness, would have been sufficient, giving of a more elaborate instruction which had been approved by defense counsel was not prejudicial and did not constitute plain error. Id.

In prosecution for felony murder against defendants who during armed robbery handcuffed 75-year-old victim who died on arrival at hospital shortly thereafter, instructions on felony-murder were not deficient in not requiring jury to find that death was a foreseeable result of defendants' behavior, since under this section malice is implied from commission of the robbery. United States v. J. R. Branic (1974, 495 F. 2d 1066, 162 U.S. App. D.C. 10).

Failure to give an accomplice instruction with regard to accomplices who testified for government was not plain error where nonaccomplice testimony corroborated accomplice testimony to significant extent against one accused and to lesser extent against another where accomplices did not appear to have extraordinary disposition to prevaricate. United States v. I. E. Leonard (1974, 494 F. 2d 955, 161 U.S. App. D.C. 36).

Refusal to instruct that testimony of accomplices, who testified for government after having been granted immunity, should be considered with caution was reversible error. Id.

Absent waiver of instruction, failure, in prosecution for felony-murder, first-degree murder, armed robbery, robbery and second-degree burglary, to give immediate limiting instruction as to admissibility where testimony of arresting officer was admitted to impeach defendant's testimony that he had not stated that codefendant "lived across the street" was plain error requiring reversal, though general instruction on impeachment evidence was given in very long charge. Id.

In prosecution for first-degree murder and carrying dangerous weapon, jury instruction on sanity which stated that defendant would be immediately committed for mental examination, after which there would be another judicial determination as to whether he was suffering from mental illness at that time and whether he was dangerous to himself and others, and that if defendant was found to be suffering from mental illness but was not dangerous to himself or others he would be released from hospital, was proper. United States v. R. W. Brown (1973, 490 F. 2d 758, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 190).

Where hearsay statement circumstantially probative of declarant's state of mind involves extraneous factual elements, limiting instruction must always accompany its introduction into issue to insure that such factual matters are considered solely on issue of declarant's mental state and not for truth of matters contained therein. Id.

Felony-murder instruction which has been used in the District of Columbia jurisdiction, as well as the one proposed for use by the Junior Bar Association, reflects an understanding that the statute embraces occasions when the jury may properly be urged to find that the homicidal act fell outside the scope of the felonious crime which the parties undertook to commit; accordingly, it was error for the trial court to forbid defense counsel to argue to the jury that the fatal stabbing of the victim by one of the defendants was an unexpected response to his being slapped in the face by the victim, was independent of any common purpose to rape, and was without the scope of the felonious crime which the three defendants undertook to commit. United States v. B. J. Heinlein (1973, 490 F. 2d 725, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 157).

Instruction that Government was required to prove that accused was of sound memory and discretion was not required in prosecution for violation of this section pertaining to felony murder. United States v. L. Greene (1973, 489 F. 2d 1145, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 21; cert. denied 95 S. Ct. 239, 419 U.S. 977).

Aiding and abetting instruction in felony-murder prosecution, in which defendants obtained instruction on second-degree murder as lesser included offense, was not reversible error for failure to instruct that defendants should be acquitted of second degree murder unless Government proved aiding and abetting in homicide as a specific crime, separate and apart from robbery. United States v. L. T. Robinson (1973, 475 F. 2d 376, 154 U.S. App. D.C. 265).

Court's instruction on second degree murder as lesser included offense of felony-murder was properly given where evidence so warranted and where defendants made timely request therefor. Id.

Evidence submitted is gauge against which propriety of lesser included offense instructions must be measured, but quantum of proof needed to justify giving instruction is but slight. Id.

Instruction that flight or running away does not "prove" guilt, given in preference to requested instruction that flight or concealment does not create presumption of guilt, was not prejudicial in view of instruction as whole. Id.

Joinder

Charges against defendant, accused of first-degree murder, and codefendant, charged with being an accessory after the fact by threatening a material witness, were not improperly joined in a single indictment, in view of allegation that defendants jointly participated in the same act; fact that count against codefendant was subsequently dismissed for lack of evidence did not infect the joinder itself. J. L. Jackson v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 329 A. 2d 782; cert. denied 96 S. Ct. 95, 423 U.S. 851).

Jury

Exclusion of several prospective jurors for cause when they stated that their opposition to capital punishment was such that they would be unable to render a fair and impartial verdict as to defendant's guilt or innocence of first-degree murder was not prejudicial absent evidence that jurors who were seated and who convicted defendant of second-degree murder were not fair and impartial. United States v. A. L. Marshall (1972, 471 F. 2d 1051, 153 U.S. App. D.C. 83).

Malice

Malice aforethought is an element common to first and second-degree murder; the distinguishing feature between the crimes being that first-degree murder includes the elements of premeditation and deliberation while second-degree murder does not. J. L. Butler v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 322 A. 2d 279).

Malice may be established by either of two standards: first, a subjective standard, asking whether defendant actually intended or foresaw that death or serious bodily harm would result from his act; and second, an objective, "reasonable man" standard, asking whether defendant should have foreseen that such result was likely, and it is for jury to determine whether requisite state of mind or negligent pattern of behavior existed. P. Belton v. United States (1967, 382 F. 2d 150, 127 U.S. App. D.C. 201).

Mental capacity

Jury may consider whether a defendant's mental condition negated his ability to form the requisite mental state for first-degree murder. United States v. J. L. Peterson (1974, 509 F.2d 408, 166 U.S. App. D.C. 75).

Question of defendant's mental responsibility for act of shooting another was for jury in prosecution for first-degree murder. United States v. A. L. Marshall (1972, 471 F. 2d 1051, 153 U.S. App. D.C. 83).

On appeal from first degree murder conviction, defense of diminished responsibility, based on contention that defendant's mental condition precluded premeditation, was rejected by panel of the Court of Appeals in light of prior rejection of that doctrine by the Court en banc and of affirmation by the Supreme Court of another judgment of the Court of Appeals rejecting such doctrine. United States v. B. A. Bryant (1972, 471 F. 2d 1040, 153 U.S. App. D.C. 72; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 923, 409 U.S. 1112).

Merger of offenses

Where charge of felony murder included every essential fact element of charge of rescue of a federal prisoner, there had been a merger and thus imposition of consecutive sentence for rescue offense was improper. United States v. L. Greene (1973, 489 F. 2d 1145, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 21; cert. denied 95 S.Ct. 239, 419 U.S. 977).

Miranda rights

Officer, who was investigating a homicide that occurred a few blocks from where defendant resided, who was looking for leads in hope that defendant might be of some assistance, and who did not suspect that defendant was implicated in murder and had no reason to do so, was not required to warn defendant about his right to counsel and to remain silent before talking to defendant at police lineup, and his failure to do so did not render all of defendant's subsequent statements to police on that day inadmissible. United States v. C. E. Wiggins (1975, 509 F.2d 454, 166 U.S. App. D.C. 121).

Plea

In considering whether to deny approval either to dismissal of cases outright or to a guilty plea to a lesser included offense, trial judge must provide reasonable exercise of discretion to justify departure from course agreed upon by prosecution and defense, and this involves fairness to the defense, such as protection against harassment, fairness to prosecution interest, as in avoiding disposition that does not serve due and legitimate prosecutorial interest, and protection of sentencing authority reserved to judge; judge's statement must identify particular interests that lead him to require defendant to go to trial. United States v. R. L. Ammidown (1973, 497 F. 2d 615, 162 U.S. App. D.C. 28).

Examination of record in which defendant, charged with first-degree murder and conspiracy to commit murder, reach an agreement with prosecution, to enter a plea of guilty to second-degree murder, in exchange for testifying in grand jury proceedings and pending trial of the alleged actual murderer who was believed by prosecution to be involved in another murder, showed that trial judge, who provided no statement of reasons, abused discretion by refusal to accept guilty plea to the second-degree murder charge following which defendant was convicted of the crimes of first-degree murder and felony-murder. Id.

Prosecutor's comments

Prosecutor's remark in closing argument that victim had been "shot down like a dog in the street" and his characterization of the killings as "executions" and "assassinations" were improper. United States v. W. L. DeLoach, Sr. (1974, 504 F. 2d 185, 164 U.S. App. D.C. 116; cert. denied 96 S. Ct. 2232, 426 U.S. —).

Although evidence in homicide prosecution did not directly support prosecutor's opening assertion that victim had distributed drugs for defendant, defendant was not substantially prejudiced by such unproven allegation where the statement was not repeated in closing argument and the trial judge carefully instructed the jury that the statements of counsel were not evidence and that their recollection of the evidence controlled. J. L. Jackson v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 329 A. 2d 782; cert. denied 96 S. Ct. 95, 423 U.S. 851).

Prosecutor's closing statement that defendant was exploiting his position at Narcotics Treatment Administration to make contacts in furtherance of his illegal drug activities did not constitute prejudicial error, notwithstanding that no evidence was introduced in homicide prosecution that defendant was actually using his position to make drug contacts, where considerable evidence had been introduced concerning extensive drug dealings of defendant and others and his counsel did not object to the remarks on the ground that they improperly suggested that his client was exploiting his position. Id.

Prosecutorial statements, in complex murder trial with numerous witnesses, to the effect that the government's version of the case was uncontested were not of such character that the jury would naturally and necessarily take them to be a comment on the failure of the accused to testify and court's allowing such statements did not amount to prejudicial error. T. Peoples v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 329 A. 2d 446).

Prosecutor's closing and rebuttal arguments which referred to defenses of insanity interposed by famous defendants in other cases and to actions of Hitler and Napoleon were improper and were so highly prejudicial as to require reversal. United States v. W. E. Hawkins (1973, 480 F. 2d 1151, 156 U.S. App. D.C. 259).

Where prosecutor's improper closing and rebuttal arguments were so highly prejudicial as to require reversal of conviction of defendant who relied upon insanity as a defense and was convicted of first-degree murder and assault with intent to kill while armed, judgment of conviction of codefendant, who was charged as an aider and abettor, asserted lack of intent to commit murder, and was convicted of second-degree murder, would also be nullified. Id.

Right to counsel

Denial of accused's request for assistance of counsel in presentation of motion for new trial based upon newly discovered evidence that principal prosecution witness had been offered leniency by United States attorney in exchange for his testimony against accused was within trial judge's discretion where issue concerning whether witness' testimony had been given voluntarily had been raised and passed upon in prior appeal and accused had known at time of trial that the United States attorney and witness had struck plea bargain which had been rejected. United States v. R. A. Lee (1975, 513 F.2d 423, 168 U.S. App. D.C. 165; cert. denied 96 S. Ct. 225, 423 U.S. 916).

Search and seizure

Seizure of work pants in defendant's apartment following his arrest in connection with rape and murder, and following inspection of pants which disclosed "what we thought to be blood" was permissible under plain view rule where pants were lying on clothes hamper at time of inspection and seizure. United States v. W. Sheard (1972, 473 F. 2d 139, 154 U.S. App. D.C. 9; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 2784, 412 U.S. 943).

Sentence

Imposition of three consecutive sentences of from 20 years to life for three convictions of murder in the first degree was improper where the three convictions arose from same killing. United States v. R. A. Lee (1975, 513 F.2d 423, 168 U.S. App. D.C. 165; cert. denied 96 S. Ct. 225, 423 U.S. 916).

While dual convictions of defendant for first-degree murder and premeditated murder arising out of one killing was permissible, defendant could not be given consecutive sentences for both. United States v. R. L. Ammidown (1973, 497 F. 2d 615, 162 U.S. App. D.C. 28).

Severance

Grant of severance was not required on ground that defendant could have called codefendant to testify that defendants were not together when homicide and robbery occurred where there was no intimation that codefendant would have been willing to testify at defendant's trial, and if codefendant were to testify, Government's impeaching statement which was inculpatory of defendant would probably have surfaced. United States v. J. F. Bolden (1975, 514 F.2d 1301, 169 U.S. App. D.C. 60).

Refusal to grant severance in prosecution for felony-murder, first-degree murder, armed robbery, robbery and second-degree burglary, was not prejudicial to defendant due to fact that evidence placing a codefendant at scene of crime was quantitatively and qualitatively greater than evidence against defendant where evidence against defendant was both substantial and compelling, jury was specifically instructed to determine guilt of each defendant by considering only his own conduct and evidence which applied to him and where verdicts demonstrated that jury fulfilled its obligation under charge. United States v. I. E. Leonard (1974, 494 F. 2d 955, 161 U.S. App. D.C. 36).

Fact that there was conflict in accused's defenses, in that codefendants relied on separate alibi defenses and defendant admitted his presence at scene of offenses and in that such defendant's efforts to discredit testimony that he and a codefendant knocked out victim assertedly undermined such codefendant's alibi defense and fact that defendant did not testify and thus codefendants were precluded from cross-examining him did not so prejudice codefendants as to render refusal to grant severance an abuse of discretion where damaging implications of defendant's defense were corroborated by substantial testimony. Id.

Admission, in criminal prosecution in which a defendant did not testify, of admissible testimony as to such defendant's hearsay statements which incriminated codefendants did not require severance on ground that admission violated codefendants' right of confrontation where, even if codefendants were tried separately, such testimony would have been admissible and defendant probably would have invoked Fifth Amendment, where there was substantial other eyewitness testimony incriminating codefendants and where, since defendant was an accomplice, reliability of his hearsay declaration was "inevitably suspect." Id.

Where count of indictment charging defendant with carrying pistol on day of his arrest was dismissed for failure of proof before case was submitted to jury and indictment was retyped, omitting count, defendant was not prejudiced by court's refusal to sever such properly joined count from counts charging felony murder, first-degree burglary and armed robbery. United States v. J. M. Joyner (1974, 492 F. 2d 650, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 384; cert. denied 95 S. Ct. 94, 419 U.S. 852).

Refusal to sever defendant's case from that of codefendant, who allegedly would not testify in behalf of defendant if severance were not granted, was not abuse of discretion where codefendant was not a witness to the shooting itself and although he could have refuted testimony of state's witness that he had discussed the crime with defendant prior to the shooting, thereby offering testimony on issue of premeditation, defendant's cross-examination cast strong doubt on such witness' credibility and defendant took the stand and denied that such discussion ever occurred. J. L. Jackson v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 329 A. 2d 782; cert. denied 96 S. Ct. 95, 423 U.S. 851).

In prosecution of defendants on murder and rape charges, trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying motion of defendant brothers for a severance from codefendant, who had fatally stabbed the victim, notwithstanding defendants' claim that the evidence against the codefendant was much stronger than the evidence against them. United States v. B. J. Heinlein (1973, 490 F. 2d 725, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 157).

Although defendant relied on alibi defense and codefendant maintained that defendant and he had been drinking at lounge and that defendant and victim had gone into parking lot by themselves before stabbing occurred, defendants were not prejudiced by joint trials on theory of irreconcilable defenses, where such defenses were subject to scrutiny on cross-examination, alibi defense was contradicted by witness' testimony and evidence that victim's type of blood had been found on defendant's shoe and jury was instructed to consider evidence individually against defendant and codefendant. United States v. W. C. Hurt (1973, 476 F. 2d 1164, 155 U.S. App. D.C. 217).

Witnesses

Trial court, which denied a defense motion during trial to have key prosecution witness, who was a chronic alcoholic, subjected to a psychiatric examination with respect to his competency, did not abuse its discretion in refusing to treat the witness as a person of actual or potential incompetency, notwithstanding the claims of defendants, in support of their motion, that the testimony given by the witness was highly confusing and that hospital records indicated he had a clinical history which rendered him wholly unreliable. United States v. B. J. Heinlein (1973, 490 F. 2d 725, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 157).

Discretion of trial court to grant pretrial physical or mental examination of prospective witnesses should not be exercised in absence of substantial factual predicate for the same and upon substantial showing of need and justification. United States v. D. T. Butler (1971, 325 F. Supp. 886; aff'd 481 F. 2d 531, 156 U.S. App. D.C. 356).

In absence of substantial showing of need and justification, hearing on defense motion for pretrial physical and psychiatric examination of prospective government witnesses would not be continued to allow defendant to subpoena one of the witnesses, despite allegation that such witness had told defense counsel that witness was narcotic addict. Id.

— Discovery

Court had power to order Government in first-degree murder prosecution to produce names of alleged eyewitnesses to crime for use by the defense, where eyewitnesses were passersby on street, defense counsel satisfied requirement of materiality by establishing that he was unable to locate eyewitnesses, such witnesses were necessary for preparation of defense, discovery of eyewitnesses was not so burdensome as to be unreasonable, Government was given opportunity to oppose discovery motion, and safeguards for witnesses were provided in conditions imposed in court's order. United States v. W. J. Holmes (D.C. App. 1975, 343 A.2d 272; rehearing denied 346 A.2d 517).

§ 22-2403. Murder in second degree.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Assistance of counsel

In prosecution for second-degree murder, defense counsel's failure to obtain murder victim's prior criminal record, which contained convictions for carrying knives and would have arguably buttressed defendant's contention that she acted in self-defense, for reason that he believed that record was inadmissible, does not demonstrate ineffectiveness. United States v. L. Agurs (1976, 96 S. Ct. 2392, — U.S. —; rev'g 510 F. 2d 1249, 167 U.S. App. D.C. 28).

Assistance of defense counsel was not inadequate because of refusal, on tactical and other grounds, to cross-examine the Government's principal witness who was 15 years old at time of offense and 16 at time of trial because of some of the vacillations in her testimony, some contradictions and unwillingness to testify and fear for reprisals for her testimony since such factors were apparent to jury and they went to issue of her credibility and jury was a proper tribunal to weigh and consider them. United States v. J. Clayborne (1974, 509 F.2d 473, 166 U.S. App. D.C. 140).

Defendant was not denied his Sixth Amendment right to assistance of counsel because the court's refusal to admit defendant's statements at start of his testimony regarding what he had stated to police officer shortly after the murder made it impossible for the defendant to present his case "in the best light legally possible." United States v. L. R. Smith (1974, 490 F. 2d 789, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 221).

Bifurcated trial

Where defendant who was charged with murder and carrying a dangerous weapon contended during guilt phase of bifurcated trial that his killing of victim was due to rational belief that it was necessary because victim had threatened him with serious bodily harm, likelihood of prejudice was sufficient to require that second jury hear defendant's insanity defense. United States v. J. Taylor (1975, 510 F.2d 1283, 167 U.S. App. D.C. 62; rehearing denied 516 F.2d 1243, 170 U.S. App. D.C. 315).

Written verdict form which was submitted to and used by jury in insanity phase of bifurcated trial and which gave jury choice of determining whether to adhere to decision previously reached, namely, that defendant was guilty of second-degree murder and carrying a dangerous weapon, or to find defendant not guilty by reason of insanity tended somewhat to confuse two distinct issues of bifurcated trial and was improper. Id.

Confessions

Avowed conscious desire to cooperate with police is not the sort of compulsion that undermines voluntariness. United States v. A. Cox (1974, 509 F.2d 390, 166 U.S. App. D.C. 57).

Defendant did not establish that he lacked capacity to make knowing and intelligent waiver of Miranda rights, despite claims that he had insufficient education to comprehend significance of warnings and lacked capacity to make knowing waiver because he was intoxicated at time of interrogation, in view of his reading and discussion of warning form before judge and lack of testimony to support assertion of intoxication. Id.

Conviction of lesser offense

Where trial court, in prosecution for second-degree murder, gave full and proper instructions on self-defense and evidence was such that refusal to give manslaughter instruction constituted reversible error, case is an appropriate one for the Government to consider its consent to entry of judgment of guilty of manslaughter on remand and for the trial court to consider such a final disposition. B. L. Pendergrast v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 332 A.2d 919).

Defense

Where only evidence linking defendant with homicides was testimony of confessed accessory who was granted immunity, defendant's theory that accessory committed the killings and lied about defendant to cover up his own guilt was supported by testimony of eye-witnesses who described a man fitting accessory's description as being near scene of crimes, and defense counsel's closing argument seeking to present such theory did not supplement or mistate the record but merely suggested that jury draw certain inferences, restriction of closing argument so as to prevent defense counsel from suggesting that accessory committed the murders impaired defendant's constitutional right to a closing argument in his behalf and was not harmless beyond reasonable doubt. United States v. W. L. DeLoach, Sr. (1974, 504 F. 2d 185, 164 U.S. App. D.C. 116; cert. denied 96 S. Ct. 2232, 426 U.S. —).

Reindictment of defendants for first-degree murder, after their first trial on charge of second-degree murder had ended with a declaration of mistrial granted on motion of defense counsel, denied defendants due process of law, absent any showing of justification for the increase in the degree of the crime charged. United States v. C. Jamison, Jr. (1974, 505 F. 2d 407, 164 U.S. App. D.C. 300).

Since it could not be said that defendants, whose first trial on charge of second-degree murder ended with a declaration of mistrial and who were then reindicted and found guilty on charge of first-degree murder, were not prejudiced by having to defend, on the retrial, against the higher, illegal charge, the Court of Appeals would not, under those circumstances, remand the case with directions to simply enter convictions for second-degree murder. Id.

Elements of offense

Murder in the first degree is intentional homicide done deliberately and with premeditation, and homicide that is intentional but "impulsive," not done after "reflection and meditation", is murder in the second degree. United States v. A. W. Brawner (1972, 471 F. 2d 969, 153 U.S. App. D.C. 1).

Evidence—Abnormal mental condition

Even when there is no defense of insanity, expert testimony of abnormal mental condition will be admissible when it bears on the existence of specific mental element necessary for a crime, provided trial judge determines that the testimony is grounded in sufficient scientific support, and would aid jury in reaching decision on ultimate issues; overruling Fisher v. United States, 80 U.S. App. D.C. 96, 149 F. 2d 28. United States v. A. W. Brawner (1972, 471 F. 2d 969, 153 U.S. App. D.C. 1).

A defendant who presents evidence that his abnormal condition of the mind has substantially impaired behavioral controls is exculpated if his behavioral controls were not only substantially impaired but were impaired to such extent that he lacked substantial capacity to conform his conduct to the law. Id.

— Admissibility

Government's efforts to locate critical witness were insufficient and failed to justify, on ground of witness' "unavailability," the admission of her preliminary hearing testimony, where she was physically and mentally capable of testifying and was apparently within court's jurisdiction, where the prosecution never represented that she expressed any unwillingness to testify, where the prosecution, in attempting to locate her, failed to inquire at local hospitals or area police departments, and where the Government admitted that its efforts were limited because of a shortage of available policemen. United States v. P. Lynch (1974, 499 F. 2d 1011, 163 U.S. App. D.C. 6).

Given trial context and lack of objection, no prejudicial error was established in trial court's refusal to admit arrest record of deceased, in homicide prosecution, there being no crime of violence on such record. United States v. M. E. Perkins (1974, 498 F. 2d 1054, 162 U.S. App. D.C. 321).

Given trial context and lack of objection, no prejudicial error was established in admission of testimony, in homicide prosecution, as to defendant's postarrest statement, no question having been raised at trial that statement should be paraphrased by detective rather than read. Id.

In murder prosecution, wherein defendant proposed to take the stand first and then introduce a written statement which he had made to police officer that defendant had killed victim in self-defense, for purpose of corroborating what defendant was going to state on the stand, such statement was properly excluded at that time as hearsay and as corroborating an exculpatory statement that was self-serving. United States v. L. R. Smith (1974, 490 F. 2d 789, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 221).

In murder prosecution, trial court acted within its discretion in admitting two black and white photographs of inside of house showing where victim was standing when he was shot and where he fell, where photographs were probative of place where victim was shot, and were material on issues in the case. Id.

In murder prosecution, admission of testimony by decedent's wife that her marriage was trouble-free did not constitute plain error and hence was not reviewable, where no objection to its admission was made. Id.

In view of overwhelming evidence of malice aforethought, premeditation and deliberation, error in allowing defendant's daughter to testify that she had stated to defendant, immediately following the killing, that defendant had threatened deceased before and he had meant to do it was harmless beyond a reasonable doubt. J. L. Butler v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 322 A. 2d 279).

Evidence that defendant had previously beaten his child was admissible in prosecution for causing death of the child. United States v. M. L. Grady (1973, 481 F. 2d 1106, 157 U.S. App. D.C. 6).

Although advisability of permitting certain testimony, including descriptions of victim's neck wound, might be in doubt, taken as a whole there was no abuse of discretion in permitting evidence of murder of seven-year-old girl to be introduced, where Government's proof went both to establishing elements of crime and to showing circumstantially that defendant perpetrated crime in a manner inconsistent with his defense of insanity, and its probative value thus sufficiently outweighed danger of unfair prejudice to justify its admission. United States v. J. L. Cockerham (1973, 476 F. 2d 542, 155 U.S. App. D.C. 97).

Handwritten statement which defendant made to a psychologist who appeared as an expert witness for defense, who used statement in court to refresh his recollection, and who acknowledged that the statement was a part of basis for his diagnosis was not inadmissible, being an appropriate subject for cross-examination and especially important for proper jury consideration of insanity defense. Id.

Admission of evidence of defendant's sexual assault on decedent did not constitute reversible error by reason of fact that court eventually dismissed indecent liberties charge for insufficient evidence, a claim defendant had made in his pretrial motion, where record revealed sufficient medical evidence to support decision to allow Government to proceed with its case in first instance, and testimony it brought forth merely added testimony it brought forth merely added detail to what jury was aware of generally from defendant's own admissible statement to a psychologist. Id.

In prosecution for murder, deceased's prior conviction based on plea of guilty to an indictment that charged that deceased did "beat, abuse and otherwise willfully maltreat" his six-year-old son was admissible to prove deceased's violent character and court's barring of the evidence was improper. United States v. J. H. Burks (1972, 470 F. 2d 432, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 284).

Evidence of the deceased's violent character, including evidence of specific violent acts, is admissible where a claim of self-defense is raised and such evidence is relevant on the issue of who was the aggressor and, where there is evidence that defendant knew of deceased's character, on the issue of whether or not defendant reasonably feared he was in danger of imminent great bodily injury. Id.

Where defense attempted to introduce evidence of deceased's violent and dangerous character, specifically evidence that deceased had killed his own six-year-old son in 1965, through testimony of deceased's wife and neither privilege of husband or wife not to testify for or against the other nor privilege not to reveal confidential marital communications was applicable, court erred in barring the testimony and where defendant's sole defense was self-defense such error was prejudicial. Id.

— Character

Where alleged rape of witness' wife by defendant, who was charged with second-degree murder, was already before jury, having been adduced both by prosecutor and by defense counsel, trial judge immediately instructed jury to disregard incompetent testimony of government witness called in rebuttal on issue of character as to alleged rape of witness' wife by defendant, and at close of Government's case court cautioned jury as to weight to be accorded character evidence that had been introduced, such incompetent testimony is not reversible error. C. N. Lloyd, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 333 A.2d 387).

—Circumstantial

That Government's evidence is largely circumstantial is no bar to its sufficiency. United States v. A. Cox (1974, 509 F.2d 390, 166 U.S. App. D.C. 57).

In view of trial context and lack of objection, no prejudicial error was established when trial court permitted prosecutor, in homicide prosecution, to ask as to character of deceased, after defense counsel had initiated this line of inquiry. United States v. M. E. Perkins (1974, 498 F. 2d 1054, 162 U.S. App. D.C. 321).

—Disclosure to defense

Prosecutor's failure to tender second-degree murder victim's criminal record to defense did not deprive defendant of fair trial where it appeared that record was not requested by defense counsel and gave no rise to inference of perjury, trial judge remained convinced of defendant's guilt beyond reasonable doubt after considering criminal record in context of entire record, and trial judge's firsthand appraisal of entire record was thorough and entirely reasonable. United States v. L. Agurs (1976, 96 S. Ct. 2392, — U.S. —; rev'g 510 F. 2d 1249, 167 U.S. App. D.C. 28).

—Expert testimony

Before copies of paintings of well-known artists could be exhibited to jury for purpose of refuting appropriateness of defense psychiatrist's use of paintings of defendant in aid of diagnosing his mental condition, paintings of defendant, if available, should have been exhibited to jury for comparison. United States v. J. Taylor (1975, 510 F.2d 1283, 167 U.S. App. D.C. 62; rehearing denied 516 F.2d 1243, 170 U.S. App. D.C. 315).

—Insanity

Where defendant's brother and sister, through contacts with defendant over period of years prior to shooting of defendant's wife, had a proper foundation for expressing an opinion as to defendant's sanity, and from time defendant was indicted he had been continuously confined in hospital and had been diagnosed as suffering from paranoid schizophrenia, it could not be said that failure to permit brother and sister to give their lay opinions as to defendant's sanity did not seriously prejudice defendant. United States v. G. E. Pickett (1972, 470 F. 2d 1255, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 346).

—Mental disease or defect

The introduction or proffer of past criminal and antisocial actions is not admissible as evidence of mental disease unless accompanied by expert testimony, supported by showing of the concordance of a responsible segment of professional opinion, that the particular characteristics of these actions constitute convincing evidence of an underlying mental disease that substantially impairs behavioral controls. United States v. A. W. Brawner (1972, 471 F. 2d 969, 153 U.S. App. D.C. 1).

—Rebuttal

Where defendant in second-degree murder prosecution himself contended in his direct testimony that he had only recently begun carrying gun, trial court did not err in allowing prosecution thereafter to introduce rebuttal testimony indicating that defendant had been carrying gun for at least three weeks prior to shooting of victim. C. R. Curry v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 322 A. 2d 268).

—Sufficiency

Evidence that defendant was armed and was threatening one individual with serious bodily injury, that he was aware that he was being followed by uniformed special officer and that defendant turned and shot uniformed officer was sufficient, apart from issue of mental responsibility, to support verdict finding defendant guilty of second-degree murder of the officer and of carrying a dangerous weapon. United States v. J. Taylor (1975, 510 F.2d 1283, 167 U.S. App. D.C. 62; rehearing denied 516 F.2d 1243, 170 U.S. App. D.C. 315).

In murder prosecution against two defendants one of whom shot the victim, evidence including showing of continuous association of codefendant with defendant who shot the victim, their furtive consultation immediately preceding the murder and codefendant's holding of bags of valuables that other defendant carried moments earlier and standing close by while the defendant fought with and shot the victim sustained conviction of second-degree murder. United States v. J. Clayborne (1974, 509 F.2d 473, 166 U.S. App. D.C. 140).

Evidence sustained conviction for second-degree murder, although it was largely circumstantial. United States v. A. Cox (1974, 509 F. 2d 390, 166 U.S. App. D.C. 57).

Impeachment

No improper impeachment of defendant in second-degree murder prosecution took place when prosecutor inquired as to previous terms of imprisonment served by defendant only after prisoner had already testified to such confinements in his direct testimony. C. R. Curry v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 322 A. 2d 268).

Indictment

Except in extraordinary circumstances, an indictment is not open to challenge on ground that it was not supported by adequate evidence. United States v. A. L. Marshall (1972, 471 F. 2d 1051, 153 U.S. App. D.C. 83).

Inferences

In prosecution for second-degree murder arising from shooting incident, jury could consider defendant's prior aggressive behavior toward deceased during altercation which had occurred an hour prior to the shooting incident and could infer that defendant had harbored malice toward the deceased or that defendant had been more likely to have been the aggressor in the subsequent encounter and could consider such evidence in weighing defendant's testimony that deceased had instigated the fatal confrontation. United States v. L. R. Grover (1973, 485 F. 2d 1039, 158 U.S. App. D.C. 260).

Where evidence suggested that defendant might have been unable to control himself at time he committed murder and other bizarre acts, trial court characterized acts as "impulsive and frenzied" when it reduced charge from first-degree to second-degree murder, defense counsel believed insanity defense appropriate but refused to raise it only because defendant prohibited him from doing so, reason for defendant's opposition was the belief that insanity defense would impugn on the credibility of his racial and political views and testimony of two of four physicians who examined defendant expressed views supportive of insanity plea, trial court acted properly in ordering hearing to determine if insanity defense should be raised sua sponte. United States v. T. L. Robertson (1974, 507 F. 2d 1148, 165 U.S. App. D.C. 325).

Where trial court at hearing to determine whether court should sua sponte raise insanity defense, which defendant refused to raise, heard only the conclusory medical testimony of two psychiatrists opposing imposition of defense and did not probe the basis of their conclusions as to defendant's sanity and court did not entertain testimony of other two examining psychiatrists who found defendant mentally ill and where trial court did not set forth in reasonable detail reasons for ultimate determination not to raise insanity defense, case would be remanded for court to hear testimony of psychiatrist who did not testify and make a complete statement as to reasons for determination. Id.

Instructions

Evidence, including defendant's testimony that he had seen victim wave his gun earlier on date of incident at issue and that he knew that victim had previously shot someone else in the neighborhood, as well as testimony that heated words were exchanged at fateful meeting of defendant and victim and that victim was moving his hand toward his pocket when defendant struck him with baseball bat, constituted some evidence that defendant lacked requisite malice for second degree murder; hence, failure to give requested instruction on lesser included offense of manslaughter is reversible error. B. L. Pendergrast v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 332 A. 2d 919).

In murder prosecution, the trial court properly denied a missing witness instruction with respect to the absence of a certain person as he was not within the "peculiar" control of the Government, and the court also properly refused to allow defense to comment on his absence. United States v. J. Clayborne (1974, 509 F. 2d 473, 166 U.S. App. D.C. 140).

Any error in instructions on recklessness as basis for criminal responsibility for homicide was not plain error, reviewable without objection, and was not substantially prejudicial. United States v. A. Cox (1974, 509 F. 2d 390, 166 U.S. App. D.C. 57).

In homicide prosecution, malice instruction was incorrect insofar as instructing that wrongful act if intentionally done is done with malice aforethought, and was also erroneous in defining malice as state of mind showing a heart regardless of social duty. United States v. M. E. Perkins (1974, 498 F. 2d 1054, 162 U.S. App. D.C. 321).

Instructing jury that it could recommend psychiatric treatment if it returned a guilty verdict was improper, in a case where sole issue was question of criminal responsibility. United States v. S. R. Patrick (1974, 494 F. 2d 1150, 161 U.S. App. D.C. 231).

Plain error in instructions did not occur in second-degree murder prosecution where instructions given were standard instructions on manslaughter and second-degree murder and no objection was made to charge. C. R. Curry v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 322 A. 2d 268).

Trial court's instruction in second degree murder prosecution that "'malice' is a state of mind showing a heart regardless of social duty," was harmless error where death was caused by knife wound. United States v. M. H. Hinkle (1973, 487 F. 2d 1205, 159 U.S. App. D.C. 334).

It is improper in homicide prosecution to instruct that "malice" is state of mind showing heart regardless of social duty, a mind deliberately bent on mischief, a generally depraved, wicked and malicious spirit. Id.

Evidence in second-degree murder prosecution did not warrant submission to the jury of the issue of the difference in the nature of recklessness required for second-degree murder, and that required for manslaughter. Id.

In prosecution for second-degree murder, trial court's omission to instruct on qualification to general rule that defense of self-defense is not available to one who provokes difficulty was not improper where there had been no request for such instruction and no testimony that defendant had been aggressor during incident and then retreated and no such version of incident should naturally have suggested itself to trial judge. United States v. L. R. Grover (1973, 485 F. 2d 1039, 158 U.S. App. D.C. 260).

Failure of trial court to clarify instruction that defense of self-defense is not available to one who provokes difficulty by informing jury that, in determining whether defendant had been aggressor, they were not to consider his conduct at time of earlier altercation which had taken place an hour prior to shooting was not prejudicial where earlier altercation had not loomed large at trial and possible ambiguity of instruction as given was offset by its context. Id.

Evidence indicating that defendant's beating of his child was not in a passion of hate and rage but with an intent to discipline that was carried to such unreasonable extremes as to involve a "gross deviation" and extreme risk of harm and death warranted instruction on manslaughter, where jury could have found that defendant indicted for murder lacked the kind of awareness of risk involved in the malice requirement of murder. United States v. M. L. Grady (1973, 481 F. 2d 1106, 157 U.S. App. D.C. 6).

Aiding and abetting instruction in felony-murder prosecution, in which defendants obtained instruction on second-degree murder as lesser included offense, was not reversible error for failure to instruct that defendants should be acquitted of second degree murder unless Government proved aiding and abetting in homicide as a specific crime, separate and apart from robbery. United States v. L. T. Robinson (1973, 475 F. 2d 376, 154 U.S. App. D.C. 265).

Court's instruction on second degree murder as lesser included offense of felony-murder was properly given where evidence so warranted and where defendants made timely request therefor. Id.

Evidence submitted is gauge against which propriety of lesser included offense instructions must be measured, but quantum of proof needed to justify giving instruction is but slight. Id.

Instruction that flight or running away does not "prove" guilt, given in preference to requested instruction that flight or concealment does not create presumption of guilt, was not prejudicial in view of instruction as whole. Id.

Instruction concerning distinction between manslaughter and second-degree murder and factors that will reduce offense of murder to manslaughter are appropriate only when defendant is charged with second-degree murder as well as manslaughter. United States v. G. Alexander and B. Murdock (1972, 471 F. 2d 923, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 371; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 541, 409 U.S. 1044).

Where there was evidence of provocation, instruction repeating that provocation must be adequate before defendant could be acquitted of second-degree murder and convicted instead of manslaughter and manslaughter instruction containing detailed statement of several issues which were clearly important for jury to consider when deciding whether to convict defendant of second-degree murder were confusing, but did not require reversal of conviction, where confusion might have prejudiced government as well as defendant. Id.

If defendant charged with second-degree murder is entitled to charge on lesser included offense of manslaughter, instructions must take a form which distinguish clearly between those factors which constitute defenses to second-degree murder and those which constitute the elements of manslaughter, and which clearly instruct jury that when defense to second-degree murder—adequate provocation, for example—is put in issue, government must prove its absence beyond a reasonable doubt. Id.

Court of Appeals stated sample instruction on provocation is to be given in cases in which accused is charged with second-degree murder and manslaughter and adequate provocation is put in issue. Id.

Where defendant is charged with second-degree murder and manslaughter, once some evidence of provocation is in the case, whether introduced by government or defense, defendant is entitled to instruction on provocation and manslaughter, burden of persuading jury of absence of provocation is on government, and jury is entitled to clear instruction to that effect. Id.

In prosecution for second-degree murder, wherein at first part of trial jury found that defendant had killed two people with malice, defendant, after expert witnesses testified at insanity hearing, was not entitled to instruction permitting jury to reopen question of malice and stating that mental unsoundness, although insufficient to entitle accused to acquittal under legal test of responsibility, may nevertheless be sufficient to prevent accused from forming malice aforethought and thus diminish defendant's responsibility or reduce the grade of the offense. Id.

In insanity hearing held in connection with prosecution for murder occurring after one of victims had made racial remark, instruction that "we are not concerned with a question of whether or not a man has a rotten social background," taken in context, amounted only to a reminder that issue was not the shortcomings of society generally, but rather defendant's criminal responsibility for illegal acts; such instruction did not require reversal on theory that it had effect of telling jury to disregard any evidence bearing upon conditions under which defendant's life had been lived. Id.

Jury

When a judge is asked whether jury can make a recommendation of leniency or treatment, he should inform the jury that it is the jury's responsibility to determine guilt or innocence on basis of evidence that has been presented, and that jury is not to consider the question of punishment in arriving at its verdict, and that if defendant is found guilty then the court will determine the appropriate sanction. United States v. S. R. Patrick (1974, 494 F. 2d 1150, 161 U.S. App. D.C. 231).

Exclusion of several prospective jurors for cause when they stated that their opposition to capital punishment was such that they would be unable to render a fair and impartial verdict as to defendant's guilt or innocence of first-degree murder was not prejudicial absent evidence that jurors who were seated and who convicted defendant of second-degree murder were not fair and impartial. United States v. A. L. Marshall (1972, 471 F. 2d 1051, 153 U.S. App. D.C. 83).

Fact that three of the jurors in defendant's case had served on jury which two days earlier had been "castigated" by another judge for rendering a verdict of not guilty did not result in reversible error. United States v. W. G. Kyle (1972, 469 F. 2d 547, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 141; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 920, 409 U.S. 1117).

Where prosecutor who knew that three jurors in case had served on a jury which only two days earlier had been "castigated" by another judge for rendering a verdict of not guilty was concerned primarily with jurors' unfavorable attitude to the prosecution rather than with the speculative effect of the comments of the previous judge, prosecutor's failure to transmit to defense counsel his knowledge that three jurors had been members of the previous jury and that previous jury had been scolded by the other judge was not ground for reversal of conviction. Id.

Malice

Even in absence of subjective intent to kill, malice may be determined by application of an objective standard, where conduct is reckless and wanton and a gross deviation from reasonable standard of care, of such nature that jury is warranted in inferring that defendant was aware of serious risk of death or serious bodily harm. United States v. A. Cox (1974, 509 F. 2d 390, 166 U.S. App. D.C. 57).

Malice aforethought is an element common to first and second-degree murder; the distinguishing feature between the crimes being that first-degree murder includes the elements of premeditation and deliberation while second-degree murder does not. J. L. Butler v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 322 A. 2d 279).

Malice, an essential element of second-degree murder, may be inferred from use of dangerous weapon such as gun. C. R. Curry v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 322 A. 2d 268).

"Malice" is state of mind showing a heart that is without regard for the life and safety of others. United States v. M. H. Hinkle (1973, 487 F. 2d 1205, 159 U.S. App. D.C. 334).

The term "malice" in second-degree murder includes recklessness where defendant had awareness of serious danger to life and displayed wanton disregard for human life. United States v. A. W. Brawner (1972, 471 F. 2d 969, 153 U.S. App. D.C. 1).

Evidence justified finding of malice warranting conviction of second-degree murder rather than manslaughter, in case arising out of shooting following one victim's racial remark, in view of testimony of surviving victims that all victims were standing motionless staring at codefendant's gun when defendant came in, drew his gun, and began firing. United States v. G. Alexander and B. Murdock (1972, 471 F. 2d 923, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 371; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 541, 409 U.S. 1044).

If malice is proved beyond reasonable doubt and no affirmative defense applies, defendant who kills a human being is guilty of murder; if malice is not proved, he is guilty of manslaughter. Id.

Malice may be established by either of two standards: first, a subjective standard, asking whether defendant actually intended or foresaw that death or serious bodily harm would result from his act; and second, an objective, "reasonable man" standard, asking whether defendant should have foreseen that such result was likely, and it is for jury to determine whether requisite state of mind or negligent pattern of behavior existed. P. Belton v. United States (1967, 382 F. 2d 150, 127 U.S. App. D.C. 201).

Mistrial

Fact that psychologist, on staff of government hospital, was unable to give legally admissible testimony about a court-ordered commitment to the hospital for examination did not entitle defendant to mistrial, where trial court did not terminate opportunity of defense to elicit competent testimony from psychologist, most, if not all, of difficulty was due to failure of communication, ending in evident mutual exasperation, between defense counsel and witness, and prejudice was minimal, since government psychiatrist testified concerning psychological testing. United States v. G. Alexander and B. Murdock (1972, 471 F. 2d 923, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 371; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 541, 409 U.S. 1044).

Prejudicial error

Court did not commit prejudicial error in prosecution for second-degree burglary when it made gratuitous comment during cross-examination of complaining witness to effect that there are any number of ways to open a lock without a key. J. P. Hazel v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 319 A. 2d 136).

Even if trial court committed prejudicial error in making gratuitous comment during burglary prosecution that there are any number of ways to open a lock without a key, any error was cured by court's instructing jury that it should not have made statement, that jury should disregard it, and that only evidence was that coming from witnesses. Id.

Prosecutor—Comments

Statement of prosecutor during insanity phase of bifurcated trial that defendant stopped when ordered to do so by police officer and, therefore, conformed his behavior to the requirements of the law was improper. United States v. J. Taylor (1975, 510 F. 2d 1283, 167 U.S. App. D.C. 62; rehearing denied 516 F. 2d 1243, 170 U.S. App. D.C. 315).

In prosecution for second-degree murder, allowing prosecutor's remarks made during closing and rebuttal arguments concerning alleged purchase of bootleg liquor by defendant for his grandfather and a horse race, which were not objected to at trial, to stand unmodified is not error, let alone "plain error" noticeable for first time on appeal. C. N. Lloyd, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 333 A. 2d 387).

Prosecutor's remark in closing argument that victim had been "shot down like a dog in the street" and his characterization of the killings as "executions" and "assassinations" were improper. United States v. W. L. DeLoach, Sr. (1974, 504 F. 2d 185, 164 U.S. App. D.C. 116; cert. denied 96 S. Ct. 2232, 426 U.S. —).

Prosecutor's closing and rebuttal arguments which referred to defenses of insanity interposed by famous defendants in other cases and to actions of Hitler and Napoleon were improper and were so highly prejudicial as to require reversal. United States v. W. E. Hawkins (1973, 480 F. 2d 1151, 156 U.S. App. D.C. 259).

Where prosecutor's improper closing and rebuttal arguments were so highly prejudicial as to require reversal of conviction of defendant who relied upon insanity as a defense and was convicted of first-degree murder and assault with intent to kill while armed, judgment of conviction of codefendant, who was charged as an aider and abettor, asserted lack of intent to commit murder, and was convicted of second-degree murder, would also be nullified. Id.

Where critical issue in homicide prosecution was matter of self-defense, action of government prosecutor in stating to subpoenaed defense witness, an eyewitness to killing, that such witness should see independent counsel and that if witness testified as indicated by other testimony then he could or would be prosecuted for carrying a concealed weapon, obstructing justice and as an accessory to murder was prejudicial to defendant who was entitled to have such witness put on stand without interference or intimidation by prosecutor, and interests of justice also required that the conviction of codefendant, who was convicted on theory of aiding and abetting defendant, should also be reversed. United States v. C. L. Smith (1973, 478 F. 2d 976, 156 U.S. App. D.C. 66).

Provocation

When defendant is charged with second-degree murder and manslaughter and defendant, or government, has introduced evidence of provocation, government must prove absence or inadequacy of provocation beyond a reasonable doubt and it should be explained to jury that provocation is not element of manslaughter, whether voluntary or involuntary, but a defense to second-degree murder. United States v. G. Alexander and B. Murdock (1972, 471 F. 2d 923, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 371; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 541, 409 U.S. 1044).

The government is not required to disprove provocation in its case in chief, unless its own evidence would support a finding of adequate provocation and, if defense introduces some evidence of provocation, government will have an opportunity to rebut. Id.

Self-defense

Defendant who threatened one individual with bodily harm and who was being pursued by uniformed special police officer had no right of self-defense to stand his ground and mortally wound the officer; situation between defendant and officer was of defendant's creation and placed him under obligation to indicate withdrawal from or abatement of confrontation. United States v. J. Taylor (1975, 510 F. 2d 1283, 167 U.S. App. D.C. 62; rehearing denied 516 F. 2d 1243, 170 U.S. App. D.C. 315).

Instigator of an encounter that ultimately proves fatal may claim self-defense if, prior to fatal blow, he has attempted in good faith to disengage himself from the altercation and has communicated his desire to do so to his opponent. United States v. L. R. Grover (1973, 485 F. 2d 1039, 158 U.S. App. D.C. 260).

Effect of disengagement of parties from altercation which had occurred one hour prior to fatal shooting was to restore them to status quo ante, deceased's privilege of self-defense as to earlier assault by defendant had dissipated at time of fatal shooting and any attack he might have launched upon defendant would have constituted unlawful retaliation; thus, any disability of defendant due to his prior aggression had been lifted at time of the fatal shooting and he was not precluded from raising defense of self-defense with respect to the fatal shooting. Id.

Severance

In order to assert that statement admissible solely against codefendants prejudicially implicated defendant, he must establish that statement admissible against codefendants directly implicated him, that statement was made by one whose interest was adversely affected and who was not government informant, and that statement itself was as powerfully incriminating as a confession, and there must be no independent evidence of guilt. M. Brabham v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 326 A.2d 254; cert. denied 95 S. Ct. 1993, 421 U.S. 989).

Admission of hearsay statement of codefendant that he, defendant and others were going to kill prosecution witness, did not so prejudicially affect defendant as to justify severance of his case. Id.

Although defendant relied on alibi defense and codefendant maintained that defendant and he had been drinking at lounge and that defendant and victim had gone into parking lot by themselves before stabbing occurred, defendants were not prejudiced by joint trials on theory of irreconcilable defenses, where such defenses were subject to scrutiny on cross-examination, alibi defense was contradicted by witness' testimony and evidence that victim's type of blood had been found on defendant's shoe and jury was instructed to consider evidence individually against defendant and codefendant. United States v. W. C. Hurt (1973, 476 F. 2d 1164, 155 U.S. App. D.C. 217).

Despite the 31-month delay between defendant's arrest and his trial, he was not denied his constitutional right to a speedy trial, where a major portion of the delay was caused by his own tactical maneuvering, where no intentional dilatory practices could be ascribed to the Government, where no demand for a speedy trial was made until most of the delay complained of had already occurred, and where only a tenuous demonstration of prejudice was shown. United States v. P. Lynch (1974, 499 F.2d 1011, 163 U.S. App. D.C. 6).

Variance

Although indictment alleged that defendant had shot another with a pistol, thereby causing injuries from which individual died, whereas proof established that fatal weapon was a sawed-off shotgun, where no suggestion was made that defendant was in any way prejudiced by mistake in indictment and, from statements of witnesses and grand jury testimony made available to him before trial, defendant knew what proof would be, variance was not fatal. United States v. A. L. Marshall (1972, 471 F. 2d 1051, 153 U.S. App. D.C. 83).

Witnesses

The refusal of the Government to supply a list of witnesses was harmless error where the only significant witness was known to the defense. United States v. J. Clayborne (1974, 509 F. 2d 473, 166 U.S. App. D.C. 140).

— Sequestration

Presence of prosecution witnesses in courtroom during voir dire and brief period of pretrial argument was not shown to constitute reversible error. United States v. G. Alexander and B. Murdock (1972, 471 F. 2d 923, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 371; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 541, 409 U.S. 1044).

§ 22-2404. Punishment for murder in first and second degrees.NOTES TO DECISIONS*Allocation

Where counsel and court at original sentencing of defendant were under mistaken view that defendant could not be sentenced under the Youth Corrections Act, and on remand for consideration of possibility of sentencing under the Youth Corrections Act defendant was not granted right of allocation, case would be remanded to trial court to afford defendant his right of allocation. United States v. W. Howard (1972, 470 F. 2d 374, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 226).

Death penalty

Sentence to death by electrocution was illegal. United States v. R. A. Lee (1973, 489 F. 2d 1242, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 118).

§ 22-2405. Punishment for manslaughter.NOTES TO DECISIONS*Confessions

Where defendant, before being charged or arrested for any crime and without interrogation or coercion of any sort, stated, in reply to police officer's mere request that he identify himself, that he had killed person at given address, statement was voluntarily given and admissible in evidence despite fact that defendant was admittedly inebriated at time statement was made. United States v. J. Bennett (1974, 495 F. 2d 943, 161 U.S. App. D.C. 363).

Conviction of lesser offense

Where trial court, in prosecution for second-degree murder, gave full and proper instructions on self-defense and evidence was such that refusal to give manslaughter instruction constituted reversible error, case is an appropriate one for the Government to consider its consent to entry of judgment of guilty of manslaughter on remand and for the trial court to consider such a final disposition. B. L. Pendergrast v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 332 A. 2d 919).

Defenses

Only defense to charge of causing another's death—aside from self-defense, insanity, duress and so forth—is that the homicide was inadvertent and that defendant's negligence, if any, was not sufficient to convict him of involuntary manslaughter. United States v. G. Alexander and B. Murdock (1972, 471 F. 2d 923, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 371; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 541, 409 U.S. 1044).

Definition of manslaughter

In absence of statutory definition, common-law definition of manslaughter is used in the District of Columbia. United States v. C. L. Pender (D.C. App. 1973, 309 A. 2d 492).

"Involuntary manslaughter" is a killing without justification or excuse. Id.

"Manslaughter" is the unlawful, that is, unexcused, killing of human being without malice. United States v. G. Alexander and B. Murdock (1972, 471 F. 2d 923, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 371; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 541, 409 U.S. 1044).

— Involuntary manslaughter

"Involuntary manslaughter" is unlawful killing which is unintentionally committed, that is, there is no intent to kill or to do bodily injury, and the crime may occur as result of an unlawful act which is a misdemeanor involving danger of injury, as result of a lawful act performed in an unlawful way, or as result of omission to perform a legal duty. United States v. D. Bradford (D.C. App. 1975, 344 A. 2d 208).

— Voluntary manslaughter

"Voluntary manslaughter" is unlawful killing committed with general intent to do the act which caused the death, rather than a specific intent to cause death; thus, even though accused did not intend to kill, he did intend to use such force against the decedent as would endanger him. United States v. D. Bradford (D.C. App. 1975, 344 A. 2d 208).

Evidence—Sufficiency

Evidence, including testimony of defendant that during a heated argument with her brother she went to kitchen for a knife in order to "scare him" and that she struck her brother with her fist as she was holding knife in her hand, was sufficient to support conviction of manslaughter. United States v. P. Dent (1973, 477 F. 2d 447, 155 U.S. App. D.C. 278).

Indictment—Separate counts

Although defendant can properly be charged with both voluntary manslaughter and involuntary manslaughter in same indictment, duplicitous count is improper in that, upon conviction, it would not be clear to which crime guilty verdict referred and thus what penalty should be imposed, it would hamper both judge and jury in considering evidence, general verdict of guilty would not reveal whether defendant was unanimously found guilty of all offenses charged, right of protection against double jeopardy might be violated and it might deny right to notice of nature and cause of accusation. United States v. D. Bradford (D.C. App. 1975, 344 A. 2d 208).

— Sufficiency

Indictment which alleged that the accused "feloniously, wantonly and with gross negligence" shot the deceased charged involuntary manslaughter only and was not sufficient, as claimed by government, to also charge voluntary manslaughter. United States v. C. L. Pender (D.C. App. 1973, 309 A. 2d 492).

Instructions

Instruction, in prosecution for manslaughter, to the effect that if the Government proved beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant did not act in self-defense he must be found guilty denied the defendant his right to a jury trial and was error. W. A. Baker v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 324 A. 2d 194).

Neither fact that other instructions in prosecution for manslaughter properly stated that the Government bore the burden of proof beyond reasonable doubt on all elements of the offense nor the weakness of the self-defense claim made harmless erroneous instruction which called for a guilty verdict if the Government proved beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant did not act in self-defense. Id.

Giving of instruction, which was made in response to jury request for explanation of manslaughter charge and in which jury was admonished that "they must recall all of the other instructions the court has given * * *, instructions with respect to reasonable doubt and self-defense * * * you can assume that I have repeated all those matters to you at this time and I will simply at this time discuss the elements of manslaughter," was not plain error. United States v. W. Jones (1973, 482 F. 2d 747, 157 U.S. App. D.C. 158).

Evidence indicating that defendant's beating of his child was not in a passion of hate and rage but with an intent to discipline that was carried to such unreasonable extremes as to involve a "gross deviation" and extreme risk of harm and death warranted instruction on manslaughter, where jury could have found that defendant indicted for murder lacked the kind of awareness of risk involved in the malice requirement of murder. United States v. M. L. Grady (1973, 481 F. 2d 1106, 157 U.S. App. D.C. 6).

Instructions providing, inter alia, that high degree of recklessness requisite to prove malice as an element of murder is distinguished from lesser recklessness constituting manslaughter by reason of quality of defendant's awareness of risk either actually or from showing of such danger that any reasonable person must have been aware of it were not prejudicially erroneous. United States v. P. Dent (1973, 477 F. 2d 447, 155 U.S. App. D.C. 278).

Instruction concerning distinction between manslaughter and second-degree murder and factors that will reduce offense of murder to manslaughter are appropriate only when defendant is charged with second-degree murder as well as manslaughter. United States v. G. Alexander and B. Murdock (1972, 471 F. 2d 923, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 371; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 541, 409 U.S. 1044).

Where there was evidence of provocation, instruction repeating that provocation must be adequate before defendant could be acquitted of second-degree murder and convicted instead of manslaughter and manslaughter instruction containing detailed statement of several issues which were clearly important for jury to consider when deciding whether to convict defendant of second-degree murder were confusing, but did not require reversal of conviction, where confusion might have prejudiced government as well as defendant. Id.

If defendant charged with second-degree murder is entitled to charge on lesser included offense of manslaughter, instructions must take a form which distinguish clearly between those factors which constitute defenses to second-degree murder and those which constitute the elements of manslaughter, and which clearly instruct jury that when defense to second-degree murder—adequate provocation, for example—is put in issue, government must prove its absence beyond a reasonable doubt. Id.

Court of Appeals stated sample instruction on provocation is to be given in cases in which accused is charged with second-degree murder and manslaughter and adequate provocation is put in issue. Id.

Where defendant is charged with second-degree murder and manslaughter, once some evidence of provocation is in the case, whether introduced by government or defense, defendant is entitled to instruction on provocation and manslaughter, burden of persuading jury of absence of provocation is on government, and jury is entitled to clear instruction to that effect. Id.

Jury question

Evidence generated jury question whether conduct of homicide defendant, who engaged in exchange of verbal aspersions on discovering victim attempting to remove windshield wipers from defendant's inoperative automobile while it was parked in alley behind defendant's house, who reentered house and immediately appeared with pistol, which he loaded in yard, and who walked to rear gate and, while displaying pistol, dared victim to come in and threatened to kill victim if he did, despite fact that victim had made preparations to depart, and who assertedly intended only to scare victim when he discharged weapon as victim came at him with lug wrench, was such an invitation to provocation of encounter as to overcome claim of self-defense. United States v. B. L. Peterson (1973, 483 F. 2d 1222, 157 U.S. App. D.C. 219; cert. denied 94 S.Ct. 367, 414 U.S. 1007).

Malice

If malice is proved beyond reasonable doubt and no affirmative defense applies, defendant who kills a human being is guilty of murder; if malice is not proved, he is guilty of manslaughter. United States v. G. Alexander and B. Murdock (1972, 471 F. 2d 923, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 371; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 541, 409 U.S. 1044).

Prejudicial error

Whether improper conduct of government counsel amounts to prejudicial error depends, in good part, on relative strength of government's evidence of guilt. United States v. W. Jones (1973, 482 F. 2d 747, 157 U.S. App. D.C. 158).

Cumulative effect of alleged errors in regard of failure to strike testimony of 12-year-old girl, whose testimony as to whether victim had gun was inconsistent, and with regard to prosecutor's comments as to girl's testimony, and of prosecutor's improper conduct, in calling accused an "executioner" and in expressing disbelief of accused's testimony, did not warrant reversal of manslaughter conviction. Id.

Provocation

When defendant is charged with second-degree murder and manslaughter and defendant, or government, has introduced evidence of provocation, government must prove absence or inadequacy of provocation beyond a reasonable doubt and it should be explained to jury that provocation is not element of manslaughter, whether voluntary or involuntary, but a defense to second-degree murder. United States v. G. Alexander and B. Murdock (1972, 471 F. 2d 923, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 371; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 541, 409 U.S. 1044).

The government is not required to disprove provocation in its case in chief, unless its own evidence would support a finding of adequate provocation and, if defense introduces some evidence of provocation, government will have an opportunity to rebut. Id.

Self-defense

Where homicide defendant could not be found without fault in bringing conflict on, in that following prior verbal exchange he had obtained pistol from his house and, while displaying weapon by back fence, dared victim to come in and threatened to kill victim if he did, defendant, who asserted that fatal shooting was in self-defense but who did not retreat when victim came at him with lug wrench, was not so blameless that he was entitled to fall back on the "castle" doctrine of no retreat before resorting to use of deadly force in repelling attack on one in his home. United States v. B. L. Peterson (1973, 483 F. 2d 1222, 157 U.S. App. D.C. 219; cert. denied 94 S. Ct. 367, 414 U.S. 1007).

Witnesses—Sequestration

Presence of prosecution witnesses in courtroom during voir dire and brief period of pretrial argument was not shown to constitute reversible error. United States v. G. Alexander and B. Murdock (1972, 471 F. 2d 923, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 371; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 541, 409 U.S. 1044).

Chapter 25.—PERJURY

§ 22-2501. Perjury—Subornation of perjury.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Attorneys

Counsel are not exempt from prosecution under statutes denouncing crimes of obstruction of justice and subornation of perjury. J. Herbert, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 340 A. 2d 802).

Chapter 26.—PRISON BREACH—MISPRISONS

§ 22-2601. Prison breach.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Abuse of discretion

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in failing to request presentence report, in prosecution for possession of narcotics paraphernalia and possession of dangerous drug, where information developed concerning defendant was sufficient so that judge could impose appropriate sentence without use of such report. C. E. Rosser v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 313 A. 2d 876).

Committed

Where defendant was released from pretrial custody on personal recognizance and on condition that he live in half-way house and participate in work release program, he was not "committed" within purview of this section. C. E. McMillian v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 326 A. 2d 241).

Constitutionality

Prosecution, under this section, of prisoner who escaped from custody in District of Columbia in Superior Court rather than in District Court did not deny prisoner due process or equal protection. L. A. Rivers v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 334 A. 2d 179).

Construction

This section does not apply outside District of Columbia. L. A. Rivers v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 334 A. 2d 179).

Penal institution

Defendants, who, in course of serving sentences for felonies, were transferred to a half-way house, were guilty of escape from penal institution when they left the half-way house and did not return. United States v. M. Venable (D.C. App. 1974, 316 A. 2d 857).

Prosecution

Misdemeanant who was placed in halfway house for participation in work release program due to administrative error rather than by court order required for valid placement, and who left and failed to return to halfway house, was properly prosecuted under this section which prescribes punishment for escape from penal institution rather than § 24-465 which prescribes punishment for violation of work release plan. J. E. Armstead v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 310 A. 2d 255).

§ 22-2603. Introducing contraband into penal institution.

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

Chapter 27.—PROSTITUTION—PANDERING

§ 22-2701. Prostitution—Inviting for purposes of, prohibited.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Assistance of counsel

Court-appointed counsel's failure to raise at trial issue of constitutionality of presumptively valid statute governing solicitation of prostitution did not amount to a violation of defendant's Sixth Amendment right to effective representation, where issue in decision of Superior Court judge allegedly holding statute unconstitutional was a purely legal one and not binding precedent and such case was on appeal. W. J. Angarano v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 312 A. 2d 295; reconsideration denied 329 A. 2d 453).

Constitutionality

Proscription by this section of solicitation for the purpose of prostitution does not constitute an unconstitutional invasion of the right of privacy of defendants who were arrested upon allegedly making solicitations of police officers for prostitution, with the solicitations presumably having been made in some public place. United States v. D. Moses et al. (D.C. App. 1975, 339 A. 2d 46; cert. denied 96 S. Ct. 2624, — U.S. —).

This section, prescribing solicitation for prostitution, deals not with speech protected by the First Amendment but with a straightforward business proposal which may be regulated under the standards applicable to "purely commercial advertising." Id.

Females are not denied equal protection of the law by this section which prohibits the solicitation for prostitution where the statute is sex-neutral on its face and the practice of the solicitation by one male of another male for purposes of sodomy is violative of the provision. Id.

Constitutionality of solicitation statute was to be upheld against assertion that it violated defendant's right of privacy, not only in situation where solicitation was for homosexual sodomy, but also in situation where solicitations were by a man of a woman. United States v. G. Dumas (D.C. App. 1974, 327 A.2d 826).

Statute which proscribes solicitation for the purpose of committing sodomy, defined as taking into one's mouth or anus the sexual organ of any other person, does not violate constitutional guarantee of equal protection on its face by prohibiting acts between either two men or a man and a woman but not between two women. United States v. M. Cozart (D.C. App. 1974, 321 A. 2d 342).

Statute in effect prohibiting solicitation for sodomy, as applied to persons accused of public solicitations of strangers for sodomy, did not impinge upon personal rights that could be deemed fundamental or implicit in concept of ordered liberty. United States v. L. Carson (D.C. App. 1974, 319 A. 2d 329).

Fact that any of persons accused of public solicitations of strangers for sodomy ultimately may have contemplated a private and consensual act was no legal significance on overbreadth right of privacy issue as concerned soliciting statute. Id.

This section in effect prohibiting solicitation for offense of sodomy is within domain of state power and statute proscribing such conduct does not offend the First Amendment protection of freedom of expression. J. O. Riley v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 298 A. 2d 228; cert. denied 94 S. Ct. 96, 414 U.S. 840).

Section proscribing solicitation for lewd and immoral purposes, limited to solicitations for sodomy, is not void for vagueness. Id.

Construction

This section proscribing solicitation for lewd and immoral purposes, construed as proscribing solicitations for sodomy, is sufficiently certain to inform public of conduct proscribed and is not void for vagueness amounting to a deprivation of due process of law. J. O. Riley v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 298 A. 2d 228; cert. denied 94 S. Ct. 96, 414 U.S. 840).

Discriminatory enforcement

Evidence, including testimony that police department made no effort to seek out and arrest males who solicit females to engage in sexual acts with them for a price and that reason for such failure of effort was that use of women undercover officers to arrest male solicitors of prostitutes had proven infeasible, does not establish as a matter of law a conscious policy of discrimination based on sex in enforcement of statutes proscribing solicitation for prostitution. United States v. A. C. Wilson (D.C. App. 1975, 342 A. 2d 27).

In absence of any showing that government's policy in requiring corroboration in prosecutions involving homosexual conduct, while not requiring such corroboration in prosecutions for solicitation for prostitution, is based on distinction between sex of defendants, such policy does not result in unconstitutional sex discrimination in violation of right to due process. J. Garrett v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 339 A. 2d 372).

Evidence does not support trial court's finding on motion to dismiss indictment that there was discriminatory enforcement of this section. United States v. D. Moses et al. (D.C. App. 1975, 339 A. 2d 46; cert. denied 96 S. Ct. 2624, — U.S. —).

Evidence which showed that while some women solicited each other for sodomitic acts, only men were arrested for homosexual solicitation under statute which made solicitation for sodomitic acts a crime, where there was no indication as to whether lesbian solicitation was known to the police, showed no more than a failure to prosecute others because of a lack of knowledge and did not show discriminatory enforcement. United States v. M. Cozart (D.C. App. 1974, 321 A. 2d 342).

Dismissal of information

Dismissal of information, which charged solicitation for prostitution, merely on basis of determination that accused was prejudiced by fact that two police officers, who were government witnesses, heard accused say, on being asked by trial court to state her account of the facts after she indicated desire to enter guilty plea, that she did not solicit officer but that he solicited her and she refused was error. United States v. D. J. Lester (D.C. App. 1974, 318 A. 2d 899).

Elements of offense

Proof of specific offer to perform sex act is not element of offense of solicitation for prostitution. United States v. M. Smith (D.C. App. 1975, 330 A. 2d 759).

Entrapment

Where defendant who was convicted of soliciting for prostitution confirmed his encounter with morals officer, where defendant by his own testimony was conversant with jargon of solicitation bargaining process, and where defendant did not claim to be an unwary innocent with no intent to engage in the solicitation process, no basis existed on which to premise a defense of "entrapment" since defendant did not maintain that morals officer implanted the criminal design in his mind to solicit her for prostitution, and since officer's role was limited to her presence and to an exploration of defendant's purposes. J. D. Williams v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 342 A. 2d 367).

Evidence—Sufficiency

Evidence supported conviction for soliciting for prostitution despite defendant's contention that it established only a single solicitation without further proof from surrounding circumstances that defendant was indiscriminate. J. Garrett v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 339 A. 2d 372).

Indictment and information

Since offense of soliciting for lewd and immoral purposes has been limited by judicial construction to solicitation for acts of sodomy, defendants charged by information in statutory language with soliciting for lewd and immoral purposes are on clear notice that they are charged with solicitation for sodomy. United States v. F. H. Miqueli (D.C. App. 1975, 349 A. 2d 472).

Since this section proscribes two types of sexual solicitation in the disjunctive, i.e., solicitation for prostitution or solicitation for an immoral and lewd purpose, information or indictment can charge both of the prohibited acts in the conjunctive and under such charge government can proceed to prove any one or more of the acts, and cannot properly be required to elect between the conjunctively charge solicitations. Id.

Prejudice to defendant

That two police officers, who were government witnesses, heard accused say, on being asked by trial court to state her account of the facts after she indicated desire to enter guilty plea, that she did not solicit officer but that he solicited her and she refused did not prejudice accused, in that accused heard officers' version of the occurrence and in that the defense commonly used in such a prosecution was that solicitation was by the officer and not by defendant. United States v. D. J. Lester (D.C. App. 1974, 318 A. 2d 899).

Sentence

Although a sentence of imprisonment cannot be for a greater period than six months where there is no right to a jury trial, and although the minor defendant, who pled guilty to two charges of soliciting for the purpose of prostitution, had no right to a jury trial, committing her under the Federal Youth Corrections Act to the custody of the Attorney General for an indefinite period up to six years did not exceed permissible sentence, since she was not "imprisoned" at all; rather, in the terms of the Act, she had "in lieu of the penalty of imprisonment" been sentenced "for treatment and supervision." G. E. Austin v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 299 A. 2d 545).

Solicitation

Question "You want to go out for a while?" when asked of police officer in civilian clothes by defendant attired as a woman was not a "solicitation." F. L. Shannon v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 311 A. 2d 501).

Affirmative response by defendant to inquiry made by police officer as to whether defendant would submit to rectal sodomy did not constitute a "solicitation" by the defendant. Id.

Trial by jury

Defendant charged with soliciting for the purpose of prostitution, which is a petty offense for which the maximum penalty prescribed is a fine of $250 or imprisonment for 90 days or both, is not entitled to a jury trial, since the Sixth Amendment does not require that a person charged with a petty offense be afforded, at his request, a jury trial, and since Congress has defined a "petty offense" in this context as any misdemeanor, the penalty for which does not exceed imprisonment for a period of six months or fine of not more than $500 or both. C. F. Marshall v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 302 A. 2d 746).

Defendant had neither a statutory nor a constitutional right to a jury trial on charge of soliciting for the purpose of prostitution, the penalty for which offense was a fine of $250 and/or 90 days' imprisonment. G. E. Austin v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 299 A. 2d 545).

§ 22-2703. Suspension of sentence of guilty person—Conditions—Enforcement.

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

§ 22-2705. Pandering—Inducing or compelling female to become prostitute or engage in prostitution—Penalty.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Corroboration

Trial court was not required to instruct jury on corroboration, in prosecution for inducing a female to engage in prostitution and for compelling a female to reside with defendant for purpose of prostitution, where none of the offenses for which defendant was convicted involved sexual activity between defendant and complainant. B. F. Villines v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 320 A. 2d 313).

Lesser included offense

Since evidence showed that offenses arose out of separate acts no need existed to consider whether offense of inducing a female to engage in prostitution was a lesser included offense of compelling female to reside with defendant for purposes of prostitution. B. F. Villines v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 320 A. 2d 313).

§ 22-2706. Compelling female to live life of prostitution against her will—Penalty.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Corroboration

Trial court was not required to instruct jury on corroboration, in prosecution for inducing a female to engage in prostitution and for compelling a female to reside with defendant for purpose of prostitution, where none of the offenses for which defendant was convicted involved sexual activity between defendant and complainant. B. F. Villines v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 320 A. 2d 313).

Lesser included offense

Since evidence showed that offenses arose out of separate acts no need existed to consider whether offense of inducing a female to engage in prostitution was a lesser included offense of compelling female to reside with defendant for purposes of prostitution. B. F. Villines v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 320 A. 2d 313).

§ 22-2722. Keeping bawdy or disorderly houses.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Appeal and error

Where, on reviewing of defendant's conviction of keeping a bawdy or disorderly house, authoritative construction of disorderly house statute was rendered and earlier decision which construed the statute and which had been followed by trial court was rejected, conviction would be reversed. D. G. Harris v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 315 A. 2d 569; rev'g 293 A. 2d 851).

Common law

Common-law crime of "keeping a disorderly house" was the maintenance of premises upon which activity occurred that either created a public disturbance or, though concealed from the public, constituted a nuisance per se, such as a gambling house or bawdy house. D. G. Harris v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 315 A. 2d 569; rev'g 293 A. 2d 851).

Constitutionality

Defendant who was charged with keeping a bawdy or disorderly house, specifically a commercial establishment restored to for homosexual activities, had no standing to challenge constitutionality of statutory proscription against sodomy on theory that statute was overbroad in that it could be applied to conduct within private abode between those in a familial relationship as defendant was not himself within the class whose alleged right of privacy was affected by application of the statute. D. G. Harris v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 315 A. 2d 569; rev'g 293 A. 2d 851).

Elements of offense

To establish offense of keeping a bawdy or disorderly house, Government must prove that acts take place on the premises in question that disturb the public or constitute a nuisance per se in the nature of a gambling house or bawdy house, that the premises are regularly resorted to for the commission of such acts and that the proprietor knows or should know of the acts and does nothing to prevent them; Government is not required to prove a subversion of public morals. D. G. Harris v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 315 A. 2d 569; rev'g 293 A. 2d 851).

Nuisance per se

"Homosexual health club" where acts of sodomy took place was similar to a bawdy house and constituted a nuisance per se. D. G. Harris v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 315 A. 2d 569; rev'g 293 A. 2d 851).

Privacy rights

Acts of sodomy which allegedly occurred at "homosexual health club" were not protected by any recognized right to privacy as the acts occurred not in a private abode but on premises of a commercial establishment open to the public. D. G. Harris v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 315 A. 2d 569; rev'g 293 A. 2d 851).

Chapter 28.—RAPE

§ 22-2801. Definition and penalty.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Acquittal

Accused's interest in an acquittal when prosecution has failed to present sufficient evidence to go to jury is one for trial judge to vindicate in first instance, but if trial judge fails in this assignment, appellate court will exercise its discretionary authority to provide that protection even if the defendant may have moved in the alternative for a new trial. United States v. D. A. Wiley (1975, 517 F. 2d 1212, 170 U.S. App. D.C. 382).

Assistance of counsel

Denial of accused's right to call at preliminary hearing a witness whose testimony is material to issue of probable cause to hold accused for further prosecution infringes guarantee of effective assistance of counsel at every critical stage of a criminal proceeding. United States v. T. F. King (1973, 482 F. 2d 768, 157 U.S. App. D.C. 179).

Confessions

Totality of circumstances surrounding arrest of 18-year-old defendant, who was advised of his right to remain silent and to counsel prior to police interrogation which first focused on robbery and then shifted to rape resulting in confession by defendant who was a narcotic addict but showed no signs of withdrawal, was not such as to require finding that the confession was involuntary. United States v. H. T. Poole (1974, 495 F. 2d 115, 161 U.S. App. D.C. 289; cert. denied 95 S. Ct. 2667, 422 U.S. 1048).

Constitutionality

Protection from illicit sexual intercourse of underage females, in contradistinction to male children, provided by this section prohibiting carnal knowledge and abuse of female child was a reasonable classification and did not deny due process to males under age of 16 in view of fact that only members of female sex are susceptible to pregnancy. In the Matter of W.E.P. (D.C. App. 1974, 318 A. 2d 286).

Construction

This section prohibiting carnal knowledge or abuse of a female child under 16 years of age was not specifically limited to male offenders and did not deny due process to male youths who were convicted under the statute, despite contention that statute invidiously discriminated against male youths who were under 16 years of age and who engaged in consensual sexual intercourse with females under the age of 16 years by making the male participant alone criminally answerable. In the Matter of W.E.P. (D.C. App. 1974, 318 A. 2d 286).

Discovery

With the exception of records of impeachable convictions, the criminal records and records of arrests of government witnesses were not discoverable and the suppression of the testimony of government witnesses, as sanction for disobedience of pretrial discovery order, was in excess of trial court's authority. United States v. W. C. Engram et ano. (D.C. App. 1975, 337 A. 2d 488; cert. denied 96 S. Ct. 793, 423 U.S. 1958).

Elements of offense

Specific intent is not an element of rape even though it is an element of lesser included offense of assault with intent to commit rape. United States v. P. G. Thornton (1974, 498 F.2d 749, 162 U.S. App. D.C. 207).

Elements of offense of carnal knowledge are penetration with a child under the age of 16. United States v. D. A. Wiley (1974, 492 F. 2d 547, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 281).

Where offense involves a female child under 16 years of age, only remaining element of corpus delicti is penetration, for when a child under the age of consent is involved the law conclusively presumes force and the question of consent is immaterial. United States v. C. E. Jones (1973, 477 F. 2d 1213, 155 U.S. App. D.C. 328).

Evidence—Admissibility

Trial court, in rape prosecution, properly excluded as hearsay testimony of woman living with defendant concerning beating which victim had allegedly sustained at hands of former boyfriend after he caught her in flagrante delicto with another man, despite defendant's contention on appeal that such testimony was relevant to defense of consent and to amount of violence a rapist would have to exert before victim would submit. C. Edmondson, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 346 A. 2d 515).

Where government offered into evidence two laboratory reports concerning presence of sperm in vagina of victim of sexual assault and indicated to the trial court that physician would testify concerning the testing procedures followed with respect to the specimen taken, prosecution should not have failed to develop by examination of the physician his explanation of the relative routineness of the test and its degree of medical reliability. T. J. Smith v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 337 A. 2d 219).

In prosecution for carnal knowledge of female child under 16 years of age, admission of defendant's photograph identified by victim was not error, where photograph was a polaroid snapshot showing a natural frontal pose of defendant and there was absolutely nothing in picture to indicate a prior criminal record or association with police. United States v. C. E. Jones (1973, 477 F. 2d 1213, 155 U.S. App. D.C. 328).

—Circumstantial

In prosecution for attempted carnal knowledge of female child under 16 years of age, determination that charged offense had actually been committed was supported by numerous circumstantial details in addition to complainant's testimony, including cuts on complainant's foot and hand, disheveled appearance, prompt report to police, complainant's ability to point out light string in room where incident allegedly took place and discovery in that room of girdle which complainant had left behind after incident. In the Matter of W.E.P. (D.C. App. 1974, 318 A. 2d 286).

—Corroboration

Sex offense involving children may not be established by the testimony of the victim alone. United States v. D. A. Wiley (1974, 492 F. 2d 547, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 281).

Corroboration of a 12-year-old complainant's testimony, consisting of testimony of two officers that complainant was crying and upset, her clothing was disheveled, she had no coat even though it was a cold day, and the complainant's prompt report of the alleged incident, did not corroborate sexual intercourse and was insufficient to submit charge of carnal knowledge or of aiding and abetting co-defendant's act of carnal knowledge. Id.

In prosecution for sex crime, corroboration of victim's testimony by independent evidence is a prerequisite to conviction; the corroboration need not be by direct evidence but may consist of circumstances tending to support victim's testimony. In the Matter of W.E.P. (D.C. App. 1974, 318 A. 2d 286).

In prosecution for carnal knowledge of defendant's ten-year-old daughter, testimony of victim's eight-year-old brother was sufficient to meet corroboration requirement with respect to proof of sex offenses though his responses to questions were badly garbled and generally difficult to understand, where such deficiencies were attributable to inferior language skills and emotional turmoil rather than to any fundamental inability to observe with accuracy. United States v. W. E. Ashe (1973, 478 F. 2d 661, 155 U.S. App. D.C. 457).

In prosecution for carnal knowledge of a female child under 16 years of age, absence of any evidence tending to show a motive for fabrication coupled with maturity that victim demonstrated throughout proceedings lent inherent credence to her testimony, and while not in and of themselves corroborative, they diminished danger of falsification that was foundation of corroboration requirement. United States v. C. E. Jones (1973, 477 F. 2d 1213, 155 U.S. App. D.C. 328).

Medical testimony that victim's condition was consistent with penetration, her emotional state when she first revealed what had happened, when she first discussed case with police, and when she first identified defendant's picture, taken in conjunction with her accurate description of scene of events, and description of automobile linked to defendant, supplied more than ample corroboration of corpus delicti. Id.

Independent corroborative evidence need not establish each and every material element of offense of rape, but is sufficient when it permits jury to conclude beyond reasonable doubt that victim's account of crime was not fabrication; rule is flexible, and particular quantum of proof required will necessarily vary from case to case depending upon, e.g., age and impressionability of prosecutrix and presence or absence of any apparent motive to falsify or exaggerate. United States v. G. Gray, Jr. (1973, 477 F. 2d 444, 155 U.S. App. D.C. 275).

Evidence including testimony concerning appearance and condition of victim was sufficient to fulfill requirement of corroboration in rape prosecution, when it dovetailed perfectly with victim's account of events. Id.

In rape prosecution, corroboration is required for identification of assailant as well as for commission of offense, but lesser standard of proof is required, and where there is convincing identification, which minimizes danger of mistake or falsification, no further corroboration is required. Id.

Sex charges may not be submitted to jury simply upon testimony of alleged victim; corroboration is essential to proof of each element. United States v. C. L. Tremble (1972, 470 F. 2d 1272, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 363).

—Examination of witnesses

Defendant is not entitled to cross-examine prosecution witnesses about $10 witness fee received from the prosecutor, particularly since stipulation had been entered pretrial that each government witness was paid a $10 witness fee pursuant to statute. H. F. Wilburn, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 340 A. 2d 810).

—Identification

In prosecution for attempted carnal knowledge of female child under 16 years of age, complainant's identification of defendants was amply corroborated by testimony establishing that she had an adequate opportunity to observe her assailants. In the Matter of W.E.P. (D.C. App. 1974, 318 A. 2d 286).

—Medical

Medical evidence of sexual intercourse was not required to sustain conviction of attempted carnal knowledge of female child under 16 years of age. In the Matter of W.E.P. (D.C. App. 1974, 318 A. 2d 286).

—Sufficiency

Evidence, in rape prosecution, constituted more than ample corroboration of complainant's testimony concerning the offense, and was sufficient to permit case to go to jury. C. Edmondson, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 346 A. 2d 515).

Evidence, including the testimony of an eyewitness involving all three defendants in the assault upon victim, was sufficient to support verdict of jury finding defendants guilty of felony-murder and assault with intent to commit rape while armed. United States v. B. J. Heinlein (1973, 490 F. 2d 725, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 157).

Evidence in prosecution for assault with intent to commit rape was insufficient to establish that defendant intended to achieve sexual intercourse by force and violence and against will of prosecutrix. United States v. C. L.

Tremble (1972, 470 F. 2d 1272, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 363).

Evidence, including evidence that defendant's fingerprints were found on both sides of pane of glass removed from back door to apartment and that prints were found on surface of glass covered by molding strips which secured window in door, were sufficient to sustain determination that defendant was person who entered complainant's apartment. United States v. J. E. Cary (1972, 470 F. 2d 469, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 321).

— Weight

Generally, sexual assault charges by mentally abnormal girl should be subjected to great scrutiny. United States v. H. Benn, Jr. (1973, 476 F. 2d 1127, 155 U.S. App. D.C. 180).

Female offenders

Female may be charged as a principal under this section prohibiting carnal knowledge or abuse of a female child under 16 years of age if she has aided or abetted commission of the particular crime even though female is physically incapable of committing the prohibited act. In the Matter of W.E.P. (D.C. App. 1974, 318 A. 2d 286).

Identification

Because there is some degree of suggestiveness when police officer indicates to witness that suspect's picture is among photographs in array, impeachment of witness on this point is relevant factor to be considered by jury in judging weight to be given photographic identification, particularly where there is only one eyewitness. M. A. Hampton v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 318 A. 2d 598).

In prosecution for carnal knowledge of a female child under 16 years of age, prosecutor's use of book of photographs from which victim originally selected defendant's picture was not prejudicial error, absent a showing of some independent specific prejudice resulting from use of album warranting reversal, some prejudice substantiated by more than bare allegation that its use alone subjected jury to an impermissible inference of a prior criminal record. United States v. C. E. Jones (1973, 477 F. 2d 1213, 155 U.S. App. D.C. 328).

Although there was no prejudice in case from prosecutor's use at trial of book of photographs from which victim originally selected defendant's picture, caution should be taken in future to determine if such action is absolutely necessary, as use of such an album is a risky prosecutorial venture, and one as to which great care should be exercised, especially where it is merely cumulative of other identification evidence. Id.

— In-court

Government established, in prosecution for rape while armed and armed robbery, by clear and convincing evidence that the in-court identifications of defendant by the victims were based on observation of suspect rather than on drawing of man submitted to victims for identification, and identification procedure was not improper. United States v. R. E. Adams, Jr. (1973, 481 F. 2d 1099, 156 U.S. App. D.C. 415).

Impartial jury

Failure to excuse juror in rape case after juror stated that she knew prosecution witness constitutes an abuse of discretion, since juror had been a personal friend of mother of the witness for 30 years and had known witness while he was growing up, since credibility of witness was crucial to Government's case, and since, if juror, in assessing credibility of the witness, were to rely upon facts which she had learned through her prior relationship with witness or his mother, then defendant would be denied a fair trial. H. F. Wilburn, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 340 A. 2d 810).

Impeachment

Test of whether witness' statements concern collateral matters, so as not to be subject to impeachment, is whether fact as to which statement is predicated could have been independently shown in evidence for any purpose. M. A. Hampton v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 318 A. 2d 598).

Trial court erred when it precluded defendant's counsel from attempting to impeach complaining witness' testimony that she had been told that suspect had been arrested after she viewed police photographs by bringing out witness' grand jury testimony that she had viewed photographs only after being informed of suspect's arrest. Id.

Indictment

Grand jury indictment charging forcible rape, carnal knowledge and indecent liberties was not subject to dismissal on ground that it was based on transcript of sworn testimony before earlier grand jury which returned indictment for carnal knowledge that had been dismissed because of defendant's age, where testimony before first grand jury was not limited to carnal knowledge charge, there was no limitation of issues or offenses in presentation of evidence to first grand jury, and statement of victim, read to first grand jury in her presence and affirmed by her orally under oath, recited details of two acts of forcible rape. United States v. S. C. Wagoner (D.C. App. 1974, 313 A. 2d 719; rehearing denied 321 A. 2d 211; cert. denied 95 S.Ct. 630, 419 U.S. 1052).

Counts of indictment charging defendant with assaulting female persons with intent to carnally know and abuse such persons did not charge offenses under District of Columbia law where victims were females over 16 years of age. United States v. J. Hutchinson (1973, 478 F. 2d 997, 156 U.S. App. D.C. 87).

Instructions

Instruction with respect to identification in prosecution for burglary, rape, and robbery was sufficient for circumstances of case wherein complaining witness did not identify defendant but identity was established from fingerprint evidence. United States v. J. E. Cary (1972, 470 F. 2d 469, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 321).

Jencks Act

No foundation was laid for a Jencks Act hearing in rape prosecution where officer on cross-examination stated that, after being informed of rape, he took complainant's name and date of birth and then transported her to office of the sex squad, and where it does not appear from the record that defense counsel ever established that officer recorded a statement. H. F. Wilburn, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 340 A. 2d 810).

Joinder

Review of record showed that the similarity of circumstances surrounding the two criminal episodes on which charges of rape while armed and armed robbery were based were sufficiently remarkable to prove that there was a reasonable probability that the same person committed the crimes and there was no prejudice in the joinder of both crimes in one trial. United States v. R. E. Adams, Jr. (1973, 481 F. 2d 1099, 156 U.S. App. D.C. 415).

Lesser included offense

Where armed assault was essential part of proof establishing armed rape, armed assault was lesser offense included within the armed rape, and assault conviction was vacated. United States v. E. Edmonds, Jr., (1975, 524 F. 2d 62, 173 U.S. App. D.C. 241).

Preliminary hearing

At preliminary hearing to determine whether probable cause existed to hold accused for prosecution on charge of rape, accused was entitled to examine complainant as his own witness absent presentation of any reason why, if called, complainant should not have been allowed to testify; however, accused was not entitled to have preliminary hearing reopened for failure to permit him to call complainant where indictment had been returned against him subsequent to the preliminary hearing, though trial judge could fashion appropriate remedy to suitably avert injury from the wrong suffered. United States v. T. F. King (1973, 482 F. 2d 768, 157 U.S. App. D.C. 179).

Retrial

Where corroboration rule upon which defendant's first conviction of carnal knowledge was reversed was established law, and insufficiency of prosecution's case was attributable to inadequate preparation and presentation of the evidence against defendant, and not to any manifest necessity, it was not just and appropriate to subject defendant to a second trial, and resulting conviction would be set aside. United States v. D. A. Wiley (1975, 517 F. 2d 1212, 170 U.S. App. D.C. 382).

Search and seizure

Seizure of work pants in defendant's apartment following his arrest in connection with rape and murder, and following inspection of pants which disclosed "what we thought to be blood" was permissible under plain view rule where pants were lying on clothes hamper at time of inspection and seizure. United States v. W. Sheard (1972, 473 F. 2d 139, 154 U.S. App. D.C. 9; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 2784, 412 U.S. 943).

Severance

In prosecution of defendants on murder and rape charges, trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying motion of defendant brothers for a severance from codefendant, who had fatally stabbed the victim, notwithstanding defendants' claim that the evidence against the codefendant was much stronger than the evidence against them. United States v. B. J. Heinlein (1973, 490 F.2d 725, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 157).

Speedy trial

Fifteen-month delay between arrest and trial was such as to constitute a denial of defendant's right to a speedy trial where delay was not, at all times, attributable to defendant, who suffered personal prejudice by reason of fact that he was confined throughout period, though he continually pressed his motion for release pending trial, and where personal prejudice resulting from pretrial incarceration was exacerbated by fact that defendant was a youth being confined in an adult jail and fact that defendant was especially handicapped by his social and educational background. United States v. W. H. Calloway (1974, 505 F. 2d 311, 164 U.S. App. D.C. 204).

Witnesses

Where testimony of complainant's seven-year-old daughter demonstrated her ability to recollect events preceding and following her mother's rape, child was competent to testify as witness for government, in prosecution for rape. E. Edmondson, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 346 A. 2d 515).

Trial court, which denied a defense motion during trial to have key prosecution witness, who was a chronic alcoholic, subjected to a psychiatric examination with respect to his competency, did not abuse its discretion in refusing to treat the witness as a person of actual or potential incompetency, notwithstanding the claims of defendants, in support of their motion, that the testimony given by the witness was highly confusing and that hospital records indicated he had a clinical history which rendered him wholly unreliable. United States v. B. J. Heinlein (1973, 490 F.2d 725, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 157).

Chapter 29.—ROBBERY

§ 22-2901. Robbery.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Abuse of discretion

Although police who three or four days after purse snatching found the purse should not have returned it to the complaining witness, trial court's ruling that sanctions against prosecution were unwarranted is substantially supported by record and does not constitute an abuse of discretion, even if court had authority to impose sanctions, where the wet and weathered condition of purse would in all likelihood have rendered its surfaces unsusceptible to fingerprint analysis, there was no indication that surfaces were composed of material which would take and retain prints and it was possible that a number of people had handled the abandoned purse in the interim. T. Marshall v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 340 A. 2d 805).

Aider and abettor

An aider and abettor of an armed robbery is not guilty of a lesser included offense but is a principal to the robbery. R. W. Atkinson v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 322 A. 2d 587).

Appeal and error

Where defendant did not, within five days of trial, request hearing on her motion to suppress lineup identification as unnecessarily suggestive and did not do so on day of trial when court was reviewing and disposing of various pretrial matters, defendant cannot properly raise issue of suggestivity on appeal, unless there was plain error in allowing lineup identification in evidence. L. Irby v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 342 A. 2d 33).

Where defendant did not move for production of photographs displayed to witnesses prior to his arrest at any stage of prosecution or request that sanctions be imposed on Government for its loss of evidence, and where there was some evidence that police department had made earnest efforts to preserve the photographic arrays, failure to impose sanctions on Government for loss of evidence did not constitute error. United States v. R. L. Scriber (1974, 499 F.2d 1041, 163 U.S. App. D.C. 36).

Arrest

Totality of facts and circumstances, including information from radio report about fleeing pedestrian and pursuing citizen, and identification of pursuing citizen, justified warrantless arrest of pedestrian while he was being transported by officers to scene of reported incident, even though sum total of information available to officers when they placed pedestrian under arrest came from an unidentified victim of an undisclosed robbery and assault. G. W. Bates v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 327 A. 2d 542).

Assistance of counsel

It is not denial of effective assistance of counsel for defendant's trial counsel to make a conscientious decision not to put on alibi testimony which, after investigation, he is convinced would be perjured. J. Herbert, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 340 A.2d 802).

Even if pretrial identifications which resulted from one lineup and one two-man showup were improper, defendant was not denied effective assistance of counsel because of counsel's failure to move, pretrial, for suppression of the identifications where there was abundant evidence of sources independent of those pretrial identifications to support the in-court identifications. S. S. Shelton v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 323 A.2d 717).

Where an attorney has represented a convicted defendant at trial and, as defendant's attorney on appeal, concludes in good faith that a legitimate issue exists as to the constitutional adequacy of his representation of the defendant at trial, it is the duty of the attorney to move to withdraw as counsel on appeal. Id.

Defense counsel should be guided by American Bar Association Standards, should, inter alia, confer with client without delay and as often as necessary to elicit matters of defense or ascertain potential defenses, discuss potential strategies and tactical choices with client, promptly advise him of his rights and take actions necessary to preserve them, conduct investigations to determine matters of defense that can be developed, interview government witnesses if accessible, attempt to secure information in possession of prosecution and do adequate research. United States v. W. DeCoster, Jr. (1973, 487 F. 2d 1197, 159 U.S. App. D.C. 326).

Claim of ineffective assistance of counsel should first be presented to district court in motion for a new trial and in such proceeding, evidence dehors the record may be submitted by affidavit, and when necessary district judge may order a hearing or otherwise allow counsel to respond; if trial court is willing to grant motion, the Court of Appeals will remand and if motion is denied, appeal therefrom will be considered with appeal from conviction and sentence. Id.

Competency hearing

Where pretrial examination had resulted in certification by hospital staff of competency and Superior Court judge after hearing had reached like result, district judge was not required to direct, sua sponte, further hearing on competency in prosecution for assault with intent to commit rape, and for robbery. United States v. C. L. Tremble (1972, 470 F. 2d 1272, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 363).

Conduct of prosecuting attorney

Prosecutor's reference to defendant's "background" was impermissible where there was no evidence in record which could have supplied content to the word. United States v. A. A. Freeman (1975, 514 F.2d 1314, 169 U.S. App. D.C. 73).

Confessions

Totality of circumstances surrounding arrest of 18-year-old defendant, who was advised of his right to remain silent and to counsel prior to police interrogation which first focused on robbery and then shifted to rape resulting in confession by defendant who was a narcotic addict but showed no signs of withdrawal, was not such as to require finding that the confession was involuntary. United States v. H. T. Poole (1974, 495 F.2d 115, 161 U.S. App. D.C. 289; cert. denied 95 S. Ct. 2667, 422 U.S. 1048).

Police officer's embellishment of Miranda warning with statement that, if defendant could not afford an attorney one would be appointed in court the next day, was only one factor to be considered in determining whether defendant's subsequent confession was made after a knowing, intelligent, and voluntary waiver of his rights, and trial court erred in ruling that said embellishment necessarily rendered confession inadmissible. United States v. J. Rawls (D.C. App. 1974, 322 A.2d 903).

Notwithstanding defendant's contention that the trial court erred in failing to suppress his alleged confession where it was uncontested that he had made known his wish and intention to consult with an attorney, but where the Government had, nevertheless, continued to interrogate him in the absence of an attorney and eventually elicited the confession, the record showed, in support of conclusion that defendant waived his right to the presence of an attorney, that defendant simply indicated he was "undecided" about an attorney and then decided to go ahead and give a statement. United States v. W. H. Howard (1972, 470 F. 2d 406, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 258).

Construction

Although this section does not mention specific intent, it must be read as referring to the common law crime of robbery of which a necessary element is specific intent to take property of another. United States v. W. N. Owens et ano. (D.C. App. 1975, 332 A.2d 752).

While larceny remains an offense against possession, robbery is basically a crime against the person. United States v. T. B. Dixon (1972, 469 F. 2d 940, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 200).

Cross-examination

Defendant's silence when interrogated by police after arrest for robbery as to where he had obtained large sum in his possession was not inconsistent with his trial testimony that his wife had asked him to purchase money orders; thus, prosecutor's cross-examination concerning defendant's failure to give an explanation to police was not permissible under special rule permitting defendant to be impeached by prior inconsistent utterances made at time of arrest, especially where defendant had insisted upon his innocence at time of arrest and maintained his innocence throughout the proceedings. United States v. F. Anderson (1974, 498 F.2d 1038, 162 U.S. App. D.C. 305; aff'd 95 S. Ct. 2133, 422 U.S. 171).

Refusal, in prosecution for felony-murder, first-degree murder, armed robbery, robbery and second-degree burglary, to permit cross-examination of accomplice, who testified for government and whose counsel had been informed that government would be willing, with regard to unrelated narcotics and robbery charges against accomplice, to accept plea of guilty to one misdemeanor, as to whether government had made any disposition of such unrelated charges was reversible error when considered in conjunction with other errors. United States v. I. E. Leonard (1974, 494 F.2d 955, 161 U.S. App. D.C. 36).

Trial court misconceived test for evaluating whether defense counsel's proposed questioning of arresting officer, regarding his hitting defendant, was probative on issue of officer's alleged bias, where court ruled that the time of commission of the offense by defendant, rather than the time of officer's testimony against defendant, was crucial; and, while defendant's proffer of the bias evidence was incomplete, that could not justify a complete curtailment of questioning; however, since the implied relation between the officer's alleged bias and robbery victim's testimony, which was critical, was highly speculative, the error was harmless. G. A. Best v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 328 A.2d 378).

— Exploratory

While a defendant may put exploratory questions to a government witness based on nothing more than "slight suspicion," defendant does not have the right to conduct such probes in the presence of jury; such exploratory cross-examination may be pursued either by nonaccusatory questions in the presence of the jury or by questioning outside the presence of the jury, with the latter course permitting a less inhibited inquiry in the nature of a voir dire examination. United States v. A. B. Knight (1974, 509 F.2d 354, 166 U.S. App. D.C. 21).

Defense investigative reports

Where defendant's court-appointed counsel employed an investigator to interview potential witnesses, the investigator did so and sent to counsel a report consisting of summaries of interviews, and investigator, called as defense witness, did not use report to refresh his recollection, trial court erred in ordering investigator to turn over copy of report to the Government since the defense cannot be required to turn over to the prosecution prior statements of defense witnesses which could be used by the prosecution as evidence against the defendant. United States v. A. F. Wright (1973, 489 F.2d 1181, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 57).

Defenses

Defendant who interposed defense of intoxication to robbery charge, who gave urine sample the day after his arrest and who sought discovery of results of test was entitled to a hearing to determine if a test were made, and if so, if the test could have afforded any significant light on defendant's degree of intoxication at the time of the offense, and if so, for determination of sanction to be imposed upon Government for failing to produce the results. United States v. J. L. Butler (1974, 499 F.2d 1006, 163 U.S. App. D.C. 1).

Where defendant claimed that armed robbery victim owed him $30 as result of defrauding him in marihuana sale, but defendant allegedly took over $500 from offending drug dealer and dealer's companions, defendant did not establish claim of right defense, and thus trial court did not err in prohibiting defense counsel from arguing said defense to jury. C. Smith v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 330 A.2d 519).

Discovery

Where matter which prosecution had not disclosed prior to trial of indictment is inadmissible hearsay, i.e., a street rumor which remained unverified despite immediate investigation by police detective, and where detective did not abandon investigation until after positive identification of defendant had been made by principal victim and defendant had confessed to the crime, undisclosed information is not kind of material which prosecution should have furnished defendant in advance of trial. United States v. A. D. Sedgwick (D.C. App. 1975, 345 A. 2d 465; cert. denied 96 S. Ct. 1751, — U.S. —).

With the exception of records of impeachable convictions, the criminal records and records of arrests of government witnesses were not discoverable and the suppression of the testimony of government witnesses, as sanction for disobedience of pretrial discovery order, was in excess of trial court's authority. United States v. W. C. Engram et ano. (D.C. App. 1975, 337 A.2d 488; cert. denied 96 S. Ct. 793, 423 U.S. 1058).

If urine test had been made upon defendant, who interposed defense of intoxication to robbery charge. Government's lack of knowledge as to bearing of the test upon defendant's condition at the time of the offense, if, in fact, the test might have shed light thereon, would not foreclose inquiry into the obligation of the Government to preserve the evidence or foreclose consideration of sanctions for failure to do so. United States v. J. L. Butler (1974, 499 F.2d 1006, 163 U.S. App. D.C. 1).

Double jeopardy

Double jeopardy clause prohibits successive prosecutions in the District for violations of federal and local law arising from the same bank or savings and loan robbery, but it does not require that prosecution under the federal scheme be preferred to prosecution under local statutes, so long as only a single prosecution takes place. United States v. R. Shepard (1975, 515 F.2d 1324, 169 U.S. App. D.C. 353).

Where accused was represented by same counsel both at trial, during which continuance was granted, and at second trial, where defense counsel raised issue of double jeopardy at both appearances, where judge at second trial considered the possibility of waiver of accused's defense of double jeopardy only at the insistence of defense counsel and where, after a recess for consultation between accused and defense counsel, waiver was presented to trial court in accused's presence and she was given opportunity to disavow the waiver but did not do so, accused has intelligently waived such defense. D. Mason v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 346 A. 2d 250).

Where trial court, acting on good faith but erroneous belief that defendant had been entitled to certain information long before trial, first suggested continuance, which was declined by defendant, and then unsuccessfully sought defendant's consent to mistrial, and finally declared mistrial and discharged jury, without any insistence by defendant upon any right to completion of the trial by the first jury, jeopardy did not attach. United States v. A. D. Sedgwick (D.C. App. 1975, 345 A. 2d 465; cert. denied 96 S. Ct. 1751, — U.S. —).

Where Family Division's sua sponte declaration of mistrial in fact-finding hearing on petition charging juvenile with robbery was not dictated by manifest necessity, retrial of juvenile is barred by constitutional prohibition on double jeopardy. District of Columbia v. I. P. (D.C. App. 1975, 335 A.2d 224).

Where the same sovereignty is involved, the double jeopardy principle bars multiple prosecutions for the same offense by different elements of that sovereignty, and under that principle, multiple prosecutions by the District of Columbia and the United States are barred. United States v. A. B. Knight (1974, 509 F.2d 354, 166 U.S. App. D.C. 21).

If anything, the federal mail robbery statute contemplates a single conviction, not multiple convictions, when the first tier of mail robbery is aggravated by the use of a deadly weapon. Id.

Fact that mistrial was declared in first prosecution of defendant for armed robbery would not, under the doctrine of collateral estoppel, preclude his conviction on one count of armed robbery in second prosecution, where jury in the first trial had made no findings, so that defendant's presence as one of the robbers was not inconsistent with these results. United States v. R. N. Perry (1974, 504 F. 2d 180, 164 U.S. App. D.C. 111).

Due process

Where alibi witness threatened victim of armed robbery outside courtroom, immediate arrest of witness, which resulted in witness' decision to invoke privilege against self-incrimination if asked about threat and defense's subsequent decision not to call witness, was not governmental action preventing defendant from presenting his defense, and did not result in a denial of due process. K. W. Swann v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 326 A.2d 813).

Elements of offense

Under an indictment for robbery, Government must prove assault and larceny. United States v. C. McGill (1973, 487 F.2d 1208, 159 U.S. App. D.C. 337).

Intent to steal is material element necessary to offense of robbery. United States v. L. T. Robinson (1973, 475 F. 2d 376, 154 U.S. App. D.C. 265).

Evidence

Evidence of narcotics dealing was appropriate means of establishing Government's theory that defendant had induced accomplice to commit robbery in order to obtain additional narcotics and to pay for narcotics which he had previously purchased from defendant on credit. United States v. H. E. Lee (1974, 509 F.2d 400, 166 U.S. App. D.C. 67; cert. denied 95 S. Ct. 1451, 420 U.S. 1006).

— Admissibility

Statements made by defendants in casual conversation, out of the presence of police and immediately after homicide and robbery, offered to prove that defendants had recently engaged in some violent episode together, were admissible as admissions of a party opponent, each defendant adopting the other's statement. United States v. J. F. Bolden (1975, 514 F.2d 1301, 169 U.S. App. D.C. 60).

Where there was nothing to indicate that search warrant was issued for any offenses other than those for which defendant was on trial and testimony was simply that an officer went to the apartment to execute the warrant, found defendant there, and recovered the shotgun later identified as the weapon used during the robbery, testimony that a search warrant was executed at his apartment did not implicate him in another crime. United States v. J. E. Jackson (1974, 509 F.2d 499, 166 U.S. App. D.C. 166).

Where robbery victim testified that shotgun found in defendant's apartment was similar to the shotgun which one of the robbers had, informant testified that the shotgun belonged to defendant and that defendant had it when he left the apartment with another person to commit the robbery, the shotgun was properly admitted into evidence in prosecution for armed robbery. Id.

Permitting police officer to testify regarding direction from which shot causing bullet hole in wall was fired did not constitute an abuse of discretion in prosecution for armed robbery and for carrying a dangerous weapon. United States v. A. E. Pierson (1974, 503 F. 2d 173, 164 U.S. App. D.C. 82).

Testimony by accomplices as to statements which were made to them by defendant during commission of crimes charged in prosecutions for felony-murder, first-degree murder, armed robbery, robbery and second-degree burglary and which incriminated codefendants, were admissible under either exception to hearsay rule for contemporaneous declarations which partake of the event or exception for spontaneous declarations or excited utterances. United States v. I. E. Leonard (1974, 494 F.2d 955, 161 U.S. App. D.C. 36).

In prosecution for armed robbery, sawed-off shotgun seized at time of arrest was admissible where there was evidence as to resemblance of exhibit and gun used at scene of offense and trial judge commented that the gun could not be introduced as the gun used in the crime and that the question was for jury to determine. United States v. T. McKinley (1973, 485 F. 2d 1059, 158 U.S. App. D.C. 280).

Testimony that defendants had changed their appearance was admissible to provide basis for jury inference concerning reason that witnesses were unable to identify defendant in court. Id.

Court ordered lineup forms instructing each defendant not to alter his appearance prior to lineup were admissible even absent evidence that defendants had actually received notice of the orders where there was no testimony that orders had not been served or that defendants had not been informed of the provisions of the orders; prosecutor was entitled to proceed on presumption that court orders were in fact served, without adducing proof of such service. Id.

Testimony by police officer that he had overheard defendant threatening a witness with respect to witness' identification of him as the perpetrator of the crime and telling witness that she had been a fool to allow the policeman to trick her into identifying the defendant was admissible as evidence of an admission directly relevant to guilt and was not rendered inadmissible by the fact that it also contained evidence of another crime—obstruction of justice. J. N. Smith v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 312 A. 2d 781).

— Disclosure to defense

Prosecutor's failure to provide defense in advance with lineup sheets showing two misidentifications or with four bullets found on defendant after his arrest was not reversible error where the lineup sheets showed that counsel for defendant was present at the lineups and the bullets were easily available to defense counsel in the Government's property office where counsel examined the money taken from his client. United States v. J. F. Bolden (1975, 514 F.2d 1301, 169 U.S. App. D.C. 60).

— Good character

Prosecutor cannot offer bad character evidence unless accused first introduces evidence of good character, and even then prosecutor's proof is restricted to community reputation and to trait and traits to which accused's own character evidence related. United States v. J. A. Lewis (1973, 482 F. 2d 632, 157 U.S. App. D.C. 43).

When character witness, either for accused or for prosecution, is offered, he is subject to cross-examination as to his testimonial qualifications just like any other witness, and probe on cross-examination may extend to those matters, among others, which legitimately affect witness' knowledge of accused's community reputation for the character trait or traits which he confirms. Id.

Where at time judge ruled, during second trial for armed robbery and related offenses, that if defense put on good character witnesses then prosecution could cross-examine such witnesses to determine if they were aware of defendant's arrest for narcotics two weeks before commencement of second trial but ten months after the occurrence of offenses for which he was being tried, judge did not know whether witness would speak to reputation for peace and good order or as to reputation for truth and veracity, trial judge did not have essential information and ruling was error, but in view of government's case error was not prejudicial. Id.

— Sufficiency

Testimony by prison guards that they were locked in a cell and held as hostages, that defendant frequently checked the cell where the guards were confined, that he told the guards that he "had nothing to lose by going out looking," that defendant separated himself from a group of inmates who did not want to escape immediately before rebellious inmates clustered for breakout attempt, and that defendant thereafter came by the cell many times armed with a short piece of steel with a sharp end and threatened the hostages was sufficient to sustain defendant's convictions for attempted escape, armed kidnapping, robbery, and riot. United States v. J. Bridgeman (1975, 523 F.2d 1099, 173 U.S. App. D.C. 150; cert. denied 96 S. Ct. 1743, 1744, — U.S. —).

Evidence, including testimony of identification witness, was sufficient to sustain conviction of armed robbery and assault with deadly weapon. United States v. J. Jones, Jr. (1975, 517 F.2d 176, 170 U.S. App. D.C. 362).

Evidence in robbery prosecution was sufficient to support finding that defendant participated, with companion, in robbery of liquor store during which companion produced pistol and demanded money while defendant watched customers, and that second robbery of hostage outside store was not companion's independent frolic or unrelated to general criminal scheme. United States v. M. J. Belt (1975, 514 F.2d 837, 169 U.S. App. D.C. 1).

Testimony of robbery victim, who was confronted under streetlight, who was twice able to closely observe assailant as he leaned into her automobile, who described assailant and his attire in detail and who two days later identified defendant from third array of police photographs and also identified defendant at lineup and trial, is sufficient to support robbery conviction. J. M. Russell v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 348 A.2d 299).

Evidence, including evidence of juvenile's close association with correspondent prior to and after purse snatching, juvenile's presence near scene of crime and his flight from scene with correspondent, is sufficient to support juvenile's conviction of robbery. In the Matter of A. B. H. (D.C. App. 1975, 343 A.2d 573).

Submission of robbery case to jury was warranted by evidence even though one eyewitness picked person other than defendant in lineup held approximately eight months after the incident. T. Marshall v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 340 A.2d 805).

Testimony of single witness is sufficient to sustain armed robbery conviction, even though victim did not testify. W. Strickland, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 332 A.2d 746).

Evidence, including testimony that shotgun shells similar to those used in gun used in armed robbery were found in defendant's automobile, is sufficient to sustain convictions of armed robbery and assault with dangerous weapon. D. Borrero v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 332 A.2d 363).

Evidence that deceased's rings came into possession of one defendant immediately after deceased had been killed and evidence that defendant stated that she had gotten the rings from the victim and was going to keep them sustained conviction of both person who kept the ring and person who aided in the murder for felony-murder on the basis of robbery. United States v. M. Mackin (1974, 502 F.2d 429, 163 U.S. App. D.C. 427; cert. denied 95 S. Ct. 629, 419 U.S. 1052).

Evidence sustained robbery conviction of defendant whose fingerprints were found by police on a dresser drawer in a generally locked woman's bedroom. R. Hawkins v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 329 A.2d 781).

The fundamental principle respecting reasonable doubt applies to fingerprint cases, but the proof need not be to a certainty or negate all inferences pointing to innocence; the evidence, however, must negate at least the most reasonable explanations consistent with innocence and must tend to show placement of the fingerprints during the offense. Id.

Evidence sustained robbery conviction of defendant who was one of robber's companions watched commission of robbery, and ran from scene of crime with robber and other companion. R. F. Creek v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 324 A.2d 688).

Positive identification by one eyewitness and somewhat tentative identifications by two other eyewitnesses were sufficient basis for finding juvenile guilty of robbery and assault with dangerous weapon. In the Matter of W. K. (D.C. App. 1974, 323 A.2d 442).

Evidence that victim had $231 in his pocket and was carrying four or five packages when he was confronted by two men who held gun on him and went through his pockets and that victim told policemen that he had been robbed was insufficient to support armed robbery conviction. United States v. C. McGill (1973, 487 F.2d 1208, 159 U.S. App. D.C. 337).

Evidence, including evidence that defendant's fingerprints were found on both sides of pane of glass removed from back door to apartment and that prints were found on surface of glass covered by molding strips which secured window in door, were sufficient to sustain determination that defendant was person who entered complainant's apartment. United States v. J. E. Cary (1972, 470 F.2d 469, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 321).

If evidence in armed robbery prosecution did not warrant findings that the $500 involved was taken from victim's person or immediate actual possession, then jury could only have properly found defendants guilty of the lesser included offense of grand larceny. United States v. T. B. Dixon (1972, 469 F.2d 940, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 200).

— Suppression

Though a crime of violence with a suspect reasonably believed to be armed was involved, warrantless entry by police into motel room occupied by defendant was invalid and required suppression of evidence found in room subsequent to entry, where police possessed no evidence at all connecting defendant to crime at time of entry, defendant was not placed under arrest until police began discovering evidence of crime in room, circumstances cast doubt on assertion that police had strong reason to believe that a suspect was on premises, arguments for and against likelihood of escape without swift apprehension were of equal weight, and entry, even assuming that it was peaceful, occurred during early morning hours so as to compound possible inadequacy of showing of probable cause. United States v. J. Lindsay, Jr. (1974, 506 F.2d 166, 165 U.S. App. D.C. 105).

Identification

Where witness observed bank robber from as close as ten feet from safety of automobile and with specific purpose of later identifying robber, witness' description of robber and his automobile matched that of defendant, in showup in bank soon after robbery, defendant was not in handcuffs or behind bars, was not clothed in way witness described robber and witness identification of defendant was from his face rather than by general appearance or build, and possibly suggestive presence of defendants' automobile where witness could see it was at instance of defendant's companion not of policy, confrontation was not impermissibly suggestive. United States v. J. Jones, Jr. (1975, 517 F.2d 176, 170 U.S. App. D.C. 362).

Defendant was not denied due process of law because the police utilized a photo identification procedure rather than a corporeal lineup since defendant was already in custody where the photographic display was designed to test unverified information from a paid informant that defendant was one of the robbers and there was no evidence that the photographic display was in any way suggestive. United States v. J. E. Jackson (1974, 509 F.2d 499, 166 U.S. App. D.C. 166).

The Government's prerogative to show testimonially pretrial photographic identifications extends to testimony of identifications based on "mug shot" photographs; however, the objectionable features of the "mug shots" should be eliminated Id.

Where photographs were displayed to witnesses prior to defendant's arrest, three of eyewitnesses viewed photographs just 11 days after robbery occurred, each witness individually inspected at least six photographs, and there was no indication that the authorities who conducted photographic identifications made any suggestive comments to identifying witnesses, identification procedure was not such as to deny defendant due process of law. United States v. R. L. Scriber (1974, 499 F. 2d 1041, 163 U.S. App. D.C. 36).

Where complainant in armed robbery prosecution immediately recognized picture of defendant in police photograph book, and where there was identification evidence by another witness, there was no substantial likelihood of misidentification even though complainant did not announce her discovery until she found, from an index in the back of the book, that the subject's name was the same as that previously given to her by a bystander as the name of her assailant; however, in the interest of avoiding suggestiveness, police should seek procedures whereby index could be kept unavailable to witnesses until after photograph has been identified. United States v. L. C. McBride (1974, 499 F. 2d 525, 162 U.S. App. D.C. 389).

Testimony of operator of coin-operated laundry and dry cleaning establishment that he had seen defendant many times before robbery, that room was well lighted, and that he had opportunity to observe robber for about 30 seconds, was sufficient for jury on issue of identity in armed robbery prosecution. United States v. E. L. Inge, Jr. (1974, 494 F.2d 1102, 161 U.S. App. D.C. 183).

Identification procedures were not so impermissibly suggestive as to give rise to very substantial likelihood of irreparable misidentification though officer told witness that photo of suspect was included in photographic array, where in photographic identification robbery victim chose two photographs of men whom he thought resembled the robber, one of which was defendant, and in subsequent lineup, robbery victim failed to identify defendant at all. G. S. Crawley v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 328 A. 2d 777).

Where armed robbery victim had previously seen defendant in her apartment building on several occasions before offense and on very day of offense, there was no danger of misidentification, and thus there was no prejudicial error in one-man showup or in inability of police officer at trial to reconstruct photographic array from which victim identified defendant. K. W. Swann v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 326 A. 2d 813).

Where robbery victim was shown 12 photographs, where defendant's photograph, which victim identified, contained only a full face view, while the other 11 contained both a full face and a profile view, the difference in format was not, as a matter of law, so suggestive as to violate due process. United States v. E. L. Sherry (D.C. App. 1974, 318 A.2d 903).

Because there is some degree of suggestiveness when police officer indicates to witness that suspect's picture is among photographs in array, impeachment of witness on this point is relevant factor to be considered by jury in judging weight to be given photographic identification, particularly where there is only one eyewitness. M. A. Hampton v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 318 A.2d 598).

Confrontation in which robbery victim viewed defendant while he was lying face down on floor and was handcuffed with his arms behind his back was permissible and was not highly suggestive where confrontation took place within few minutes of robbery and almost at scene of crime in building in which it occurred. United States v. R. J. Lee, Jr. (1973, 485 F. 2d 1075, 158 U.S. App. D.C. 296).

Factors to be evaluated in determining whether a particular identification stems from events other than an illegal pretrial confrontation are: witness' prior opportunity to observe criminal act and party committing it, existence of any discrepancy between any description of perpetrator given by witness and accused's appearance, any identification by witness of someone other than accused, and identification of a photograph of accused, any failure by witness to identify accused prior to in-court identification, and lapse of time between criminal acts and identification. United States v. A. Holiday (1973, 482 F. 2d 729, 157 U.S. App. D.C. 140).

In view of fact that the eight photographs shown witnesses on day of robbery gave no indication of height and that among these photographs defendant's was only one whose facial hair was in any way comparable to initial uncertain descriptions given by witnesses, and in view of fact that at lineup defendant was only man whose picture had been shown to witnesses and defendant was the tallest man, and only heavyset, stout person who had a full mustache and full goatee, there was a very substantial likelihood of irreparable misidentification by witnesses due to suggestive identification procedures, considered with discrepancies and uncertainties in their testimony, and their in-court identifications were inadmissible. United States v. H. Sanders (1973, 479 F. 2d 1193, 156 U.S. App. D.C. 210).

Where there was substantial doubt as to validity of uncorroborated identification evidence, which was provided by two alleged victims in prosecution for robbery and assault with a dangerous weapon and on which conviction was based, case would be remanded to permit district court to make fresh determination as to action which should be taken in interest of justice. United States v. L. Harris (1973, 475 F. 2d 359, 154 U.S. App. D.C. 248).

Where defendant and companions were arrested within 30 minutes following jewelry store robbery and about 19 blocks from jewelry store with plastic bag containing two trays of the stolen rings, it was reasonable for officers to bring defendant to scene of robbery for confrontation, and in-court identification of defendant by principal victim who had opportunity to observe robber at distance of about 18 inches under excellent lighting conditions was admissible for jury consideration. United States v. R. McCoy (1973, 475 F. 2d 344, 154 U.S. App. D.C. 233).

In light of fact that complaining witness had a long and proximate opportunity to observe and study face of her attacker, and had previously made a prearrest photographic identification, there was enough to support finding of clear and convincing evidence of an independent source for subsequent identifications. United States v. E. Smith (1972, 473 F. 2d 1148, 154 U.S. App. D.C. 111).

Failure of the trial court, in absence of request, to give a special instruction on identification in robbery prosecution in which the case turned on the testimony of a single witness was not prejudicial where the witness had an adequate opportunity to observe and made a spontaneous identification and where the instructions given with respect to burden of proof, alibi, and problem of mistaken identity significantly focused attention on the issue of identity. United States v. M. Telfaire (1972, 469 F. 2d 552, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 146).

— In-court

In-court identification of defendant as robber by eyewitness who observed robber approximately 15 minutes as robber held gun at eyewitness' head had source independent of alleged tainted pretrial photographic identification and is admissible. W. Strickland, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 332 A.2d 746).

Excellent opportunities that identification witnesses had to observe defendant during robbery of United States post office were sufficient to provide a solid independent basis for their in-court identifications despite any later taint created by suggestive pretrial lineups, and thus defendant was not denied due process by court's refusal to suppress eyewitnesses' in-court identifications. United States v. R. L. Scriber (1974, 499 F. 2d 1041, 163 U.S. App. D.C. 36).

Fact that neither of two eyewitnesses to holdup had made any pretrial identification of juvenile as one of robbers did not preclude in-court identification of him by those witnesses on theory that such in-court identification was tainted with suggestion, because confrontation occurred when he was seated at defense counsel table, rather than among several individuals of similar physique in police lineup. In the Matter of W. K. (D.C. App. 1974, 323 A. 2d 442).

In-court identifications made of accused by two lineup witnesses were admissible, though witnesses had attended an apparently unadvised pretrial lineup, where it was illustrated sufficiently in record that identifications were based on their observation of him during robbery. United States v. A. Holiday (1973, 482 F. 2d 729, 157 U.S. App. D.C. 140).

Government established, in prosecution for rape while armed and armed robbery, by clear and convincing evidence that the in-court identifications of defendant by the victims were based on observation of suspect rather than on drawing of man submitted to victims for identification, and identification procedure was not improper. United States v. R. E. Adams, Jr. (1973, 481 F. 2d 1099, 156 U.S. App. D.C. 415).

— Lineup

Although police officers' remarks to complainant to effect that boy whom she had previously identified by photograph as purse snatcher would be in lineup would have been better left unsaid, they do not render the lineup identification so suggestive as to give rise to substantial likelihood of misidentification. T. Marshall v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 340 A.2d 805).

Even if defendant's hairstyle was in some degree suggestive, it did not so distinctively mark him as to generate a substantial likelihood of misidentification by robbery victim who selected defendant from 11-man lineup as the gunman where the victim observed the robber bearing the shotgun over period of 15 or 20 minutes, throughout which she was in close proximity to the gunman and her successive identifications of defendant were consistent and invariably emphatic. United States v. J. E. Jackson (1974, 509 F.2d 499, 166 U.S. App. D.C. 166).

Where defendant was lawfully in custody, police were authorized to place him in lineup in connection with unrelated offense. United States v. J. F. Anderson (1974, 490 F. 2d 785, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 217).

Evidence of an identification of an accused made at an invalid lineup may not be introduced by Government in first instance, though accused may, if he chooses, show events which transpired at a faulty lineup, and, if he does, Government is entitled to respond, but unless accused initiates subject, evidence of identification is per se inadmissible, and unless constitutionally harmless is reversible error. United States v. A. Holiday (1973, 482 F. 2d 729, 157 U.S. App. D.C. 140).

Where only eyewitness, who had been present at two robberies in question, failed to identify defendant at formal lineup held shortly after his arrest and other eyewitnesses' views of defendant had been taken under less than ideal circumstances several weeks after robberies, denial of pretrial motion by defendant for an order for a lineup was error, and such error required that conviction be set aside and that indictment be dismissed, in light of fact that holding of a lineup would no longer be a meaningful step. United States v. G. E. Caldwell (1973, 481 F. 2d 487, 156 U.S. App. D.C. 312).

Where there was no showing that lineup was impermissibly suggestive or that victim of crime was led by police into identification of defendant, where inconsistencies in victim's testimony were attributable solely to difficulty victim experienced in use of English language, where three other persons identified defendant, and where victim's identification of defendant in lineup was unequivocal and based upon excellent opportunity to view defendant during robbery, lineup identification by victim was properly admitted. J. L. Skinner v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 310 A. 2d 231).

— Photographic

Fact that defendant's clothes in photographic display somewhat resembled clothes which robbery victim said armed robber wore does not render the photographic display impermissibly suggestive in view of total number of pictures, 150, and number of men of comparable age and appearance in the array. J. Herbert, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 340 A.2d 802).

Array of photographs which was not available at trial and which was assembled by selecting from arrest files photographs of 10 to 20 individuals bearing same surname as defendant is not presumed to have been unduly suggestive so as to require exclusion of pictorial identification by robbery victim who had been informed by bystander that one robber had certain surname and who relayed such information to police, where police did not know whether defendant's photograph was in such array and did not inform robbery victim that photographs were of persons having surname relayed to them. W. Strickland, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 332 A.2d 746).

Immediate actual possession

A thing is within one's "immediate actual possession" for purposes of robbery statute so long as it is within such range that such person could, if not deterred by violence or fear, retain actual physical control over it. United States v. T. B. Dixon (1972, 469 F. 2d 940, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 200).

Where defendants approached victim and positioned themselves on either side of him and one said, "Let me have it," while one stuck a pistol against victim's ribs, and where victim attempted to toss envelope containing money to a stranger and one of the defendants immediately picked up the envelope and ran, joined by the other defendant, defendant's act of picking up the envelope, if it did not constitute a taking from the "person" of the victim, at least constituted taking from victim's "immediate actual possession" within robbery statute. Id.

Impeachment

Defendant was properly impeached by use of prior inconsistent statement given by him to representative of District of Columbia Bail Agency in the prosecution of offense for which the Bail Agency statement was given. J. Herbert, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 340 A.2d 802).

In prosecution of two defendants for armed robbery, admission of prior inconsistent statement of one defendant which implicated second defendant in armed robbery was not error where statement was introduced for purposes of impeachment and jury was specifically instructed not to consider impeaching testimony as substantive evidence of second defendant's involvement in the armed robbery. D. Borrero v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 332 A.2d 363).

Refusal, in criminal prosecution, to admit testimony regarding effect of drug use on perception for purposes of impeaching testimony of accomplice, who testified for government and who was a heroin user, unless it was established that accomplice had used narcotics on day of offenses was not error. United States v. I. E. Leonard (1974, 494 F. 2d 955, 161 U.S. App. D.C. 36).

Test of whether witness statements concern collateral matters, so as not to be subject to impeachment, is whether fact as to which statement is predicated could have been independently shown in evidence for any purpose. M. A. Hampton v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 318 A. 2d 598).

Trial court erred when it precluded defendant's counsel from attempting to impeach complaining witness' testimony that she had been told that suspect had been arrested after she viewed police photographs by bringing out witness' grand jury testimony that she had viewed photographs only after being informed of suspect's arrest. Id.

Indictment

The Government may properly charge in the same indictment offenses against both the federal bank (savings and loan) robbery statute and the local armed robbery statute, provided defendant is not ultimately sentenced under two statutes proscribing essentially the same offense. United States v. R. Shepard (1975, 515 F. 2d 1324, 169 U.S. App. D.C. 353).

Robbery count charging defendants with taking money, the property of grocery store, and pistol, the property of security guard was not duplicitous but rather charged that one person, the guard, was robbed of the pistol and the money he was guarding, and, in any event, defendants waived any defect by not protesting before trial. United States v. J. F. Bolden (1975, 514 F. 2d 1301, 169 U.S. App. D.C. 60).

Robbery count of indictments charging that defendants by force and violence and against resistance and by putting in fear stole and took from specified person certain specified property is sufficient to charge robbery under this section, contrary to claim of defendants that it fails to allege all the material and necessary elements of robbery; use of word "stole" put defendants on notice that specific intent is an element of crime with which they were charged. United States v. W. N. Owens et ano. (D.C. App. 1975, 332 A.2d 752).

Refusal to amend robbery count at beginning of trial to include allegation of specific intent to steal was not prejudicial where clear, detailed, and thorough instructions were given; however, it is urged that indictment forms be updated and refined. United States v. L. T. Robinson (1973, 475 F. 2d 376, 154 U.S. App. D.C. 265).

— Dismissal

Since, even if urine test which Government had not produced would have convinced jury that defendant, as a result of intoxication, did not have requisite intent to commit robbery, there was proof beyond reasonable doubt of lesser included offense of simple assault, which does not require proof of specific intent, defendant would not be entitled to dismissal of indictment even if test were shown to have been made and were shown to have been of potential value to defendant. United States v. J. L. Butler (1974, 499 F. 2d 1006, 163 U.S. App. D.C. 1).

Inferences

From a defendant's failure to produce a witness who might reasonably have been expected to verify defendant's alibi, courts usually allow prosecutors to draw inference that testimony of such witness would not have supported the alibi. United States v. A. A. Freeman (1975, 514 F.2d 1314, 169 U.S. App. D.C. 73).

Where defendant's taking stand lacked probative value in itself, inferences which government sought to draw from it, such as that it was indicative of guilt, could only serve to confuse and mislead jury, and such tactic did not become prosecutor, as exemplar of fairness and justice in the criminal system. Id.

Inference of guilt arising from possession of recently stolen property is not an inference of one of the essential elements of the offense, but only of the identity of the perpetrator of the offense of theft independently proven. L. Irby v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 342 A.2d 33).

Jury may infer from change in appearance by someone who has been called to appear in a lineup that change reflects an awareness of guilt and fear of identification. United States v. T. McKinley (1973, 485 F. 2d 1059, 158 U.S. App. D.C. 280).

Inference that, since defendant has violated the law in one respect, he is likely to have violated the law defining the offense charged in the indictment is not permitted lightly, except as to certain defined categories. Id.

Instructions

Trial court properly instructed jury on testimony of accomplices rather than testimony of informers with respect to testimony of witness who had pled guilty to one count of indictment under which he and defendant were charged on the day before defendant's trial and who had participated in the crime with defendant. United States v. M. W. Thorne (1975, 527 F.2d 840, — U.S. App. D.C. —).

Communication between judge and jury in the absence of the defendant and his counsel and the trial court's refusal to give any instructions concerning one "holdout" was not prejudicial error where the defendant did not object prior to the verdict, there was no complaint that the jury had been coerced into agreement during the deliberation and no objection was raised until motion for new trial. United States v. T. B. Diggs (1975, 522 F. 2d 1310, 173 U.S. App. D.C. 95; rehearing en banc denied 535 F.2d 1299, — U.S. App. D.C. —).

Where soon after retiring jury requested instruction on whether aiding and abetting instruction applied to armed robbery count of indictment as well as assault charge, trial court's charging jury that aiding and abetting instruction was applicable to both counts in absence of defendant was, at most, harmless error. United States v. J. Jones, Jr. (1975, 517 F.2d 176, 170 U.S. App. D.C. 362).

Omission of an instruction that voluntary narcosis could negate specific intent to commit the robbery was not plain error, where defense counsel never requested such an instruction, where he previously admitted that defendant's actions indicated that he was not under the influence of narcotics when he confessed, where counsel indicated his satisfaction with the instructions as given, and where the evidence on the issue was not sufficient to require the court to give such an instruction in the absence of a request therefor. United States v. R. Shepard (1975, 515 F.2d 1324, 169 U.S. App. D.C. 353).

Trial court properly denied requested instruction of defendant, who was charged with robbery, to the effect that, in the experience of many, it is more difficult to identify members of a different race than members of one's own and that if such was the jury's experience it could consider that in evaluating the witness' testimony. J. O. Abney v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 347 A. 2d 402).

In view of fact that evidence of plea of guilty to charge other than that on which defendant was being tried was not highly prejudicial, and where defendant did not request "immediate cautionary instruction" and instructions to jury constituted very fair charge with respect to use of prior conviction and evidence concerning defendant's involvement with narcotics, fact that immediate cautionary instruction was not given was not ground for relief. United States v. H. E. Lee (1974, 509 F.2d 400, 166 U.S. App. D.C. 67; cert. denied 95 S. Ct. 1451, 420 U.S. 1006).

Instruction on identification issue recited and approved. United States v. E. L. Inge, Jr. (1974, 494 F. 2d 1102, 161 U.S. App. D.C. 183).

Failure to give an accomplice instruction with regard to accomplices who testified for government was not plain error where nonaccomplice testimony corroborated accomplice testimony to significant extent against one accused and to lesser extent against another and where accomplices did not appear to have extraordinary disposition to prevaricate. United States v. I. E. Leonard (1974, 494 F. 2d 955, 161 U.S. App. D.C. 36).

Refusal to instruct that testimony of accomplices, who testified for government after having been granted immunity, should be considered with caution was reversible error. Id.

Absent waiver of instruction, failure, in prosecution for felony-murder, first-degree murder, armed robbery, robbery and second-degree burglary, to give immediate limiting instruction as to admissibility where testimony of arresting officer was admitted to impeach defendant's testimony that he had not stated that codefendant "lived across the street" was plain error requiring reversal, though general instruction on impeachment evidence was given in very long charge. Id.

Instruction that jury could infer from the unexplained or unsatisfactorily explained possession of stolen money orders that defendants were guilty of taking such money orders, that defendant's possession of the recently stolen property did not shift burden of proof and that Government always had burden of proving beyond reasonable doubt every essential element of offense did not place burden on defendants, alone, to testify and explain satisfactorily their possession of stolen money orders. United States v. J. M. Joyner (1974, 492 F. 2d 650, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 384; cert. denied 95 S. Ct. 94, 419 U.S. 852).

Where jury had commenced its deliberations in prosecution for armed robbery, assault with a dangerous weapon, receiving stolen property, and carrying a pistol without a license, when it presented to the court a question concerning the armed robbery count, the court did not abuse its discretion by giving, in the face of defendant's objection but in the absence of a request to present argument, a supplemental instruction on aiding and abetting. R. W. Atkinson v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 322 A. 2d 587).

Where police officer, testifying in trial of defendants charged with armed robbery, admitted that he had previously testified under oath that there was only one witness to the crime, when he knew that there were two witnesses, and where police officer stated that he so testified in order to protect the second witness, it was not error for court, after instructing jury of the need to scrutinize with care the testimony of a witness who has previously lied under oath, to tell the jury it could take into consideration the reasons for the person's having previously lied. J. N. Smith v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 312 A. 2d 781).

Instruction with respect to identification in prosecution for burglary, rape, and robbery was sufficient for circumstances of case wherein complaining witness did not identify defendant but identity was established from fingerprint evidence. United States v. J. E. Cary (1972, 470 F. 2d 469, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 321).

Jencks Act

In proceeding in which juvenile was adjudged to have committed robbery, refusal to strike testimony of complaining witness when police officer was unable to produce his notes of an interview with witness is not reversible error, in that such "rough" and "almost illegible" notes do not constitute a "statement" within purview of Jencks Act. In the Matter of A. B. H. (D.C. App. 1975, 343 A.2d 573).

In proceeding in which juvenile was adjudged to have committed robbery, even if police officer's notes of an interview with complaining witness constitute a "statement" within purview of Jencks Act, refusal to strike such witness' testimony due to officer's inability to produce such notes was not an abuse of discretion. Id.

In prosecution for armed robbery, in view of extensive pretrial discovery of other Jencks material, in some of which statements made by victim to police officer who lost notebook containing notes of initial conversation with victim were incorporated, availability of police officer to testify as to contents of his notes, and fact that defendant was not arrested as a result of any description given police officer but rather was arrested following on the scene identification by victim of defendant as participant in assault and robbery, any possibility of prejudice caused defendant by loss of notes was remote. E. W. Jones v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 343 A.2d 346).

In the process of balancing rights of accused and public interest when relevant Jencks Act material has been non-purposefully lost or destroyed, imposition of sanction less severe than striking testimony of witness involved or declaring a mistrial may be indicated, and thus in a proper case, trial judge may in lieu of any other sanction charge jury with variant of so-called missing witness instruction. Id.

It was error for trial court not to conduct inquiry into nature of notes taken by prosecutor when interviewing witness before determining that the notes were, as contended by prosecutor, not substantially verbatim and thus not required to be produced for defendant. G. J. Matthews v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 322 A. 2d 908).

It was error for trial court not to determine whether certain police forms and radio runs, which contained initial description of robber given to police by witness and which related to robberies in which defendant, who was charged with robbery, was believed to be a suspect and to which witness who was identifying defendant in the instant case had also been an eyewitness, were producible under the Jencks Act. Id.

Joinder

Review of record showed that the similarity of circumstances surrounding the two criminal episodes on which charges of rape while armed and armed robbery were based were sufficiently remarkable to prove that there was a reasonable probability that the same person committed the crimes and there was no prejudice in the joinder of both crimes in one trial. United States v. R. E. Adams, Jr. (1973, 481 F. 2d 1099, 156 U.S. App. D.C. 415).

In view of fact that scene of armed robbery and assaults on January 17 was different from that of armed robbery and assault on January 11 and assaults on January 16, the victims were different, and only common factor was that in each case the offender was a man wearing a fur coat and fur hat, and that there was no evidence of a common scheme or plan embracing commission of all of the offenses, it was prejudicial error to join trial of charges relating to offenses on January 17 with trial on other counts alleging offenses on January 11 and January 16, notwithstanding Government's contention that evidence of each offense was simple and distinct so that jury could not possibly have been confused. United States v. T. E. Carter (1973, 475 F. 2d 349, 154 U.S. App. D.C. 238).

Jury

Where there was no showing which would cause trial judge to inquire into possible prejudice against the defendant because he was black, the defendant did not exhaust the peremptory challenges to which he was entitled and no effort was made by detailed questions to disqualify any prospective juror, it was not error for the trial judge to decline to permit defense counsel to inquire whether the prospective jurors "have had any dealings or experience with black persons that might make it difficult for them" to sit in judgment on the case. United States v. T. B. Diggs (1975, 522 F. 2d 1310, 173 U.S. App. D.C. 95; rehearing en banc denied 535 F.2d 1299, — U.S. App. D.C. —).

— Poll

Trial court committed reversible error by continuing to poll jury after first juror had indicated she did not agree with guilty verdict on the first armed robbery count, notwithstanding government hypothesis that dissenting juror was confused by multiple-count indictment, since trial judge, rather than stopping poll and questioning juror to determine if she were confused by indictment, chose to continue the poll. J. Kendall v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 349 A. 2d 464).

Lesser included offense

Assault with dangerous weapon on motel clerk was lesser included offense of armed robbery of same person, and conviction of former could not stand as conviction for another offense. United States v. H. E. Lee (1974, 509 F.2d 400, 166 U.S. App. D.C. 67; cert. denied 95 S. Ct. 1451, 420 U.S. 1006).

It was improper to convict defendant both for assault with a dangerous weapon and armed robbery where the assault was a necessary part of the evidence needed to support the count of armed robbery. R. Taylor v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 324 A. 2d 683).

Assault with dangerous weapon was lesser included offense of armed robbery; thus, defendants could not be convicted of both three counts of armed robbery and three counts of assault with a deadly weapon and convictions of assault would be reversed. United States v. T. McKinley (1973, 485 F. 2d 1059, 158 U.S. App. D.C. 280).

Under District of Columbia statute assault with a dangerous weapon is a lesser included offense of robbery while armed. United States v. J. Johnson (1973, 475 F. 2d 1297, 155 U.S. App. D.C. 28).

Where jury returned a verdict of guilty on each of four counts of robbery while armed involving different victims it was error to receive verdicts from the jury on the four counts of assault with a dangerous weapon, a lesser included offense, with respect to the same victims. Id.

Mental capacity

Record, including testimony of a private psychiatrist who examined defendant at government expense, was sufficient to support finding that criminal acts committed by defendant (armed robbery, assault with a dangerous weapon, and carrying a dangerous weapon) were not so proximately tied to defendant's mental impairments as to require his exculpation. United States v. G. A. Wilson (1972, 471 F. 2d 1072, 153 U.S. App. D.C. 104; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 1431, 410 U.S. 957).

Merger of offenses

Armed robbery, committed after burglary, is not lesser included offense of first-degree burglary or an offense coextensive with first-degree burglary but an offense separate and distinct from burglary so that defendant can be convicted of both offenses. W. Strickland, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 332 A.2d 746).

Where, in course of armed robbery, shotgun was pointed at two distinct individuals at different times, there was no error in entering separate judgments of conviction of armed robbery and assault with dangerous weapon. D. Borrero v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 332 A.2d 363).

Where assault with dangerous weapon offense was submitted to jury on specific instruction that it could convict on assault with dangerous weapon charge only if it found that separate and apart from pointing the gun at complaining witness, the complaining witness was beaten with the gun, and jury returned verdict of guilty, assault with dangerous weapon was not a lesser included offense within the armed robbery, offenses did not merge, and punishment for both did not constitute cumulative punishment. C. M. Dixon, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 320 A. 2d 318).

Housebreaking and robbery convictions can stand together since robbery and burglary statutes which codify common law protect distinct societal interests. Id.

Convictions of assault with a dangerous weapon merged with armed robbery convictions connected with same robbery of drugstore and would thus be set aside. United States v. T. R. Toy (1973, 482 F. 2d 741, 157 U.S. App. D.C. 152).

Where armed robberies and assaults with a dangerous weapon were committed against same persons, latter offenses merged into former, and convictions on assault charges could not stand, though a remand for resentencing was not required where defendant had been given separate sentences, and all sentences were set to run concurrently. United States v. A. Holiday (1973, 482 F. 2d 729, 157 U.S. App. D.C. 140).

A count charging assault with a dangerous weapon is merged with a count charging armed robbery. J. N. Smith v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 312 A. 2d 781).

Miranda rights—Waiver

In armed robbery prosecution, in which it could have been inferred, from evidence that defendant was unwilling to have his statements recorded in writing, that defendant had mistakenly assumed that only written statements could be used against him, Government sustained its burden of establishing a knowing waiver by defendant of his right to independent legal assistance after his arrest. United States v. E. R. Frazier (1973, 476 F. 2d 891, 155 U.S. App. D.C. 135).

It was not for police officer to place legal interpretation on language of Miranda warnings he was directed to give and to continue or suspend interview in accordance with what that interpretation might be, and even though it could be inferred from defendant's unwillingness to have his statements recorded in writing that he mistakenly assumed that only written statements could be used against him, allowing defendant to pursue his evident desire to keep on talking was neither an unreasonable nor a deceptive tactic on police officer's part which deprived defendant of due process; especially where defendant had already confessed his most serious crime before note-taking episode occurred. Id.

Mistrial

Defendant was not entitled to a mistrial on ground that the jury, in its request for additional instructions, had made an unsolicited disclosure of its numerical division. United States v. T. B. Diggs (1975, 522 F.2d 1310, 173 U.S. App. D.C. 95; rehearing en banc denied 535 F.2d 1299, — U.S. App. D.C. —).

Possession

"Possession" as used in robbery statute does not mean strict legal ownership, but rather "custody or control" in a colloquial sense. United States v. T. B. Dixon (1972, 469 F. 2d 940, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 200).

Prearrest delay

Record was devoid of any indication that delay in arresting defendant, which occurred ten months after date of the offenses, was the product of any deliberate effort by police to gain an advantage, record furnished abundant evidentiary support for finding that a reasonable endeavor was made to locate defendant and, in addition, record sustained additional finding that, in any event, defendant was not harmed by the delay, in prosecution for armed robbery, assault with a dangerous weapon, and for carrying a pistol without a license. United States v. L. Parish (1972, 468 F. 2d 1129, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 72; cert. denied 93 S.Ct. 1430, 410 U.S. 957).

Probable cause

Police officer who knew that armed robbery had been committed, who had a description of the robber from the victim, who had the admission of one person who appeared to be a coconspirator that it was committed by defendant, who was told that defendant could be found in a certain apartment, and who arrived at the apartment and found defendant hiding between the mattress and box springs of a bed had probable cause to arrest defendant without a warrant. T. Johnson v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 349 A. 2d 458).

Where officers had received a citizen's complaint of a robbery, together with description of assailants and car in which they escaped, officers pulled a car to curb because it and its occupants substantially matched description given in radio broadcast which officers had received and one officer upon looking into car observed a coat similar to that described as taken in the robbery, there was probable cause to arrest occupants, and to seize the tangible evidence of the crime. L. Irby v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 342 A.2d 33).

— Entry without warrant

Fact that police uncovered ample evidence to establish probable cause to arrest defendant once they entered motel room was of no relevance to question whether initial warrantless entry was valid. United States v. J. Lindsay, Jr. (1974, 506 F. 2d 166, 165 U.S. App. D.C. 105).

Prosecution

It is not a denial of due process for the Government to choose to prosecute under a federal statute which imposes a greater penalty than an identical local statute; and this reasoning applies with equal force to the situation where the local statute provides greater penalties than the federal statute. United States v. R. Shepard (1975, 515 F.2d 1324, 169 U.S. App. D.C. 353).

Prosecutor's remarks

In prosecution for armed robbery, allegedly improper prosecutorial remarks did not affect substantial rights of defendant where such remarks were not referenced to defendant's failure to testify in his own defense and where trial court gave adequate curative instruction. E. W. Jones v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 343 A. 2d 346).

Reversible error

In view of narrow base on which armed robbery prosecution rested, reviewing court could not say with fair assurance that jury was not substantially swayed by combined effect of errors in admitting hearsay, in permitting prosecutor's comment thereon and in permitting other confusing and misleading comments of prosecutor including comment on defendant's taking stand; and reversal of conviction was thus necessary. United States v. A. A. Freeman (1975, 514 F. 2d 1314, 169 U.S. App. D.C. 73).

Right to counsel

Fact that defendant was already in custody on charge of possession of a sawed-off shotgun did not preclude the police from conducting, in the absence of counsel, a photographic identification in order to link defendant with armed robbery. United States v. J. E. Jackson (1974, 509 F. 2d 499, 166 U.S. App. D.C. 166).

Sixth Amendment does not grant an accused the right to have counsel present at government conducted post-indictment photographic display containing a picture of accused for purpose of allowing witness to attempt identification of offender in absence of accused. United States v. C. J. Ash, Jr. (1973, 93 S. Ct. 2568, 413 U.S. 300; rev'g and remand'g 461 F. 2d 92, 149 U.S. App. D.C. 1).

Search and seizure

Tenant who called attention of police officers, who had just arrested defendant in tenant's apartment, to a refrigerator in the outside hall consented to the search of the refrigerator so that items found therein are admissible against defendant. T. Johnson v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 349 A.2d 458).

Where defendant's car fit description given by accomplice and another witness and was found in vicinity of defendant who met description given by the accomplice, and where defendant voluntarily surrendered his keys to police and they fit car, tying car to evidence of its use, there was probable cause for seizure of the car, and police could either seize and hold car or make immediate warrantless search, and where it was difficult to make detailed search of car where it was found, subsequent search at station house, 24 hours later, was reasonable; police had duty to act as quickly as possible to obtain evidence that might exonerate or incriminate, and there were thus exigent circumstances. United States v. H. E. Lee (1974, 509 F. 2d 400, 166 U.S. App. D.C. 67; cert. denied 95 S. Ct. 1451, 420 U.S. 1006).

Search of closet, which contained partially-dressed defendant's clothing, for weapons, was incident to arrest, since closet was area from which defendant might have gained weapon at time when he was to secure additional clothing, and seizure of trousers, which fit description given by victim, was proper since they were in plain view during valid search. J. L. Walker v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 318 A. 2d 290).

Sentence

Where concurrent sentences imposed on each conviction for assault with a dangerous weapon were adjudged to run concurrently with burglary and armed robbery convictions, no remand for resentencing was necessary on vacation of convictions for assault with a dangerous weapon. United States v. S. Kearney, Jr. (1974, 498 F. 2d 61, 162 U.S. App. D.C. 110).

Where 20-year-old defendant's prior sentence was served without services of youth center, section 5010(e), 18 U.S.C., report indicated that defendant's feeling of inadequacy lay with his inability, due to lack of marketable skills, to support himself and his family, reasons suggested in report for imposition of adult sentence for robbery without a weapon were that defendant was a "rather street-wise individual" and that he had failed to prove himself because he was on Youth Act probation when arrested and trial judge failed to state any independent reasons for imposing adult sentence, sentence was required to be vacated and case remanded for reconsideration of Youth Corrections Act treatment; section 5010(e) report failed to provide adequate reasons for denial of such treatment. United States v. T. M. Phillips (1973, 479 F. 2d 1200, 156 U.S. App. D.C. 217).

— Concurrent

Although a violation of the District of Columbia armed robbery statutes and a violation of the federal mail robbery statute required different elements of proof, and although, in the instant case, concurrent sentences were imposed, the conviction of defendants on both charges, arising from a single transaction, was improper, necessitating remand to the trial court with instructions to vacate the judgment on one of the counts and to resentencing on the other count. United States v. A. B. Knight (1974, 509 F. 2d 354, 166 U.S. App. D.C. 21).

— Consecutive

Where, during course of robbery of market, defendant robbed the property of the store owners and robbed a store employe of his own property, his wallet, the episode was not a "unitary transaction" but involved two distinct offenses. United States v. T. B. Diggs (1975, 522 F. 2d 1310, 173 U.S. App. D.C. 95; rehearing en banc denied 535 F. 2d 1299, — U.S. App. D.C. —).

Severance

Grant of severance was not required on ground that defendant could have called codefendant to testify that defendants were not together when homicide and robbery occurred where there was no indication that codefendant would have been willing to testify at defendant's trial, and if codefendant were to testify, Government's impeaching statement which was inculpatory of defendant would probably have surfaced. United States v. J. F. Bolden (1975, 514 F. 2d 1301, 169 U.S. App. D.C. 60).

Where prejudice to one defendant from prior inconsistent statement made by second defendant which implicated first defendant in crime was eliminated by instruction which cautioned jury to consider inconsistent statement only for purposes of impeachment of second defendant, denial, as untimely, of first defendant's motion for severance was not abuse of discretion. D. Borrero v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 332 A. 2d 363).

Refusal to grant severance in prosecution for felony-murder, first-degree murder, armed robbery, robbery and second-degree burglary, was not prejudicial to defendant due to fact that evidence placing a codefendant at scene of crime was quantitatively and qualitatively greater than evidence against defendant where evidence against defendant was both substantial and compelling, jury was specifically instructed to determine guilt of each defendant by considering only his own conduct and evidence which applied to him and where verdicts demonstrated that jury fulfilled its obligation under charge. United States v. I. E. Leonard (1974, 494 F. 2d 955, 161 U.S. App. D.C. 36).

Fact that there was conflict in accused's defenses, in that codefendants relied on separate alibi defenses and defendant admitted his presence at scene of offenses and in that such defendant's efforts to discredit testimony that he and a codefendant knocked out victim assertedly undermined such codefendant's alibi defense and fact that defendant did not testify and thus codefendants were precluded from cross-examining him did not so prejudice codefendants as to render refusal to grant severance an abuse of discretion where damaging implications of defendant's defense were corroborated by substantial testimony. Id.

Admission, in criminal prosecution in which a defendant did not testify, of admissible testimony as to such defendant's hearsay statements which incriminated codefendants did not require severance on ground that admission violated codefendants' right of confrontation where, even if codefendants were tried separately, such testimony would have been admissible and defendant probably would have invoked Fifth Amendment, where there was substantial other eyewitness testimony incriminating codefendants and where, since defendant was an accomplice, reliability of his hearsay declaration was "inevitably suspect." Id.

Where count of indictment charging defendant with carrying pistol on day of his arrest was dismissed for failure of proof before case was submitted to jury and indictment was retyped, omitting count, defendant was not prejudiced by court's refusal to sever such properly joined count from counts charging felony murder, first-degree burglary and armed robbery. United States v. J. M. Joyner (1974, 492 F.2d 650, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 384; cert. denied 95 S. Ct. 94, 419 U.S. 852).

Where admission of evidence concerning the close relationship between defendant and codefendant was clearly relevant to codefendant's defense of alibi and mistaken identity and there was no conflict in defenses, trial court did not err in refusing to grant defendant a severance. G. S. Crawley v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 328 A. 2d 777).

Issue of whether severance should have been granted after codefendant testified in such manner as to negate planned joint defense was not preserved for appeal, where no motion was made to trial court upon which it could have exercised its discretion to grant a severance, and where defendant did not demonstrate any prejudice occasioned by his codefendant's testimony which would justify a holding of plain error in allowing the joint trial to proceed. W. J. Edwards, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 328 A. 2d 90).

Fifteen-month delay between arrest and trial was such as to constitute a denial of defendant's right to a speedy trial where delay was not, at all times, attributable to defendant, who suffered personal prejudice by reason of fact that he was confined throughout period, though he continually pressed his motion for release pending trial, and where personal prejudice resulting from pretrial incarceration was exacerbated by fact that defendant was a youth being confined in an adult jail and fact that defendant was especially handicapped by his social and educational background. United States v. W. H. Calloway (1974, 505 F. 2d 311, 164 U.S. App. D.C. 204).

Thirteen months' delay between arrest and trial did not deny defendants their right to speedy trial where first seven months' delay was at least partially justifiable, one defendant was incarcerated only during that portion of period between arrest and trial in which delay was justifiable and longer period that other defendant spent in pretrial detention was attributable to fact that, having been released pending trial, he violated conditions of release and was reincarcerated. United States v. E. L. Cooper (1974, 504 F. 2d 260, 164 U.S. App. D.C. 191).

Fifteen months' interval between defendant's arrest and trial did not deny defendant the right to a speedy trial and thus entitle defendant to have indictment dismissed, where defendant was at liberty on bond and did not seek an earlier trial until his motion directed to such issue was filed about 14 months after his arrest, and trial began on day following day on which such motion was heard and denied, and where there was no suggestion that any witnesses died or became unavailable, any prejudice to defendant as to alleged loss of memory on part of himself and his mother concerning alibi defense did not affect outcome, and defendant was identified by six witnesses. United States v. T. R. Toy (1973, 482 F. 2d 741, 157 U.S. App. D.C. 152).

Right to speedy trial of defendant, charged with armed robbery, assault with dangerous weapon, and of carrying a pistol without a license, was not impinged by nine-month delay extending from his indictment to his trial where, during the first two months defendant was still at large and police were doing their best to locate him, where defendant did not press a speedy trial right until five months after he was arrested, and where record was sufficient to sustain finding that defendant suffered no prejudice to his defense which could be attributed to the delay at the postarrest stage of the prosecution. United States v. L. Parish (1972, 468 F. 2d 1129, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 72; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 1430, 410 U.S. 957).

Verdict

In prosecution for armed robbery and for assault with a dangerous weapon, trial court did not erroneously permit jury to return a separate verdict on assault with a dangerous weapon charge, where evidence disclosed that after armed robbery of cash register of store defendant forced victim at gunpoint to walk to rear of store where she was searched and on leaving defendant warned victim about possibility of being shot if she came out before defendant got out of store. G. W. Bates v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 327 A. 2d 542).

Witnesses

Evidence that defendant's sole defense witness had been charged with obstruction of justice for her alleged efforts to persuade complaining witness not to identify codefendant, her brother, should not have been admitted over objection, in prosecution for assault and armed robbery, to impeach witness, where testimony of complaining witness revealed to jury facts which were basis for charge; prejudicial effect of admission of arrest and charge outweighed probative substance. United States v. C. Maynard (1973, 476 F. 2d 1170, 155 U.S. App. D.C. 223).

Discretion of trial court to grant pretrial physical or mental examination of prospective witnesses should not be exercised in absence of substantial factual predicate for the same and upon substantial showing of need and justification. United States v. D. T. Butler (1971, 325 F. Supp. 886; aff'd 481 F. 2d 531, 156 U.S. App. D.C. 356).

In absence of substantial showing of need and justification, hearing on defense motion for pretrial physical and psychiatric examination of prospective government witnesses would not be continued to allow defendant to subpoena one of the witnesses, despite allegation that such witness had told defense counsel that witness was narcotic addict. Id.

§ 22-2902. Attempt to commit robbery.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Identification

In prosecution for attempted robbery while armed, where complainant, at front door of his apartment building, was accosted by three men who demanded his money and wallet, where he ran across street to seek help, where the three men walked away down the street, where at that moment a police cruiser happened by and complainant reported the incident, where the officers took complainant in the cruiser and made a search of the area, where they decided to search a nearby apartment building but told complainant to remain in the cruiser, where the officers apprehended two men in the building, and where the complainant, because he was afraid to stay in the cruiser alone, came into the building and immediately identified the two men, the on-the-scene confrontation was not so unduly suggestive as to create a substantial likelihood of misidentification. J. D. Bowler v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 322 A.2d 281).

Knowledge on part of an eyewitness that persons on trial were arrested for crime may be taken into account where there is other indication of suggestivity, but mere fact that suspects are included within lineup and that witnesses know or assume this to be the case is an inescapable aspect of lineup identification procedure and does not, without more, provide reason for exclusion of pretrial and in-court identifications. United States v. C. L. Pearson (1973, 478 F. 2d 659, 155 U.S. App. D.C. 455).

Pretrial and in-court identifications of defendant by eyewitness to crime were not subject to exclusion by reason of fact that investigating officer told witness at lineup that she had "done well," where there was no reason to suppose that officer's remark was more than a comforting gesture to witness, who was, quite naturally, on edge, and jury had before it testimony as to (slightly more tentative) lineup identification and was likely to credit this, which was uninfluenced by subsequent remark, far more than taken for granted in-court identification. Id.

Severance

In order to assert that statement admissible solely against codefendants prejudicially implicated defendant, he must establish that statement admissible against codefendants directly implicated him, that statement was made by one whose interest was adversely affected and who was not government informant, and that statement itself was as powerfully incriminating as a confession, and there must be no independent evidence of guilt. M. Brabham v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 326 A. 2d 254; cert. denied 95 S. Ct. 1993, 421 U.S. 989).

Admission of hearsay statement of codefendant that he, defendant and others were going to kill prosecution witness, did not so prejudicially affect defendant as to justify severance of his case. Id.

Chapter 31.—TRESPASS—INJURIES TO PROPERTY

§ 22-3101. Forcible entry and detainer.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Construction

Neither the unlawful entry statute nor the forcible entry statute engrafts any additional elements on first-degree burglary statute of the District of Columbia; unlawful entry statute does not purport to amend burglary statutes and does not do so by operation of law, expressly or impliedly, nor do requirements of unlawful entry statute constitute additional elements of every second-degree burglary. United States v. S. Kearney, Jr. (1974, 498 F. 2d 61, 162 U.S. App. D.C. 110).

Elements of offense

While burglary does not include elements of breaking or force, offense of forcible entry does. United States v. T. Melton, Jr. (1973, 491 F.2d 45, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 252).

Remand

Jury's verdict, finding defendant guilty of first-degree burglary which could not stand because of lack of proof of intent to commit crime in premises, would not be taken as indicating that jury found all elements asserting to conclude that he had committed a forcible entry and therefore Court of Appeals could not authorize on remand a judgment of conviction of forcible entry even though evidence was presented at trial from which jury might have concluded that defendant had committed that offense, it was open to government to decline the unlawful entry conviction on remand and to seek instead to indict and prosecute for forcible entry. United States v. T. Melton, Jr. (1973, 491 F. 2d 45, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 252).

§ 22-3102. Unlawful entry on property.

CROSS REFERENCE

Burglary, see § 22-1801.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Assistance of counsel

Motion to withdraw as counsel on appeal asserting that trial counsel failed for nontactical reasons to request severance of counts of destroying property after trial court granted motion for judgment of acquittal on one count and denied motion as to second count did not raise question of professional incompetence; issue on appeal could be treated in terms of whether a new trial should have been granted. W. J. Angarano v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 312 A. 2d 295; reconsideration denied 329 A. 2d 453).

Constitutional rights

Role played by District of Columbia police officer in informing hotel security personnel of defendant's criminal record prior to time hotel ordered defendant not to return is not sufficient to convert the private action of hotel in barring defendant therefrom into essentially a governmental act, even assuming that an opposite conclusion would affect result in prosecution for unlawful entry. M. C. Kelly v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 348 A.2d 884).

Construction

Neither the unlawful entry statute nor the forcible entry statute engrafts any additional elements on first-degree burglary statute of the District of Columbia; unlawful entry statute does not purport to amend burglary statutes and does not do so by operation of law, expressly or impliedly, nor do requirements of unlawful entry statute constitute additional elements of every second-degree burglary. United States v. S. Kearney, Jr. (1974, 498 F.2d 61, 162 U.S. App. D.C. 110).

Cross-examination

In prosecution for unlawful entry and assault with deadly weapon, trial court did not improperly limit defendant's attempts to cross-examine government witnesses as to their possible desire to protect their employer from civil suit. J. F. Hyman v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 342 A.2d 43).

Elements of offense

Element that distinguishes burglary from unlawful entry is the intent to commit crime once unlawful entry has been accomplished. United States v. T. Melton, Jr. (1973, 491 F.2d 45, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 252).

Hotels

Where party who is not a guest in hotel was warned not to return to hotel and is subsequently found in the hotel, her subsequent entrance into hotel constitutes unlawful entry. M. C. Kelly v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 348 A.2d 884).

Instructions

In prosecution based on defendants' unconsented entry into offices of chemical company and their destruction of certain property in it, instruction that Vietnam war was not issue in case and that, if government proved beyond reasonable doubt that one or more of defendants committed elements of crimes charged, law does not recognize as defense that defendants were motivated to commit their acts by sincere political, religious or moral convictions or in obedience to some higher law was not improper despite contention that instructions were coercive, tantamount to directed verdict of guilty and outside proper scope of judicial instruction. United States v. M. R. Dougherty (1972, 473 F.2d 1113, 154 U.S. App. D.C. 76).

Lawful arrest

When restaurant patron, in presence of police officer, refused to leave on demand of restaurant manager for her shoeless condition, officer was justified in arresting patron for violation of unlawful entry statute. S. M. Feldt v. Marriott Corporation (D.C. App. 1974, 322 A.2d 913).

Lesser included offense

Whether unlawful entry is lesser included offense with respect to any particular crime that is charged depends not solely upon comparison of statutory requirements for respective crimes but also upon analysis of facts of offense as charged in each indictment and as proved at trial. United States v. S. Kearney, Jr. (1974, 498 F.2d 61, 162 U.S. App. D.C. 110).

Plea of guilty

Where defendant charged with first-degree burglary tendered plea of guilty to lesser-included offense of unlawful entry, and trial judge was presented with a factual basis for the plea, plea should not have been refused simply because defendant refused to accompany his plea with an admission of guilt. United States v. T. Gaskins (1973, 485 F.2d 1046, 158 U.S. App. D.C. 267).

Prosecutor's comments

Where, although issue of witness' credibility was salient, Government's evidence was strong, objection to improper argument was promptly made and statement stricken, and only one such statement was made over entire course of prosecutor's closing and rebuttal arguments, no prejudicial error occurred when prosecutor told jury that it could fairly conclude that defendant "almost appeared irrational" on stand. J. F. Hyman v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 342 A.2d 43).

Remand

Where defendant's first-degree burglary conviction had to be set aside for lack of proof of intent to commit crime in premises entered but jury necessarily found facts required for conviction of lesser included offense of unlawful entry and the evidence was sufficient to support this determination, Court of Appeals would remand case with instructions to enter, if government consents, judgment of conviction of unlawful entry or, if court believes it in interest of justice, to grant new trial on lesser offense. United States v. T. Melton, Jr. (1973, 491 F.2d 45, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 252).

Jury's verdict, finding defendant guilty of first-degree burglary which could not stand because of lack of proof of intent to commit crime in premises, would not be taken as indicating that jury found all elements asserting to conclude that he had committed a forcible entry and therefore Court of Appeals could not authorize on remand a judgment of conviction of forcible entry even though evidence was presented at trial from which jury might have concluded that defendant had committed that offense, it was open to government to decline the unlawful entry conviction on remand and to seek instead to indict and prosecute for forcible entry. Id.

Restaurant patron

Under unlawful entry statute, one who lawfully enters may be guilty of a misdemeanor by refusing to leave after being ordered to do so by the person lawfully in charge of the premises. S. M. Feldt v. Marriott Corporation (D.C. App. 1974, 322 A.2d 913).

§ 22-3117. Tapping or injuring water-pipes—Tampering with water meters.

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

Chapter 32.—WEAPONS

§ 22-3202. Committing crime when armed—Added punishment.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Aider and abettor

An aider and abettor of an armed robbery is not guilty of a lesser included offense but is a principal to the robbery. R. W. Atkinson v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 322 A.2d 587).

Assistance of counsel

Even if pretrial identifications which resulted from one lineup and one two-man showup were improper, defendant was not denied effective assistance of counsel because of counsel's failure to move, pretrial, for suppression of the identifications where there was abundant evidence of sources independent of those pretrial identifications to support the in-court identifications. S. S. Shelton v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 323 A.2d 717).

Where an attorney has represented a convicted defendant at trial and, as defendant's attorney on appeal, concludes in good faith that a legitimate issue exists as to the constitutional adequacy of his representation of the defendant at trial, it is the duty of the attorney to move to withdraw as counsel on appeal. Id.

Confessions

Police officer's embellishment of Miranda warning with statement that, if defendant could not afford an attorney one would be appointed in court the next day, was only one factor to be considered in determining whether defendant's subsequent confession was made after a knowing, intelligent, and voluntary waiver of his rights, and trial court erred in ruling that said embellishment necessarily rendered confession inadmissible. United States v. J. Rawls (D.C. App. 1974, 322 A.2d 903).

Notwithstanding defendant's contention that the trial court erred in failing to suppress his alleged confession where it was uncontroverted that he had made known his wish and intention to consult with an attorney, but where the Government had, nevertheless, continued to interrogate him in the absence of an attorney and eventually elicited the confession, the record showed, in support of conclusion that defendant waived his right to the presence of an attorney, that defendant simply indicated he was "undecided" about an attorney and then decided to go ahead and give a statement. United States v. W. H. Howard (1972, 470 F. 2d 406, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 258).

Constitutionality

This section is not unconstitutional because it divests the trial court of discretion concerning duration of punishment or the granting of probation. United States v. J. Bridgeman (1975, 523 F. 2d 1099, 173 U.S. App. D.C. 150; cert. denied 96 S. Ct. 1743, 1744, — U.S. —).

Statute withholding benefits of Youth Corrections Act from those twice convicted of armed crimes of violence is not unreasonable and did not deny youth twice convicted of crimes of violence equal protection of laws. United States v. E. C. Thomas (1973, 485 F. 2d 1012, 158 U.S. App. D.C. 233).

Construction

This section does not require that the second crime occur after sentence is adjudged in the prior crime of violence; defendant who was sentenced for second crime after he had been convicted of prior crime came within purview of this section even though sentence on the first conviction was not adjudged until after the second crime was committed. United States v. J. Bridgeman (1975, 523 F. 2d 1099, 173 U.S. App. D.C. 150; cert. denied 96 S. Ct. 1743, 1744, — U.S. —).

When Congress in 1967 amended the District of Columbia Code provision relating to armed robbery, providing a higher penalty for robberies in the District than had been provided since 1948 for federal mail robbery, it intended to provide the sentencing judge with discretion in determining the penalty in a combined prosecution for both offenses; what is impermissible is not the joinder of both for trial but the joinder of judgments, even with concurrent sentences. United States v. A. B. Knight (1974, 509 F. 2d 354, 166 U.S. App. D.C. 21).

Dangerous or deadly weapon

Under this section providing for punishment of one who commits crime of violence while "armed with or having readily available any pistol or firearm (or imitation thereof) or other dangerous or deadly weapon," an "imitation" or blank pistol is a "dangerous or deadly weapon." K. Meredith v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 343 A. 2d 317).

Double jeopardy

Where the same sovereignty is involved, the double jeopardy principle bars multiple prosecutions for the same offense by different elements of that sovereignty, and under that principle, multiple prosecutions by the District of Columbia and the United States are barred. United States v. A. B. Knight (1974, 509 F. 2d 354, 166 U.S. App. D.C. 21).

If anything, the federal mail robbery statute contemplates a single conviction, not multiple convictions, when the first tier of mail robbery is aggravated by the use of a deadly weapon. Id.

Fact that mistrial was declared in first prosecution of defendant for armed robbery would not, under the doctrine of collateral estoppel, preclude his conviction on one count of armed robbery in second prosecution, where jury in the first trial had made no findings, so that defendant's presence as one of the robbers was not inconsistent with these results. United States v. R. N. Perry (1974, 504 F. 2d 180, 164 U.S. App. D.C. 111).

Evidence—Admissibility

In prosecution on several counts arising from the robbery of a mail truck, the admission in evidence of a .38-caliber pistol was proper, where a government witness testified that the pistol belonged to one of the defendants and was carried by him during the robbery. United States v. A. B. Knight (1974, 509 F. 2d 354, 166 U.S. App. D.C. 21).

Even if, in prosecution on several counts arising from the robbery of a mail truck it was improper to admit in evidence a rifle and ammunition, whose only apparent connection with the crime charged was that they may have been purchased with the proceeds of the robbery, the error was harmless beyond a reasonable doubt, since there was no danger that the evidence was inflammatory and since independent evidence of the guilt of the defendant in whose apartment the rifle and ammunition was found was overwhelming. Id.

In prosecution for armed robbery, sawed-off shotgun seized at time of arrest was admissible where there was evidence as to resemblance of exhibit and gun used at scene of offense and trial judge commented that the gun could not be introduced as the gun used in the crime and that the question was for jury to determine. United States v. T. McKinley (1973, 485 F. 2d 1059, 158 U.S. App. D.C. 280).

Testimony that defendants had changed their appearance was admissible to provide basis for jury inference concerning reason that witnesses were unable to identify defendants in court. Id.

Court ordered lineup forms instructing each defendant not to alter his appearance prior to lineup were admissible even absent evidence that defendants had actually received notice of the orders where there was no testimony that orders had not been served or that defendants had not been informed of the provisions of the orders; prosecutor was entitled to proceed on presumption that court orders were in fact served, without adducing proof of such service. Id.

Testimony by police officer that he had overheard defendant threatening a witness with respect to witness' identification of him as the perpetrator of the crime and telling witness that she had been a fool to allow the policeman to trick her into identifying the defendant was admissible as evidence of an admission directly relevant to guilt and was not rendered inadmissible by the fact that it also contained evidence of another crime—obstruction of justice. J. N. Smith v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 312 A. 2d 781).

Prosecutor cannot offer bad character evidence unless accused first introduces evidence of good character, and even then prosecutor's proof is restricted to community reputation and to trait and traits to which accused's own character evidence related. United States v. J. A. Lewis (1973, 482 F. 2d 632, 157 U.S. App. D.C. 43).

When character witness, either for accused or for prosecution, is offered, he is subject to cross-examination as to his testimonial qualifications just like any other witness, and probe on cross-examination may extend to those matters, among others, which legitimately affect witness' knowledge of accused's community reputation for the character trait or traits which he confirms. Id.

Where at time judge ruled, during second trial for armed robbery and related offenses, that if defense put on good character witnesses then prosecution could cross-examine such witnesses to determine, if they were aware of defendant's arrest for narcotics two weeks before commencement of second trial but ten months after the occurrence of offenses for which he was being tried, judge did not know whether witness would speak to reputation for peace and good order or as to reputation for truth and veracity, trial judge did not have essential information and ruling was error, but in view of government's case error was not prejudicial. Id.

— Polygraph tests

Expert testimony based on results of defendant's polygraph examination was inadmissible. United States v. E. Zeiger (1972, 475 F. 2d 1280, 155 U.S. App. D.C. 11; rev'g 350 F. Supp. 685).

— Sufficiency

Testimony by prison guards that they were locked in a cell and held as hostages, that defendant frequently checked the cell where the guards were confined, that he told the guards that he "had nothing to lose by going out looking," that defendant separated himself from a group of inmates who did not want to escape immediately before rebellious inmates clustered for breakout attempt, and that defendant thereafter came by the cell many times armed with a short piece of steel with a sharp end and threatened the hostages was sufficient to sustain defendant's convictions for attempted escape, armed kidnapping, robbery, and riot. United States v. J. Bridgeman (1975, 523 F. 2d 1099, 173 U.S. App. D.C. 150; cert. denied 96 S. Ct. 1743, 1744, — U.S. —).

In prosecution for commission of crime of violence while armed with a dangerous or deadly weapon, it is not required that Government prove that gun used in an armed offense was loaded or operable, and testimony that object which appeared to be gun was involved is sufficient to show use of dangerous weapon. K. Meredith v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 343 A. 2d 317).

Evidence was sufficient to establish requisite intent to support conviction of assault with intent to kill of defendant, who shot victim from a distance of six feet. United States v. T. L. Robertson (1974, 507 F. 2d 1148, 165 U.S. App. D.C. 325).

Evidence, including the testimony of an eyewitness involving all three defendants in the assault upon victim, was sufficient to support verdict of jury finding defendants guilty of felony-murder and assault with intent to commit rape while armed. United States v. B. J. Heinlein (1973, 490 F.2d 725, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 157).

Evidence that victim had $231 in his pocket and was carrying four or five packages when he was confronted by two men who held gun on him and went through his pockets and that victim told policemen that he had been robbed was insufficient to support armed robbery conviction. United States v. C. McGill (1973, 487 F. 2d 1208, 159 U.S. App. D.C. 337).

Evidence was sufficient to support convictions of assault with intent to kill while armed. United States v. J. Hill (1972, 470 F. 2d 361, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 213).

Identification

Identification procedures were not so impermissibly suggestive as to give rise to very substantial likelihood of irreparable misidentification though officer told witness that photo of suspect was included in photographic array, where in photographic identification, robbery victim chose two photographs of men whom he thought resembled the robber, one of which was defendant, and in subsequent lineup, robbery victim failed to identify defendant at all. G. S. Crawley v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 328 A. 2d 777).

In prosecution for attempted robbery while armed, where complainant, at front door of his apartment building, was accosted by three men who demanded his money and wallet, where he ran across street to seek help, where the three men walked away down the street, where at that moment a police cruiser happened by and complainant reported the incident, where the officers took complainant in the cruiser and made a search of the area, where they decided to search a nearby apartment building but told complainant to remain in the cruiser, where the officers apprehended two men in the building, and where the complainant, because he was afraid to stay in the cruiser alone, came into the building and immediately identified the two men, the on-the-scene confrontation was not so unduly suggestive as to create a substantial likelihood of misidentification. J. D. Bowler v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 322 A.2d 281).

Lineup

Where defendant was lawfully in custody, police were authorized to place him in lineup in connection with unrelated offense. United States v. J. F. Anderson (1974, 490 F.2d 785, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 217).

Where defendant had been lawfully arrested for assault with intent to commit robbery while armed and was in custody or on bond, no court order was required before he could be viewed at lineup by victims of prior robbery, as long as presentment before magistrate was without undue delay and presence of counsel at lineup was assured. United States v. J. F. Anderson (1972, 352 F. Supp. 33).

Where a suspect arrested for one offense is to be viewed by witnesses to other offenses, there need be no Government disclosure or prior judicial determination of any kind concerning whether the suspect will be required to stand in a lineup, the number of witnesses who will view the lineup, the dates, times, places, nature, number or similarity of the offenses for which the suspect will be viewed, or the conditions under which the lineup will be held. Id.

Indictment

Under this section providing punishment of one who commits crime of violence while armed with or having readily available any pistol or firearm (or imitation thereof) or other dangerous or deadly weapon, critical added element is that crime is committed by one armed with dangerous or deadly weapon, and list of weapons merely catalogues ways in which offense may be committed; such specific facts need not be included in indictment, and when they are included, they are surplusage. K. Meredith v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 343 A. 2d 317).

Inferences

Jury may infer from change in appearance by someone who has been called to appear in a lineup that change reflects an awareness of guilt and fear of identification. United States v. T. McKinley (1973, 485 F. 2d 1059, 158 U.S. App. D.C. 280).

Inference that, since defendant has violated the law in one respect, he is likely to have violated the law defining the offense charged in the indictment is not permitted lightly, except as to certain defined categories. Id.

Instructions

Trial court properly instructed jury on testimony of accomplices rather than testimony of informers with respect to testimony of witness who had pled guilty to one count of indictment under which he and defendant were charged on the day before defendant's trial and who had participated in the crime with defendant. United States v. M. W. Thorne (1975, 527 F. 2d 840, — U.S. App. D.C. —).

Where indictment charged defendant with robbery while armed with a dangerous weapon, and proof adduced at trial showed that he was so armed, court's instruction that defendant could be convicted if jury found that he was armed with any pistol or firearm or imitation thereof was not objectionable as amending indictment but merely explained charges contained therein more fully than did indictment itself and, absent any claim of prejudice by claimed variance, instruction is not erroneous. K. Meredith v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 343 A. 2d 317).

In view of fact that evidence of plea of guilty to charge other than that on which defendant was being tried was not highly prejudicial, and where defendant did not request "immediate cautionary instruction" and instructions to jury constituted very fair charge with respect to use of prior conviction and evidence concerning defendant's involvement with narcotics, fact that immediate cautionary instruction was not given was not ground for relief. United States v. H. E. Lee (1974, 509 F. 2d 400, 166 U.S. App. D.C. 67; cert. denied 95 S. Ct. 1451, 420 U.S. 1006).

Where jury had commenced its deliberations in prosecution for armed robbery, assault with a dangerous weapon, receiving stolen property, and carrying a pistol without a license, when it presented to the court a question concerning the armed robbery count, the court did not abuse its discretion by giving, in the face of defendant's objection but in the absence of a request to present argument, a supplemental instruction on aiding and abetting. R. W. Atkinson v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 322 A.2d 587).

"Model instruction" on mistaken identity was adequate with respect to identification testimony in case in which clerks of robbed store identified another as the armed robber at police lineup. United States v. E. C. Thomas (1973, 485 F. 2d 1012, 158 U.S. App. D.C. 233).

Where police officer, testifying in trial of defendants charged with armed robbery, admitted that he had previously testified under oath that there was only one witness to the crime, when he knew that there were two witnesses, and where police officer stated that he so testified in order to protect the second witness, it was not error for court, after instructing jury of the need to scrutinize with care the testimony of a witness who has previously lied under oath, to tell the jury it could take into consideration the reasons for the person's having previously lied. J. N. Smith v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 312 A. 2d 781).

Intent

Assault with intent to kill while armed is a crime requiring specific intent. United States v. G. A. Martin (1973, 475 F. 2d 943, 154 U.S. App. D.C. 359).

In light of instructions as whole, erroneous instruction to effect that jury must find beyond reasonable doubt that defendant if he performed acts giving rise to charge of assault with intent to kill was in such a mental state that he was not capable of forming specific intent in question was harmless. Id.

Once defense of intoxication is interposed in prosecution on charge of assault with intent to kill while armed, burden rests with prosecution to establish that at time offense was committed defendant had capacity to form requisite specific intent. Id.

Jencks Act

It was error for trial court not to conduct inquiry into nature of notes taken by prosecutor when interviewing witness before determining that the notes were, as contended by prosecutor, not substantially verbatim and thus not required to be produced for defendant. G. J. Matthews v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 322 A.2d 908).

It was error for trial court not to determine whether certain police forms and radio runs, which contained initial description of robber given to police by witness and which related to robberies in which defendant, who was charged with robbery, was believed to be a suspect and to which witness who was identifying defendant in the instant case had also been an eyewitness, were producible under the Jencks Act. Id.

Joinder

Review of record showed that the similarity of circumstances surrounding the two criminal episodes on which charges of rape while armed and armed robbery were based were sufficiently remarkable to prove that there was a reasonable probability that the same person committed the crimes and there was no prejudice in the joinder of both crimes in one trial. United States v. R. E. Adams, Jr. (1973, 481 F. 2d 1099, 156 U.S. App. D.C. 415).

In view of fact that scene of armed robbery and assaults of January 17 was different from that of armed robbery and assault on January 11 and assaults on January 16, the victims were different, and only common factor was that in each case the offender was a man wearing a fur coat and fur hat, and that there was no evidence of a common scheme or plan embracing commission of all of the offenses, it was prejudicial error to join trial of charges relating to offenses on January 17 with trial on other counts alleging offenses on January 11 and January 16, notwithstanding Government's contention that evidence of each offense was simple and distinct so that jury could not possibly have been confused. United States v. T. E. Carter (1973, 475 F. 2d 349, 154 U.S. App. D.C. 238).

Jurisdiction

Armed kidnapping charges brought against prisoner in District of Columbia jail as result of riot and attempted escape were properly tried by federal court in the District of Columbia, as were charges of conspiracy and attempted escape from federal custody arising out of the same incident, so that this section, providing minimum sentence for certain second offenders, properly applied. United States v. J. Bridgeman (1975, 523 F. 2d 1099, 173 U.S. App. D.C. 150; cert. denied 96 S. Cert. 1743, 1744, — U.S. —).

Lesser included offense

Where armed assault was essential part of proof establishing armed rape, armed assault was lesser offense included within the armed rape, and assault conviction was vacated. United States v. E. Edmonds, Jr. (1975, 524 F. 2d 62, 173 U.S. App. D.C. 241).

Assault with dangerous weapon on motel clerk was lesser included offense of armed robbery of same person, and conviction of former could not stand as conviction for another offense. United States v. H. E. Lee (1974, 509 F. 2d 400, 166 U.S. App. D.C. 67; cert. denied 95 S. Ct. 1451, 420 U.S. 1006).

It was improper to convict defendant both for assault with a dangerous weapon and armed robbery where the assault was a necessary part of the evidence needed to support the count of armed robbery. R. Taylor v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 324 A.2d 683).

Counts of assault with a dangerous weapon were lesser included offenses of offenses of assault with attempt to commit robbery and armed robbery and, therefore, defendant could not be convicted of the former offenses in addition to the latter. E. Quick v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 316 A.2d 875).

Assault with dangerous weapon was lesser included offense of armed robbery; thus, defendants could not be convicted of both three counts of armed robbery and three counts of assault with a deadly weapon and convictions of assault would be reversed. United States v. T. McKinley (1973, 485 F. 2d 1059, 158 U.S. App. D.C. 280).

Offense of assault with dangerous weapon is included in armed robbery; thus defendant should not have been sentenced to concurrent terms of five to 15 years on counts charging armed robbery and to terms of three to ten years on counts charging assault with dangerous weapon and the sentences imposed for assault with dangerous weapon must be vacated. United States v. E. C. Thomas (1973, 485 F. 2d 1012, 158 U.S. App. D.C. 233).

Under District of Columbia statute assault with a dangerous weapon is a lesser included offense of robbery while armed. United States v. J. Johnson (1973, 475 F. 2d 1297, 155 U.S. App. D.C. 28).

Where jury returned a verdict of guilty on each of four counts of robbery while armed involving different victims it was error to receive verdicts from the jury on the four counts of assault with a dangerous weapon, a lesser included offense, with respect to the same victims. Id.

Mental capacity

Record, including testimony of a private psychiatrist who examined defendant at government expense, was sufficient to support finding that criminal acts committed by defendant (armed robbery, assault with a dangerous weapon, and carrying a dangerous weapon) were not so proximately tied to defendant's mental impairment as to require his exculpation. United States v. G. A. Wilson (1972, 471 F. 2d 1072, 153 U.S. App. D.C. 104; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 1431, 410 U.S. 957).

Merger of offenses

Where assault with dangerous weapon offense was submitted to jury on specific instruction that it could convict on assault with dangerous weapon charge only if it found that separate and apart from pointing the gun at complaining witness, the complaining witness was beaten with the gun, and jury returned verdict of guilty, assault with dangerous weapon was not a lesser included offense within the armed robbery, offenses did not merge, and punishment for both did not constitute cumulative punishment. C. M. Dixon, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 320 A.2d 318).

Convictions of assault with a dangerous weapon merged with armed robbery convictions connected with same robbery of drugstore and would thus be set aside. United States v. T. R. Toy (1973, 482 F. 2d 741, 157 U.S. App. D.C. 152).

Where armed robberies and assaults with a dangerous weapon were committed against same persons, latter offenses merged into former, and convictions on assault charges could not stand, though a remand for resentencing was not required where defendant had been given separate sentences, and all sentences were set to run concurrently. United States v. A. Holiday (1973, 482 F. 2d 729, 157 U.S. App. D.C. 140).

Where charges of assault with intent to commit rape while armed and charges of assault with a dangerous weapon arose from the same act or transaction, the latter charge, requiring proof of two of the three elements constituting former offense, merged with and became a lesser offense to the charge of assault with intent to commit rape while armed, barring conviction on the lesser offense. United States v. H. Benn, Jr. (1973, 476 F. 2d 1127, 155 U.S. App. D.C. 180).

A count charging assault with a dangerous weapon is merged with a count charging armed robbery. J. N. Smith v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 312 A. 2d 781).

In view of concurrent sentences imposed upon convictions for assault with intent to kill while armed and assault with a dangerous weapon, the mildness of the punishment adjudged, the trial judge's recommendation for psychiatric treatment and the necessity for conserving judicial resources, the Court of Appeals would not reach question as to whether the crime of assault with dangerous weapon merged into crime of assault with intent to kill while armed with a dangerous weapon, but would vacate the convictions on the four counts which charged assault with a dangerous weapon. United States v. J. Hill (1972, 470 F. 2d 361, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 213).

Miranda rights—Waiver

In armed robbery prosecution, in which it could have been inferred, from evidence that defendant was unwilling to have his statements recorded in writing that defendant had mistakenly assumed that only written statements could be used against him, Government sustained its burden of establishing a knowing waiver by defendant of his right to independent legal assistance after his arrest. United States v. E. R. Frazier (1973, 476 F. 2d 891, 155 U.S. App. D.C. 135).

It was not for police officer to place legal interpretation on language of Miranda warnings he was directed to give and to continue or suspend interview in accordance with what that interpretation might be, and even though it could be inferred from defendant's unwillingness to have his statements recorded in writing that he mistakenly assumed that only written statements could be used against him, allowing defendant to pursue his evident desire to keep on talking was neither an unreasonable nor a deceptive tactic on police officer's part which deprived defendant of due process; especially where defendant had already confessed his most serious crime before note-taking episode occurred. Id.

New trial

Defendant, who had been convicted of assault with intent to commit robbery and armed robbery, was not entitled to new trial on ground of newly discovered evidence consisting of his posttrial information that an attempt had been made on his life by the "real" robber, whom defendant and another witness could identify, and that defendant had not given his attorney the information prior to trial because of fear for his life, as defendant had been apprehended on strength of positive identifications it was unlikely that the additional testimony, which would merely have been cumulative of defense of innocent presence, would have produced a different result. E. Quick v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 316 A.2d 875).

Prearrest delay

Record was devoid of any indication that delay in arresting defendant, which occurred ten months after date of the offenses, was the product of any deliberate effort by police to gain an advantage, record furnished abundant evidentiary support for finding that a reasonable endeavor was made to locate defendant and, in addition, record sustained additional finding that, in any event, defendant was not harmed by the delay, in prosecution for armed robbery, assault with a dangerous weapon, and for carrying a pistol without a license. United States v. L. Parish (1972, 468 F. 2d 1129, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 72; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 1430, 410 U.S. 957).

Prosecutor's comments

Comments of prosecutor during assault trial to the effect, inter alia, that missing witness was too scared to come and testify, that defendants were killers and were dressed like gangsters, that one defendant was a "young buck," that guilty verdict would be a matter of achievement and courage, and that presumption of innocence might not apply as much to defendants as it might to others in less serious cases did not rise to the level of substantial prejudice necessary for reversal, in light of the strength of the Government's case and correcting instructions by the trial court. R. L. Smith v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 315 A.2d 163; cert. denied 95 S.Ct. 174, 419 U.S. 896).

Prosecutor's closing and rebuttal arguments which referred to defenses of insanity interposed by famous defendants in other cases and to actions of Hitler and Napoleon were improper and were so highly prejudicial as to require reversal. United States v. W. E. Hawkins (1973, 480 F. 2d 1151, 156 U.S. App. D.C. 259).

Where prosecutor's improper closing and rebuttal arguments were so highly prejudicial as to require reversal of conviction of defendant who relied upon insanity as a defense and was convicted of first-degree murder and assault with intent to kill while armed, judgment of conviction of codefendant, who was charged as an aider and abettor, asserted lack of intent to commit murder, and was convicted of second-degree murder, would also be nullified. Id.

Retrial, lesser included offense

Where the evidentiary failure relating to charge of second-degree burglary while armed with Molotov cocktail concerned only circumstance of defendant being armed, retrial of defendant, mandated on other grounds, could properly include lesser charge of second-degree burglary. United States v. L. S. Carter (1975, 522 F. 2d 666, 173 U.S. App. D.C. 54).

Search and seizure

Where defendant's car fit description given by accomplice and another witness and was found in vicinity of defendant who met description given by the accomplice, and where defendant voluntarily surrendered his keys to police and they fit car, tying car to evidence of its use, there was probable cause for seizure of the car, and police could either seize and hold car or make immediate warrantless search, and where it was difficult to make detailed search of car where it was found, subsequent search at station house, 24 hours later, was reasonable; police had duty to act as quickly as possible to obtain evidence that might exonerate or incriminate, and there were thus exigent circumstances. United States v. H. E. Lee (1974, 509 F. 2d 400, 166 U.S. App. D.C. 67; cert. denied 95 S. Ct. 1451, 420 U.S. 1006).

Sentence

Although a violation of the District of Columbia armed robbery statutes and a violation of the federal mail robbery statute require different elements of proof, and although, in the instant case, concurrent sentences were imposed, the conviction of defendants on both charges, arising from a single transaction, was improper, necessitating remand to the trial court with instructions to vacate the judgment on one of the counts and to resentence on the other count. United States v. A. B. Knight (1974, 509 F. 2d 354, 166 U.S. App. D.C. 21).

Under statute precluding sentencing accused under Youth Corrections Act if he is convicted more than once of having committed crimes of violence, conviction occurring before effective date of statute is included. United States v. E. C. Thomas (1973, 485 F. 2d 1012, 158 U.S. App. D.C. 233).

Defendant who was convicted of armed robbery and sentenced under Youth Corrections Act, before effective date of statute precluding sentencing under the Act of any person who is convicted more than once of having committed a crime of violence in District of Columbia, and who was convicted thereafter of armed robbery and assault with a dangerous weapon was not entitled to be sentenced under the Youth Corrections Act, although he was 20 years old at time of second conviction. Id.

Severance

Where admission of evidence concerning the close relationship between defendant and codefendant was clearly relevant to codefendant's defense of alibi and mistaken identity and there was no conflict in defenses, trial court did not err in refusing to grant defendant a severance. G. S. Crawley v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 328 A. 2d 777).

In prosecution of defendants on murder and rape charges, trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying motion of defendant brothers for a severance from codefendant, who had fatally stabbed the victim, notwithstanding defendants' claim that the evidence against the codefendant was much stronger than the evidence against them. United States v. B. J. Heinlein (1973, 490 F.2d 725, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 157).

Speedy trial

Right to speedy trial of defendant, charged with armed robbery, assault with dangerous weapon, and of carrying a pistol without a license, was not impinged by nine-month delay extending from his indictment to his trial where, during the first two months defendant was still at large and police were doing their best to locate him, where defendant did not press a speedy trial right until five months after he was arrested, and where record was sufficient to sustain finding that defendant suffered no prejudice to his defense which could be attributed to the delay at the postarrest stage of the prosecution. United States v. L. Parish (1972, 468 F. 2d 1129, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 72; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 1430, 410 U.S. 957).

Witnesses

Trial court, which denied a defense motion during trial to have key prosecution witness, who was a chronic alcoholic, subjected to a psychiatric examination with respect to his competency, did not abuse its discretion in refusing to treat the witness as a person of actual or potential incompetency, notwithstanding he claims of defendants, in support of their motion, that the testimony given by the witness was highly confusing and that hospital records indicated he had a clinical history which rendered him wholly unreliable. United States v. B. J. Heinlein (1973, 490 F.2d 725, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 157).

Evidence that defendant's sole defense witness had been charged with obstruction of justice for her alleged efforts to persuade complaining witness not to identify codefendant, her brother, should not have been admitted over objection, in prosecution for assault and armed robbery, to impeach witness, where testimony of complaining witness revealed to jury facts which were basis for charge; prejudicial effect of admission of arrest and charge outweighed probative substance. United States v. C. Maynard (1973, 476 F. 2d 1170, 155 U.S. App. D.C. 223).

Competency of mentally retarded 18-year-old prosecutrix to testify in prosecution for assault with intent to commit rape while armed, assault with a dangerous weapon and carrying a dangerous weapon, was a threshold question of law committed to the trial court's discretion; it remained for the jury, however, to assess credibility of the witness and the weight to be given her testimony. United States v. H. Benn, Jr. (1973, 476 F. 2d 1127, 155 U.S. App. D.C. 180).

§ 22-3203. Unlawful possession of a pistol.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Prosecution

Prosecutor had authority to charge the defendant, a felon who possessed an unlicensed pistol while not in his dwelling or on his land, under felony-repeater provisions of § 22-3204 rather than under misdemeanor statute [this section] and by doing so did not deny right to equal protection. R. F. Palmore v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 290 A. 2d 573; aff'd 93 S. Ct. 1670, 411 U.S. 389).

§ 22-3204. Carrying concealed weapons.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Allen charge

Where Allen charge was given after jury which had not been sequestered had deliberated 2 hours and 20 minutes and announced that they had reached a verdict on charge of carrying a dangerous weapon but were deadlocked on charged of assault with deadly weapon and after court took jury verdict of acquittal on carrying charge and where jury deliberated only 25 minutes before returning verdict of guilty on assault charge, Allen charge was not coercive to the point of requiring reversal of conviction. F. C. Winters v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 317 A.2d 530).

Appeal and error

Even though police officer's specific testimony was that defendant had been looking "in the direction of the parked cars," inference drawn by trial court from totality of testimony adduced on motion to suppress is not plainly wrong or without evidence to support it and, accordingly, reviewing court would accept conclusion that defendant had been "looking into parked cars." R. B. Sanders v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 339 A. 2d 373).

Where case against defendant on charges of carrying dangerous weapon was sufficiently proved by other independent evidence, fact that defendant's conviction in same trial on charges of first-degree murder was reversed because of error in trial court in admitting testimony by victim's wife that victim was afraid of being killed by defendant did not require reversal of conviction on weapons charge. United States v. R. W. Brown (1973, 490 F.2d 758, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 190).

Where suppression order had been reversed, defendant then waived jury trial and stipulated that officers who had testified at suppression hearing would give same testimony at trial and that defendant did not possess license to carry pistol and case was then submitted without further evidence or argument, same issue and same record was before Court of Appeals on appeal from conviction of carrying pistol without license as had been before it on appeal from the suppression order and, therefore, appeal from conviction was frivolous and would be dismissed. W. A. Walker v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 304 A. 2d 290; cert. denied 94 S. Ct. 368, 414 U.S. 1007).

Arrest

Should doubt as to correct identity of subject of warrant arise, arresting officer should make immediate, reasonable efforts to confirm or deny applicability of warrant to detained individual, but if, after such reasonable efforts, officer reasonably and in good faith believes that suspect is one against whom warrant is outstanding, protective frisk pursuant to arrest of that person is not in contravention of Fourth Amendment. R. B. Sanders v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 339 A. 2d 373).

Evidence that six-month-old warrant which was used to arrest defendant, whose automobile was found to contain a pistol for which defendant did not have a license, was based on the complaint of a citizen, was valid on its face, and was served by an officer who was authorized to serve it and who exercised proper diligence in verifying its legality sustained finding that arrest of defendant was not a mere sham to search defendant's automobile. R. E. Rippey v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 322 A.2d 276).

Burden of proving exception

Defendant charged with carrying pistol without a license had burden of bringing himself within exception provided for person who carries weapon in his dwelling house or on other land possessed by him. M. Hines v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 326 A. 2d 247).

Constitutionality

Recidivist statute was not unconstitutional for permitting reliance on ten-year-old conviction. L. D. Jones v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 299 A. 2d 538).

Construction with other laws

Discernment of legislative intent that there be a single conviction for federal mail or bank robbery, and assaults comprised therein, does not preclude the conviction of a defendant for carrying a dangerous weapon, in violation of the District of Columbia Code. United States v. A. B. Knight (509 F. 2d 354, 166 U.S. App. D.C. 21).

Corrections officer

Under statutory provision excepting from prohibition against carrying pistols "jail wardens, or their deputies, policemen or other duly appointed law enforcement officers, or to members of the Army, Navy, or Marine Corps of United States or of the National Guard or Organized Reserves when on duty," corrections officer is not prohibited from carrying pistol whether or not "on duty." United States v. D. Pritchett, Jr. (1972, 470 F. 2d 455, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 307).

Dwelling house

For defendant charged with carrying pistol without a license to bring himself within exception provided for person carrying weapon in his own dwelling or on other land possessed by him, defendant was required to show that he had exclusive control and possession of the premises. M. Hines v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 326 A. 2d 247).

Where porch on which defendant and his girl friend struggled over pistol allegedly found by defendant was part of apartment building in which defendant and others lived, defendant was not within exception from pistol licensing requirement provided for person who carries weapon in his dwelling house or on other land possessed by him. Id.

Elements of offense

When defendant is charged with carrying a pistol without a license, government must prove that the weapon was operable. C. C. Anderson v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 326 A. 2d 807; cert. denied 95 S. Ct. 1405, 420 U.S. 978).

In view of government's failure to introduce evidence that juvenile lacked valid license to carry a pistol, he should not have been found guilty of carrying a pistol without a license. In the Matter of W. K. (D.C. App. 1974, 323 A. 2d 442).

Proof of intent to use a weapon for an unlawful purpose is not an element of offense of carrying a pistol without a license. F. T. Mitchell v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 302 A. 2d 216).

All that is needed to prove violation of statute prohibiting carrying pistol without license is intent to do the proscribed act. Id.

Evidence—Admissibility

Permitting police officer to testify regarding direction from which shot causing bullet hole in wall was fired did not constitute an abuse of discretion in prosecution for armed robbery and for carrying a dangerous weapon. United States v. A. E. Pierson (1974, 503 F. 2d 173, 164 U.S. App. D.C. 82).

Where police officers, having stopped automobile for red light violation, noted that driver's operator's permit had expired and registration was in name of another and that vehicle number on registration varied by one digit from number found on the automobile, police had legal justification to take temporary custody of the automobile, after ordering that it be driven to police station, and pistol which fell from coat of defendant passenger, ordered to alight from the vehicle, was admissible against him. United States v. D. J. Ordway (D.C. App. 1974, 329 A. 2d 776).

Testimony of arresting officer, who apparently lost note on which he jotted down assault victim's description of assailant, was not, in prosecution for carrying a pistol without a license, inadmissible under the Jencks Act, since the Act imposes its sanction on the testimony of the witness who gave the statement rather than on the one who received it; moreover, receipt of the officer's testimony did not constitute plain error in light of his inability to produce the note, since the officer testified that the arrest of defendant was based on victim's on-the-scene identification. M. W. Hardy v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 316 A.2d 867).

Where, in prosecution of defendant for first-degree murder and carrying dangerous weapon, there was no claim of self-defense, suicide, accidental death or any other plausible issue that would justify inquiry into victim's state of mind, court committed prejudicial error in admitting testimony by victim's wife that victim was frightened that he might be killed by defendant. United States v. R. W. Brown (1973, 490 F.2d 758, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 190).

Exclusion of arresting officer's testimony that there was no attempt to obtain fingerprints from pistol, which was found protruding from paper bag on passenger's side of transmission hump of defendant's automobile but within reach of the driver, was not error, as denying defendant the possible corroboration of his testimony that a passenger had alighted from vehicle on approach of police, had passenger's prints been found on weapon where defendant never sought to introduce fingerprint matter and did not seek to have Government perform fingerprint analysis or attempt to obtain such analysis himself. United States v. J. D. Henson (1973, 486 F. 2d 1292, 159 U.S. App. D.C. 32).

— Erroneous transmission to jury

Inadvertent transmission of photograph exhibit not admitted in evidence to jury at trial of defendant for carrying pistol without license was not prejudicial where photograph was of interior of back entranceway and location of trash can which had been a matter of dispute with regard to codefendant who had been accused of stuffing jacket with gun and narcotics in pockets in trash can and was irrelevant as to defendant's case. W. N. Quarles v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 349 A. 2d 690; cert. denied 96 S. Ct. 2169, — U.S. —).

— Good character

Prosecutor cannot offer bad character evidence unless accused first introduces evidence of good character, and even then prosecutor's proof is restricted to community reputation and to trait and traits to which accused's own character evidence related. United States v. J. A. Lewis (1973, 482 F. 2d 632, 157 U.S. App. D.C. 43).

When character witness, either for accused or for prosecution, is offered, he is subject to cross-examination as to his testimonial qualifications just like any other witness, and probe on cross-examination may extend to those matters, among others, which legitimately affect witness' knowledge of accused's community reputation for the character trait or traits which he confirms. Id.

Where at time judge ruled, during second trial for armed robbery and related offenses, that if defense put on good character witnesses then prosecution could cross-examine such witnesses to determine if they were aware of defendant's arrest for narcotics two weeks before commencement of second trial but ten months after the occurrence of offenses for which he was being tried, judge did not know whether witness would speak to reputation for peace and good order or as to reputation for truth and veracity, trial judge did not have essential information and ruling was error, but in view of government's case error was not prejudicial. Id.

— Polygraph tests

Expert testimony based on results of defendant's polygraph examination was inadmissible. United States v. E. Zeiger (1972, 475 F. 2d 1280, 155 U.S. App. D.C. 11; rev'g 350 F. Supp. 685).

— Sufficiency

Evidence that defendant was armed and was threatening one individual with serious bodily injury, that he was aware that he was being followed by uniformed special officer and that defendant turned and shot uniformed officer was sufficient, apart from issue of mental responsibility, to support verdict finding defendant guilty of second-degree murder of the officer and of carrying a dangerous weapon. United States v. J. Taylor (1975, 510 F. 2d 1283, 167 U.S. App. D.C. 62; rehearing denied 516 F. 2d 1243, 170 U.S. App. D.C. 315).

Evidence, including testimony of complainant and others concerning incident, reasonably permitted a finding of guilt on charges of armed kidnapping, armed assault with intent to kill, and carrying a dangerous weapon. R. N. Wooten v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 343 A. 2d 281).

Evidence, including fact that searching officer found a pistol on floorboard and between and behind front bucket seats of automobile in which defendant and his companion were riding, was sufficient to sustain conviction of carrying a pistol without a license. United States v. D. T. McDonald (1973, 481 F. 2d 513, 156 U.S. App. D.C. 338).

Evidence which was adequate to enable jury to find that the possession of weapons, which were in a car in which defendants were riding, could be knowledgeably attributable to defendants was sufficient to sustain their convictions for possession of unregistered firearms, possession of prohibited weapons and carrying a dangerous weapon. United States v. J. C. Matthews (1973, 480 F. 2d 1191, 156 U.S. App. D.C. 299).

Testimony by two police officers that they saw defendant take gun from his belt and replace it, that they saw defendant enter driver's side of a van, subsequently found to be stolen, that they subsequently saw three men standing near the van with defendant closest to it, and testimony by one of the two officers that he saw defendant drop the gun sustained defendant's convictions for unauthorized use of a motor vehicle and carrying a pistol without a license. D. R. Reed v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 312 A. 2d 775).

Evidence sustained conviction of defendant, a passenger in rear seat of car, for carrying without a license a pistol which was found on the passenger side of front seat. H. B. Johnson v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 309 A. 2d 497; cert. denied 94 S. Ct. 1960, 416 U.S. 951).

Notwithstanding defendant's claim that Government had failed to prove essential element of possession of gun at time of offense, evidence sustained conviction of carrying a pistol without a license. N. Hawkins v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 304 A. 2d 279).

Evidence was sufficient to support conviction of carrying a pistol without a license, possessing an unregistered firearm and unlawfully possessing ammunition against defendant who was driving vehicle which had been loaned to him by his employer and had been previously driven by numerous employees and customers of employer, and in glove compartment of which police officer found a pistol. P. Patterson v. United States and District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1973, 301 A. 2d 67).

Evidence was sufficient to support conviction as a repeat offender of carrying a pistol without a license against defendant who was pointed out to police officers after officers heard a gunshot and who was found in automobile which had operable pistol, which had fresh smell of gunpowder and contained five live rounds of ammunition and one expended round, lying on the front seat. A. Ragland v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 299 A. 2d 141).

— Suppression

Where, even according to defendant's testimony at trial, there was no valid issue as to whether police officer had constitutional right to seize gun and arrest defendant for possessing pistol without a license, it was unnecessary to remand for hearing to determine whether defense counsel's failure to assert at trial defendant's right to have been present at suppression hearing was a deliberate choice, in which case the right was forfeited, or was an oversight, in which case failure to cure defect in suppression hearing was rendered harmless to defendant in view of his testimony establishing valid arrest and seizure. J. E. Poteat v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 330 A. 2d 229).

Where both written motion to suppress gun and defendant's trial testimony supported gun's admissibility, defendant could not argue that his presence at suppression hearing was required to aid counsel in cross-examination regardless of whether he would also testify. Id.

Fingerprint tests, duty to make

Government's failure to perform fingerprint analysis on pistol found in paper bag on passenger's side of transmission hump of defendant's automobile and within reach of driver could not be found to have denied defendant due process by keeping from defendant, who police officers said was alone in vehicle at time of arrest but who asserted that a passenger had alighted on approach of police, evidence material to guilt where defendant never sought to introduce fingerprint matter at trial and did not seek to have Government perform a fingerprint analysis or attempt to obtain such analysis himself. United States v. J. D. Henson (1973, 486 F. 2d 1292, 159 U.S. App. D.C. 32).

Frisk

Where police saw defendant pull to the curb in rented automobile, get out and begin walking down street, where one officer recognized defendant and also remembered that, about two weeks earlier, at a roll call, he had heard an announcement that there was a warrant for defendant's arrest for unauthorized use of a motor vehicle, where the officers drove up to defendant and questioned him about the vehicle, where defendant suggested that they drive him back to his automobile and he would show them the rental contract, and where the officers, as defendant was about to enter the patrol car, frisked him and discovered he was carrying a pistol without a license, the frisk could not, in view of the government's failure to establish the existence of a validly issued arrest warrant, be justified as incidental to a lawful arrest. I. Gilchrist v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 300 A. 2d 453).

Harmless error

In prosecution for carrying pistol without a license, any error resulting from testimony indicating that pistol in question was owned by one other than defendant was harmless where trial judge immediately cautioned jury that defendant was not charged with stealing pistol but only with possession of it without a license. C. C. Anderson v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 326 A. 2d 807; cert. denied 95 S. Ct. 1405, 420 U.S. 978).

In light of adoption of preponderance standard for determining voluntariness of a confession, any error in admitting defendant's statement while entertaining a reasonable doubt about voluntariness was at best harmless error which the Court of Appeals was required to ignore. N. Hawkins v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 304 A. 2d 279).

Identification

Identification procedure whereby occupants of car were returned in police van to site of gunshots where witness identified defendant from five persons in van, without any assistance from police, was not unduly suggestive. G. S. Crawley v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 314 A. 2d 487).

Indictment

Any infirmity in grand jury proceedings because of failure of complainant and one of police officers to state that pistol used in shooting was victim's, that victim had informed grand jury that one defendant's job was that of a robber and that during the proceedings the prosecutor referred to another case against one defendant, is not of such a nature as to warrant dismissal since there was ample other evidence on which the grand jury could have returned the indictment. E. Blango v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 335 A. 2d 230).

Pendency of grand jury indictment charging assault with a dangerous weapon did not prohibit a second grand jury from considering and returning indictment charging not only the same count of assault with a dangerous weapon but the additional count of carrying a dangerous weapon, regardless of whether prior grand jury refused to return a bill charging the offense of carrying a dangerous weapon or simply did not consider such offense. United States v. C. Johnson (D.C. App. 1974, 328 A. 2d 769).

Inferences

In prosecution against a passenger in rear set of car for carrying without a license a pistol which was found under passenger side of front seat, it was not necessary for Government to show the existence of an aperture in bottom rear of front seat in order to lay a basis for inference of convenient access, in light of fact that it was common knowledge that such an aperture was present in ordinary passenger cars of kind in which defendant was riding. H. B. Johnson v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 309 A. 2d 497; cert. denied 94 S. Ct. 1960, 416 U.S. 951).

Instructions

Giving of instruction that jury must acquit unless prosecution proved each element beyond a reasonable doubt is not plain error on ground that instruction compelled jury to find defendant guilty. R. S. Hammond v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 345 A. 2d 140).

Where missing witness was not present when officers found the defendant in a stairway behind an apartment across the street from witness' house in possession of a gun in a paper bag so that witness could not have elucidated the transaction on crucial issue of whether defendant was in possession of a gun and the "missing witness" instruction and Government's comments thereon might have damaged defendant's credibility with the jury, giving of "missing witness" instruction was reversible error in prosecution for carrying a concealed weapon without a license. E. L. Haynes v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 318 A.2d 901).

In prosecution for first-degree murder and carrying dangerous weapon, jury instruction on sanity which stated that defendant would be immediately committed for mental examination, after which there would be another judicial determination as to whether he was suffering from mental illness at that time and whether he was dangerous to himself and others, and that if defendant was found to be suffering from mental illness but was not dangerous to himself or others he would be released from hospital, was proper. United States v. R. W. Brown (1973, 490 F.2d 758, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 190).

Where hearsay statement circumstantially probative of declarant's state of mind involves extraneous factual elements, limiting instruction must always accompany its introduction into issue to insure that such factual matters are considered solely on issue of declarant's mental state and not for truth of matters contained therein. Id.

In prosecution for carrying pistol without a license, defendant's proffered testimony indicating that he picked up pistol which he found on ground and put in in his waistband to prevent it from being used by others in hostile crowd intending to turn it over to police when opportunity arose, that he then walked into area of crowd and that he was not in immediate fear of attack when he found the pistol was insufficient to raise issue of self-defense and was inadmissible. F. T. Mitchell v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 302 A. 2d 216).

Jencks Act

Refusal to strike testimony of witnesses on account of prosecution's failure to preserve and produce their grand jury testimony was not error where it appeared that their testimony was not recorded due to a malfunction of a recording device, without negligence or bad faith on Government's part. D. L. Washington v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 343 A. 2d 560).

Joinder

Joinder of defendants, one charged with a misdemeanor and the other with a felony in connection with carrying a deadly weapon, could be accomplished by filing an information against the former and, upon indictment of his codefendant, moving for joinder. T. Freeman v. Honorable D. S. Smith (D.C. App. 1973, 301 A. 2d 217).

Judge's comments

In prosecution for, inter alia, carrying a dangerous weapon, where comment by the court that if there was any believable evidence in the case, it was to effect that pistol was carried outside defendants' home or place of business was sustained by uncontradicted evidence and judge explicitly charged that all matters of fact were to be determined by the jury, no harm could result to defendants, who, in any event, failed to object. United States v. T. B. Dixon (1972, 469 F. 2d 940, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 200).

Jury

Fact that three of the jurors in defendant's case had served on jury which two days earlier had been "castigated" by another judge for rendering a verdict of not guilty did not result in reversible error. United States v. W. G. Kyle (1972, 469 F. 2d 547, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 141; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 920, 409 U.S. 1117).

Where prosecutor who knew that three jurors in case had served on a jury which only two days earlier had been "castigated" by another judge for rendering a verdict of not guilty was concerned primarily with jurors' unfavorable attitude to the prosecution rather than with the speculative effect of the comments of the previous judge, prosecutor's failure to transmit to defense counsel his knowledge that three jurors had been members of the previous jury and that previous jury had been scolded by the other judge was not ground for reversal of conviction. Id.

Where, at first trial, juror commented that she had observed defendant going through jury list containing name, age, address and business of all jurors, prohibiting examination of jurors' list by defendant at retrial did not prejudice defendant who heard names of all jurors as they were called to box during selection, who was able to determine from his own observation their sex and approximate age, whose counsel examined prospective jurors on voir dire and exercised peremptory challenges against some of them and who had opportunity during selection process to confer with his counsel. J. D. Maxwell v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 297 A. 2d 771; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 2740, 412 U.S. 921).

Poll

Trial court committed reversible error by continuing to poll jury after first juror had indicated she did not agree with guilty verdict on the first armed robbery count, notwithstanding government hypothesis that dissenting juror was confused by multiple-count indictment, since trial judge, rather than stopping poll and questioning juror to determine if she were confused by indictment, chose to continue the poll. J. Kendall v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 349 A. 2d 464).

Knowledge

In prosecution for carrying a pistol without a license, it is not necessary that Government offer direct proof of knowledge of presence of the pistol. H. B. Johnson v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 309 A. 2d 497; cert. denied 94 S. Ct. 1960, 416 U.S. 951).

Fact that there were three persons and three pistols in car, together with suspicious activity of occupants prior to their car being halted, provided sufficient grounds for jury, in prosecution for carrying a pistol without a license, to conclude that defendant knew of presence of the pistol. Id.

Mental capacity

Record, including testimony of a private psychiatrist who examined defendant at government expense, was sufficient to support finding that criminal acts committed by defendant (armed robbery, assault with a dangerous weapon, and carrying a dangerous weapon) were not so proximately tied to defendant's mental impairment as to require his exculpation. United States v. G. A. Wilson

(1972, 471 F. 2d 1072, 153 U.S. App. D.C. 104; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 1431, 410 U.S. 957).

Mistrial

Refusal to declare a mistrial, on ground that disturbance which occurred outside the courtroom but in jury's presence, which involved defendant and his father and which was prompted by removal of the father for creating a disturbance in the courtroom, is not abuse of discretion where after full hearing trial judge found that incident was prompted by defendant, without provocation from prosecution, and court fully instructed jury to disregard incident and reach a verdict based solely on evidence presented in the courtroom. R. S. Hammond v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 345 A. 2d 140).

Plain error

In prosecution for carrying a dangerous weapon, assaulting a police officer, and unlawful possession of narcotic drug, sustaining as valid Fifth Amendment privilege claimed by defense witness called to corroborate testimony of defendant, who did not claim infringement of his own Fifth Amendment privilege against self-incrimination, was not plain error, on theory that he was denied a fair trial, where there was no pretense the record would support an inference of prosecutorial misconduct or that Government's case was buttressed by the witness' exercise of the privilege against self-incrimination, and where witness was called by defense counsel with full prior knowledge that privilege would be invoked. R. W. Mack v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 310 A. 2d 234).

The identification of defendant's photograph by assault victim, the two lineup identifications, the composite drawing, defendant's presence in the area of the attack, the two in-court identifications of him, and the clothing recovered from his home left so small a probability that probable cause was lacking in the case that the discretion of the Court of Appeals to consider plain error would not be wisely exercised by entertaining unraised issue regarding the trial court's alleged error in not suppressing identifications flowing from photographs taken of defendant when he was allegedly taken to police station without probable cause. R. E. Adams, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 302 A. 2d 232).

Possession of firearms

Defendant on a public street found standing near a gun partially concealed beneath an auto, without more, can not be deemed to have sufficient knowledge and control of the weapon so as to be criminally responsible for its possession. R. Outtz v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 306 A. 2d 664).

Fact of constructive possession does not depend upon ownership. L. D. Jones v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 299 A. 2d 538).

Evidence that pistol was located on console between driver and defendant passenger and that passenger had ammunition in his coat pocket of same caliber as pistol was sufficient to establish constructive possession in passenger. Id.

Innocent or momentary

In order to assert defense of innocent or momentary possession of pistol as defense to charge of carrying pistol without a license, accused must show not only an absence of criminal purpose, but also that his possession was excused and justified as stemming from an affirmative effort to aid and enhance social policy underlying law enforcement. M. Hines v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 326 A. 2d 247).

Prearrest delay

Record was devoid of any indication that delay in arresting defendant, which occurred ten months after date of the offenses, was the product of any deliberate effort by police to gain an advantage, record furnished abundant evidentiary support for finding that a reasonable endeavor was made to locate defendant and, in addition, record sustained additional finding that, in any event, defendant was not harmed by the delay, in prosecution for armed robbery, assault with a dangerous weapon, and for carrying a pistol without a license. United States v. L. Parish (1972, 468 F. 2d 1129, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 72; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 1430, 410 U.S. 957).

Probable cause

Officer, who received over his radio a "flash lookout" for car of a specifically described make, color and license tag proceeding in certain direction with two people with a pistol, who was informed as to the identity of police officer being advised by citizen that occupants of car had gun, who was advised that such officer had seen such car and had verified both its description and number of its occupants and who observed car within 20 minutes of receiving the lookout, had probable cause to stop and search car for pistol. C. H. Galloway v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 326 A. 2d 803; cert. denied 95 S. Ct. 1981, 421 U.S. 979).

Defendant's actions in hastily applying brakes upon seeing police officers, in switching places with his passenger, and in then leaning forward as if to hide something under his seat gave officer, when coupled with his discovery of suspected narcotics, probable cause to search for contraband under the seat where defendant had been sitting. C. H. Spencer v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 316 A. 2d 331).

Where patrolling officer observed defendant drive by and observed on dashboard of defendant's automobile a box similar to those used to commercially package ammunition, officer had right to stop vehicle to inquire whether defendant in fact possessed a gun and, if so, whether there was compliance with local licensing statute; failure of defendant, who stated that he was carrying a weapon, to produce license constituted probable cause for arrest and authorized protective search; pistol seized in search was admissible. J. Gordon v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 305 A. 2d 522).

Discrepancy between name on license and registration, defendant's failure to know who owned vehicle, defendant's inherently incredible explanation of how he came to be driving vehicle, defendant's "furtive movement" on being honked at by officers after he had seen them following him, and mutilated inspection sticker on vehicle constituted probable cause for a reasonably prudent officer to arrest defendant for unauthorized use of a vehicle, and subsequent search of vehicle and defendant's person, with consequent discovery of a pistol, was lawful. K. L. Williams v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 304 A. 2d 287).

Proof

In prosecution for carrying a pistol without a license, Government must prove that the pistol was conveniently accessible to defendant, and that he knew of its presence. H. B. Johnson v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 309 A. 2d 497; cert. denied 94 S. Ct. 1960, 416 U.S. 951).

Prosecution

Defendant could be properly charged and convicted of not only federal bank robbery but also under this section of the D.C. Code relating to carrying of a dangerous weapon, since federal bank robbery statute is unconcerned with the type of weapon person might use or with his right under local law to carry such weapon. United States v. C. L. Canty (1972, 469 F. 2d 114, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 103).

Prosecutor had authority to charge the defendant, a felon who possessed an unlicensed pistol while not in his dwelling or on his land, under felony-repeater provisions of this section, rather than under misdemeanor statute [§ 22-3203] and by doing so did not deny right to equal protection. R. F. Palmore v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 290 A. 2d 573; aff'd 93 S. Ct. 1970, 411 U.S. 389).

Prosecutor's comments

Comments of prosecutor during assault trial to the effect, inter alia, that missing witness was too scared to come and testify, that defendants were killers and were dressed like gangsters, that one defendant was a "young buck," that guilty verdict would be a matter of achievement and courage, and that presumption of innocence might not apply as much to defendants as it might to others in less serious cases did not rise to the level of substantial prejudice necessary for reversal, in light of the strength of the Government's case and correcting instructions by the trial court. R. L. Smith v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 315 A. 2d 163; cert. denied 95 S.Ct. 174, 419 U.S. 896).

Where critical issue in homicide prosecution was matter of self-defense, action of government prosecutor in stating to subpoenaed defense witness, an eyewitness to killing, that such witness should see independent counsel and that if witness testified as indicated by other testimony then he could or would be prosecuted for carrying a concealed weapon, obstructing justice and as an accessory to murder was prejudicial to defendant who was entitled to have such witness put on stand without interference or intimidation by prosecutor, and interests of justice also required that the conviction of codefendant, who was convicted on theory of aiding and abetting defendant, should also be reversed. United States v. C. L. Smith (1973, 478 F. 2d 976, 156 U.S. App. D.C. 66).

Prosecutor's remarks to jury

Reference in Government's rebuttal argument to lack of corroboration of defendant's testimony concerning alleged passenger in defendant's automobile did not constitute improper comment on a missing witness since remarks did not directly, or in a meaningful indirect manner, ask the jury to draw an impermissible inference from absence of alleged passenger; to extent that existence of passenger was challenged it was clearly in context of his existence as a passenger of defendant, charged with carrying a pistol without a license, on evening of arrest rather than as possessor of pistol, which was found in defendant's automobile. United States v. J. D. Henson (1973, 486 F. 2d 1292, 159 U.S. App. D.C. 32).

Government's suggestion, during its summation, of corroboration of nature of gun placement within reach of defendant, charged with carrying a pistol without a license, was not improper since it was supported at least by one arresting officer's discovery of bag, which was located on passenger's side of transmission hump of defendant's automobile but within reach of driver and from which butt of loaded gun was protruding; however, any error in such regard would not have amounted to reversible error. Id.

In prosecution for carrying a dangerous weapon, prosecutor's reference to defendant during argument to jury as a "burglar, thief, robber" was improper but did not prejudice defendant in view of fact that prosecutor ceased his argument immediately upon using the objectionable words, that trial court clearly instructed jury shortly before prosecutor's improper remark that evidence of defendant's prior convictions was introduced solely for a limited purpose and that both prosecutor and defense counsel repeated and reemphasized the limited purpose for which evidence of prior convictions had been introduced. J. D. Maxwell v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 297 A. 2d 771; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 1970, 412 U.S. 921).

Purpose of carrying weapon

Defendant's purpose of showing new found pistol to his girl friend did not amount to innocent or momentary possession such as would be a defense to charge of carrying pistol without a license. M. Hines v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 326 A. 2d 247).

Search and seizure

Even though evidence was seized pursuant to arrest based on warrant which called for arrest of another man, suppression of evidence is not required where arrest was made pursuant to presumably valid warrant and, although arrest was mistaken, it was carried out by police officers acting reasonably and in good faith. R. B. Sanders v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 339 A. 2d 373).

Where alleged assault victim informed police that her husband had threatened to shoot her with a gun and, after husband was frisked and apartment searched without result, stated that gun must be in certain automobile, which was accurately described, and police frisked husband and defendant who were then both sitting in described automobile, exigent circumstances existed for warrantless search of automobile, which belonged to defendant, and thus pistol and ammunition which were found in search of automobile are not fruits or illegal search so as to be inadmissible in subsequent prosecution of defendant. United States v. W. F. Wilkerson (D.C. App. 1975, 338 A. 2d 441).

Even though police officer who observed two men at 10 p.m. knocking on front door of house located in area having numerous burglaries and observed men hurriedly walk from front door upon seeing him was justified in stopping men to inquire if they resided at house, where men produced identification upon officer's request and further inquiry of occupant of house while men were detained failed to develop articulable facts that they had committed or were about to commit a crime, continued detention of men and frisk of their persons while their identifications were checked out constitutes unreasonable seizure, precluding admission of items discovered during frisk. G. Coleman v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 337 A. 2d 767).

Where pretrial motion to suppress has been denied and, realistically, only available issue in "possession of contraband" case is search or seizure, approved procedure is to stipulate the facts as alleged in information and have court render verdict thereon in order to preserve Fourth Amendment issue on appeal. United States v. J. L. Allen (D.C. App. 1975, 337 A. 2d 512).

Where defendant, who had been stopped while operating his motor vehicle, had been placed under valid arrest, defendant's passenger was not in possession of a valid permit and police officers, being aware that recent crowd violence had resulted in injury to policeman, placed defendant and his passenger in one of the squad cars to transport them to nearby police station, one of the arresting officers rightfully entered defendant's automobile, which was blocking traffic, and, thus, pistol which such officer observed in plain view as he glanced at an area near clutch and brake pedal was properly seized, even if the passenger had been illegally arrested. G. H. Jones v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 330 A. 2d 248).

Where passenger-owner of automobile told police officer that defendant driver had a gun, police officer had constitutional justification for seizing gun and arresting defendant for carrying pistol without a license even if gun was seized from automobile seat as defendant exposed it to officer's view, as claimed by defendant, rather than from defendant's person, as claimed by officer. J. E. Poteat v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 330 A. 2d 229).

Where police officer stopped defendant on basis of six-month-old warrant for assault, where defendant, after being arrested, asked if his passenger could drive the automobile home, where police officer went to automobile to see if passenger had a driver's license, where officer searched under the front seat of the automobile for a weapon, and, after completing that search, observed gun under front seat armrest while he was standing outside the automobile, the weapon was in plain view so that there was no search or unlawful seizure, even though the search under the seat may not have been reasonable and regardless of whether the arrest on the six-month-old warrant was a sham. R. E. Rippey v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 322 A.2d 276).

Facts known to police officer, including his observation of assault victim and the victim's spontaneous positive identification of defendant, unquestionably gave officer probable cause to arrest, and the ensuing search of defendant which uncovered pistol was therefore valid as incidental to the arrest. M. W. Hardy v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 316 A. 2d 867).

Even if police officer did not have probable cause to arrest defendant when he approached him, a protective frisk of defendant's outer clothing was justified by fact that assault victim had positively identified defendant as his assailant and had told the officer that defendant was armed, and by fact that, as the officer approached defendant, he saw defendant start to reach in his pocket. Id.

Where first officer, believing that defendant was a major narcotics violator, stopped his cruiser and confronted defendant, who satisfied officer that defendant was not wanted on bench warrant, and where second officer saw defendant reaching several times to put his hand on his back pocket, belief of second officer that defendant might have been armed and dangerous was reasonable, so as to justify search which revealed pistol, in view of fact that second officer had not been able to hear conversation between first officer and defendant and did not speak to first officer before second officer reached into defendant's pocket and discovered pistol. W. H. Lyons v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 315 A. 2d 561).

Where police officers proceeded to area where gunshots were heard, where they were told "they went down the street in a red car," where officers observed red car traveling without lights within three or four blocks of such location, and where they observed occupants acting as if they were hiding something, officers acted properly in stopping car and ordering occupants out of it, thereby giving one officer opportunity to be in position to obtain plain view of shotgun and pistol. G. S. Crawley v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 314 A. 2d 487).

Where police officers watched defendants stalk two female pedestrians at 2:00 in the morning, return to their car, depart abruptly, and lead police officers in high-speed chase, and where one occupant had been seen leaning down in the front seat, police officers were justified in stopping the car and searching under the front seat and behind the glove compartment where stolen, unlicensed pistol was found, after the occupants had been removed from the car. United States v. J. W. Thomas and W. L. Sutton (D.C. App. 1974, 314 A. 2d 464).

Police officers, after properly stopping car and frisking passenger, who was found to be carrying a loaded pistol, had probable cause to infer that some joint criminal enterprise was planned and to make a warrantless search of the car, resulting in the discovery of another revolver under driver's seat. R. W. Jeffreys, Jr., et ano. v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 312 A. 2d 308).

Although defendant was seated in a car parked in an alley in a high crime area at approximately 3:30 A.M., and although it appeared that defendant, upon investigation by officers, began to get nervous and fumbled with something in area of his seat, it was not reasonable for officers to open car door, and search of car did not come within plain view or within any of other exceptions to warrant requirement, where there was no police report accusing defendant of having a gun, and there was no reason to believe that a crime other than a parking offense had been committed. J. A. Tyler v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 302 A. 2d 748).

Where there had been no report of a crime in area, police officer at time of search was not investigating any criminal act, defendant's actions were not suspicious and incident occurred in afternoon, police officer did not have reason to believe that defendant was possessed of a weapon or that crime had been committed or was in process of commission, stop and frisk of defendant and seizure of pistol from defendant's person was not reasonable and pistol was inadmissible in prosecution for carrying a pistol without a license. T. Kenion v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 302 A. 2d 723).

Where police officer was trying to ascertain the name of owner of an automobile he had ample reason to believe was stolen when officer inadvertently came upon pistol in glove compartment at police station parking lot where defendant and vehicle had been taken following arrest, the warrantless search and the seizure of the pistol, which served as basis for subsequent prosecution of carrying pistol without a license and possessing an unregistered firearm and unlawfully possessing ammunition, was not unreasonable. P. Patterson v. United States and District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1973, 301 A. 2d 67).

Putative police regulation requiring a frisk of anyone getting into a patrol car whom the police don't know or believe to have committed a crime did not justify the frisk of defendant, resulting in discovery that he was carrying an unlicensed pistol, where one police officer candidly testified that in his own mind defendant was free to go before the frisk took place, and where, clearly, the frisk occurred in spite of the fact that police officers were not even suspicious that defendant was armed or dangerous. I. Gilchrist v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 300 A. 2d 453).

Where police officer, in investigating gunshot, approached parked automobile and asked driver, who had been pointed out, by other persons, to step from the vehicle, officer possessed right under the circumstances to be in position to have view of pistol lying on front seat, and seizure of the pistol, which was within plain view of officer, was proper and was not objectionable as product of a search, illegal or otherwise. A. Ragland v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 299 A. 2d 141).

Where police officer heard the squeal of tires as defendant's car turned corner, observed car back into driveway across street from squad car, approached defendant's car to ascertain registration and permit, was warned by second officer that defendant was "bent over, inside the car," observed defendant's furtive movements, and observed defendant get out of car and lock door, no justification for warrantless search was presented. R. C. Watts v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 297 A. 2d 790).

Actions of police officers in stopping rented vehicle in order to determine if the defendant had proper license and rental agreement was reasonable, and seizure of pistol that was in plain view of officer who was looking at interior of car with flashlight while other officer was engaged in conversation with defendant did not violate the Fourth Amendment. R. F. Palmore v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 290 A. 2d 573; aff'd 93 S. Ct. 1670, 411 U.S. 389).

Self-defense

In prosecution for carrying a pistol without a license, even if defendant had showed facts sufficient to justify instruction on possession of weapon for self-defense, requested instruction requiring acquittal if jury found possession of pistol was for an innocent purpose was too broad and was properly refused. F. T. Mitchell v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 302 A. 2d 216).

Sentence

Imposition of consecutive sentences for assault with a dangerous weapon and carrying a dangerous weapon is proper, notwithstanding that offenses arose out of the same transaction, since offense of carrying a dangerous weapon requires proof that the weapon was unlicensed while offense of assault with a dangerous weapon does not. R. S. Hammond v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 345 A. 2d 140).

Convictions arising from separate indictment handed down on same date can not be relied on to enhance punishment as third offender. D. L. Washington v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 343 A. 2d 560).

Fact that jury made no finding as to prior felony convictions did not preclude sentencing under repeat offender provision. C. C. Anderson v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 326 A. 2d 807; cert. denied 95 S. Ct. 1405, 420 U.S. 978).

Where enhanced penalty provisions for conviction of carrying a dangerous weapon were not properly invoked, sentence imposed must be vacated and case remanded for resentencing. C. Savage v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 313 A. 2d 880).

Where defendant had been convicted of assault with intent to kill armed with dangerous weapon, with sentence of from three to nine years, for assault with dangerous weapon, with concurrent two to six-year sentence, and carrying pistol without license, with concurrent one-year sentence, two to six-year sentence would be vacated on appeal, without remand. United States v. E. T. Wimbush (1973, 475 F. 2d 347, 154 U.S. App. D.C. 236).

Trial judge's statement that it was almost inconceivable that youth, who had been convicted of two counts of assault with a dangerous weapon and one count of carrying a dangerous weapon, could be handled under Federal Youth Corrections Act in view of his prior convictions of armed robbery and assault with dangerous weapon, his extensive juvenile record and fact that he had repeatedly absconded from juvenile correctional facilities constituted a sufficient affirmative on-the-record finding that youth would not benefit from treatment under the Act and trial judge's refusal to sentence youth under the Act was within his discretion. L. T. Paul v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 301 A. 2d 226).

Right to speedy trial of defendant, charged with armed robbery, assault with dangerous weapon, and of carrying a pistol without a license, was not impinged by nine-month delay extending from his indictment to his trial where, during the first two months defendant was still at large and police were doing their best to locate him, where defendant did not press a speedy trial right until five months after he was arrested, and where record was sufficient to sustain finding that defendant suffered no prejudice to his defense which could be attributed to the delay at the postarrest stage of the prosecution. United States v. L. Parish (1972, 468 F. 2d 1129, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 72; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 1430, 410 U.S. 957).

Verdict

Fact that jury acquitted defendant on charge of carrying a dangerous weapon did not require them to find defendant not guilty on charge of assault with deadly weapon. F. C. Winters v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 317 A. 2d 530).

Witnesses

Failure of trial court to admit into evidence prior inconsistent statement of a witness, after witness did not deny its truth, was error, but such error was not prejudicial where the inconsistent statement was read in whole by the witness to the jury and was used extensively by defense counsel in cross-examination. C. A. Jefferson v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 328 A. 2d 85).

Prior inconsistent statement is admissible only to impeach credibility of a witness and may not be used as affirmative proof of its contents. Id.

Competency of mentally retarded 18-year-old prosecutrix to testify in prosecution for assault with intent to commit rape while armed, assault with a dangerous weapon and carrying a dangerous weapon, was a threshold question of law committed to the trial court's discretion; it remained for the jury, however, to assess credibility of the witness and the weight to be given her testimony. United States v. H. Benn, Jr. (1973, 476 F. 2d 1127, 155 U.S. App. D.C. 180).

§ 22-3205. Exceptions to section 22-3204.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Burden of proving exception

Where a defendant interposes an affirmative defense such as an exception in a statute, it is his burden to bring himself within the exception rather than that of the prosecutor to negative it. R. W. Middleton v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 305 A. 2d 259).

Corrections officer

Under statutory provision excepting from prohibition against carrying pistols "jail wardens, or their deputies, policemen or other duly appointed law enforcement officers, or to members of the Army, Navy, or Marine Corps of United States or of the National Guard or Organized Reserves when on duty," corrections officer is not prohibited from carrying pistol whether or not "on duty." United States v. D. Pritchett, Jr. (1972, 470 F. 2d 455, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 307).

Federal protective officer

Defendant, who was a federal protective officer within the general services administration, was not, for purposes of statute prohibiting carrying a pistol without a license, within the exemption which applies to "policemen and other duly appointed law-enforcement officers," where there was no authorization for federal protective service officers to carry firearms other than while on duty or in a travel status to and from duty assignments, while defendant at the time of his arrest was returning from a personal trip to Baltimore totally unrelated to his duties as a federal protective service officer, though, as such officer, he had the same civil service classification as applied to members of the metropolitan police department. R. W. Middleton v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 305 A. 2d 259).

§ 22-3206. Issue of licenses to carry pistol.

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Application for license

Applications for licenses to carry concealed weapons should be treated under proper regulatory criteria duly adopted. A. F. Jordan, Jr. v. District of Columbia Board of Appeals and Review (D.C. App. 1974, 315 A. 2d 153).

Petitioner's 1972 application for license to carry concealed weapon could not be considered merely an extension of his 1969 application, which contained answers to various questions relevant to licensing requirement, since petitioner's change of position respecting his willingness to furnish such information on 1972 application could give rise to inference that his qualifications or status had changed. Id.

Construction

This section authorizing superintendent of police of District of Columbia to issue a license to carry a concealed weapon when it appears that the applicant has good reason to fear injury to his person or property or has any other proper reason for carrying a pistol and that he is a suitable person to be so licensed did not preempt field of gun legislation and preclude chief of police from adopting additional license information requirements and criteria, specifically requirement that applicant present substantial evidence of a specific threat to his life that cannot be alleviated by use of conventional methods; such additional information is relevant to licensing decision and failure to furnish it forms an adequate basis for denial of the license. A. F. Jordan, Jr. v. District of Columbia Board of Appeals and Review (D.C. App. 1974, 315 A. 2d 153).

Publication

Whatever rule is used in District of Columbia to determine eligibility for a license to carry a handgun, it must be adopted, published, and applied according to law, and remain consistent with congressional policy. A. F. Jordan, Jr. v. District of Columbia Board of Appeals and Review (D.C. App. 1974, 315 A. 2d 153).

Fact that certain of the police regulations governing applications for license to carry concealed weapon in District of Columbia had not been compiled and published as required by statute did not require blind issuance of such a license to petitioner, who failed to satisfy such regulations. Id.

§ 22-3210. Licenses of dealers of weapons—Records—By whom granted—Conditions thereof.

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

§ 22-3214. Possession of certain dangerous weapons prohibited—Exceptions.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Burden of proof

In a prosecution for possession of certain prohibited articles, including dangerous weapons, once Government alleges possession of prohibited article, burden does not shift to accused to establish innocence of possession but burden rests on Government to prove beyond reasonable doubt all elements of offense. United States v. V. B. Brooks (D.C. App. 1974, 330 A. 2d 245).

Constitutionality

Statute which prohibits a person from possessing, with intent to use unlawfully against another, an imitation pistol or dagger, dirk, razor, stiletto, or knife with a blade longer than three inches or other dangerous weapon is not void for vagueness on ground that term "dangerous weapon" is not defined with sufficient particularity. United States v. V. B. Brooks (D.C. App. 1974, 330 A. 2d 245).

Cross-examination

Where defendant, charged with possession of prohibited weapon and with assault with a dangerous weapon, called as a character witness his employer who testified that defendant had a good reputation in the community of keeping the peace and good order, cross-examination of employer as to whether he had heard that defendant had been convicted of the crime of false pretenses was proper. S. M. Darden v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 342 A. 2d 24).

Elements of offense

In a prosecution for possession of certain prohibited articles, including dangerous weapons, Government must establish not only that accused possessed a proscribed article but also that accused possessed it with intent to use it unlawfully against another. United States v. V. B. Brooks (D.C. App. 1974, 330 A. 2d 245).

Intent to use unlawfully is a required element in both the offense of assault with a dangerous weapon and the offense of possession of a dangerous weapon with intent to use unlawfully against another. Id.

Evidence—Sufficiency

Evidence which was adequate to enable jury to find that the possession of weapons, which were in a car in which defendants were riding, could be knowledgeably attributable to defendants was sufficient to sustain their convictions for possession of unregistered firearms, possession of prohibited weapons and carrying a dangerous weapon. United States v. J. C. Matthews (1973, 480 F. 2d 1191, 156 U.S. App. D.C. 299).

Instructions

Trial court properly instructed jury on testimony of accomplices rather than testimony of informers with respect to testimony of witness who had pled guilty to one count of indictment under which he and defendant were charged on the day before defendant's trial and who had participated in the crime with defendant. United States v. M. W. Thorne (1975, 527 F. 2d 840, — U.S. App. D.C. —).

Promptly corrected misstatement of instruction by court to effect no specific intent and only general intent need be found for conviction on count charging possession of a prohibited weapon was not so confusing as to prevent fair deliberation of defendant's innocence by jury which convicted him of the greater offense of assault with a dangerous weapon, the general intent crime, and reached no verdict, as it was instructed, on lesser included offense of possession of a prohibited weapon. S. M. Darden v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 342 A. 2d 24).

Jury question

Question whether wooden table leg which was approximately two inches thick and two and one-half feet long and which was thrown at mailman was a "dangerous weapon" within meaning of statute prohibiting the possession of a dangerous weapon with intent to use unlawfully against another was for jury. United States v. V. B. Brooks (D.C. App. 1974, 330 A. 2d 245).

Search and seizure

Police officer, upon encountering defendant at 8:30 P.M. on stairs between third and fourth floors of hotel whose owner had requested special police attention because of the high crime rate in the hotel, did not place defendant under arrest in simply telling him to "hold it" after defendant had made a quick move to go back up the stairs, and the district court therefore erroneously measured the action of the officer, including a search of defendant's person and seizure of a sawed-off shotgun and shotgun shells, against the probable-cause-to-arrest standard, rather than against the standard of "reasonableness" appropriate for a temporary detention. United States v. W. J. Coates (1974, 495 F.2d 160, 161 U.S. App. D.C. 334).

Entry of hotel room without warrant and seizure of sawed-off shotgun was valid, where shotgun had first been observed on table by member of hotel staff, entry by the police was peaceful and during the daytime, and occupant was a nonresident who had recently checked into a transient hotel, since the sawed-off shotgun posed ominous threat to the community. United States v. E. C. McKinney (1973, 477 F. 2d 1184, 155 U.S. App. D.C. 299).

§ 22-3215a. Manufacture, transfer, use, possession or transportation of molotov cocktails, or other explosives for unlawful purposes, prohibited—Definitions—Penalties.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Construction

Mere fact that Congress in enacting District of Columbia Code provision which expressly prohibits possession of "Molotov cocktails" within District apparently desired to legislate against "Molotov cocktails" and other explosive devices directly under District of Columbia power where it was available did not mean that "Molotov cocktails" were not included within term destructive devices under the National Firearms Act in which Congress chose to resort to registration under taxing power for nationwide applicability. United States v. J. T. Cruz et al. (1974, 492 F.2d 217, 2nd Cir.; cert. denied 94 S.Ct. 2649, 417 U.S. 935).

Evidence—Sufficiency

Evidence was not sufficient to support convictions for arson, second-degree burglary while armed with a Molotov cocktail and possession of a Molotov cocktail. United States v. L. S. Carter (1975, 522 F. 2d 666, 173 U.S. App. D.C. 54).

Inferences

Giving of instruction that jurors were permitted to infer that second defendant was "guilty of the crimes charged," if they determined, beyond a reasonable doubt, that he was found in unexplained, exclusive possession of recently stolen property was reversible error where the presumed fact of guilt of arson, possession of a Molotov cocktail and second-degree burglary while armed with a Molotov cocktail did not flow from possession of recently stolen military rifles. United States v. L. S. Carter (1975, 522 F. 2d 666, 173 U.S. App. D.C. 54).

§ 22-3217. Dangerous articles—Definition—Taking and destruction—Procedure.

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

Chapter 33.—VAGRANCY

§ 22-3302. "Vagrants" defined.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Constitutionality

Because of backdrop of changing law and practice in the last five years during which part of this section was declared unconstitutional followed by a plethora of police regulations pertaining to street investigations, record which contained only two incidents involving plaintiff more than five years previously under the then effective vagrancy procedures was insufficient basis upon which to grant relief to plaintiff in his request for class action and a declaration of unconstitutionality of the remaining subsections of this section. M. J. Gomez v. J. V. Wilson, Chief of Police, et al. (1973, 477 F. 2d 411, 155 U.S. App. D.C. 243; remanding 323 F. Supp. 87).

Policy vagrancy observation practices

Alleged improper vagrancy observation practices by the District of Columbia police furnished no basis for federal jurisdiction by virtue of the civil rights statute giving rise to cause of action for deprivation of rights under color of law. M. J. Gomez v. J. V. Wilson, Chief of Police, et al. (1973, 477 F. 2d 411, 155 U.S. App. D.C. 243; remanding 323 F. Supp. 87).

Remand

Since record based on two five-year-old incidents involving plaintiff and District of Columbia vagrancy procedures was insufficient, due to new police regulations and court decisions, to authorize Court of Appeals to adjudicate question of constitutionality of remaining provisions of this section, or the propriety of class action injunctive relief against a pattern of police misconduct, but new information arising after case had left district court was sufficient to entitle plaintiff to an opportunity to update lawsuit as predicate for possible further relief, Court of Appeals would remand cause for purpose of renovating pleadings. M. J. Gomez v. J. V. Wilson, Chief of Police, et al. (1973, 477 F. 2d 411, 155 U.S. App. D.C. 243; remanding 323 F. Supp. 87).

§ 22-3425. Prosecutions for violations of section 22-3423—Corporation Counsel defined.

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

§ 22-3427. Breaking and entering vending machines and similar devices—Penalties.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Indictment

Indictment charging that defendant "broke open, opened, and entered without right a juke box, with intent to carry away a part of such device, and something contained therein" was in sufficient for failure to aver that property belonged to someone other than defendant. United States v. W. E. Pendergrast (D.C. App. 1973, 313 A. 2d 103).

Chapter 35.—SEXUAL PSYCHOPATHS

§ 22-3501. Indecent acts—Children.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Abuse of discretion

Testimony in prosecution for taking indecent liberties with a minor that complainant had a reputation both for unchastity and as an agitator would have been irrelevant and its exclusion did not constitute an abuse of discretion. A. R. Springs v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 311 A. 2d 499).

Constitutionality

Child molestation statute, prohibiting enticing a minor child to a place for purposes of taking immoral, improper or indecent liberties with the child, described with reasonable specificity the conduct which was proscribed and was not void for vagueness. V. J. Moore v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 306 A. 2d 278).

Corroboration

Uncorroborated testimony of the complaining witness is insufficient to establish corpus delicti in a child molestation case. V. J. Moore v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 306 A. 2d 278).

Where defendant, who was charged with enticing a minor child to a place for purposes of taking immoral, improper or indecent liberties with the child, admitted that the ten-year-old female complainant was in his apartment at the time in question, where the girl's presence in the apartment was consistent with her version of what took place there, and where, in addition, police officer testified that the building door had been locked, thus corroborating girl's testimony that someone had opened the door for her, those factors, coupled with the girl's "excited" state when she promptly reported the incident to her mother, enabled fact finder to conclude beyond a reasonable doubt that the girl's account of the crime was not a fabrication. Id.

Testimony of complaining witnesses in prosecution for taking indecent liberties with minor as to specific acts of defendant was adequately corroborated by defendant's admissions as to "massages," appearance of girls upon returning home from defendant's apartment, and fact that offense was reported to police on the following day. C. L. Evans v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 299 A. 2d 136).

Criminal sentencing

Where trial judge had a uniform policy of refusing disclosure of presentence reports, and where at outset of the sentencing proceeding defense counsel requested permission to inspect the presentence report, at which point judge responded "It's not my policy. Denied.", trial judge failed to exercise his discretion under rule providing that "The court before pronouncing sentence may disclose to the defendant's counsel all or part of the material contained in the report of the presentence investigation * * *," which required vacating of sentence and remand of the case for resentencing. A. R. Springs v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 311 A. 2d 499).

Discovery

Refusal, in criminal prosecution which accused was convicted of sodomy, taking indecent liberties with a minor and assault with a deadly weapon and in which three potential government witnesses were of tender age, to grant accused discovery of names and addresses of government witnesses was not abuse of discretion. J. C. Davis v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 315 A. 2d 157).

Refusal to grant accused access to complaining witness' subpoenaed school records which reflected no prior homosexual or other serious behavioral problems, was not reversible error. Id.

Evidence—Sufficiency

Evidence, in prosecution for taking indecent liberties with minors, including evidence that defendant inserted his hands in pants of complainant around pubic area, inserted his finger in their vaginas, and massaged their breasts, was sufficient to give rise to inference that there was specific intent to arouse his lust, passion or sexual desires. C. L. Evans v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 299 A. 2d 136).

Indictment

Grand jury indictment charging forcible rape, carnal knowledge and indecent liberties was not subject to dismissal on ground that it was based on transcript of sworn testimony before earlier grand jury which returned indictment for carnal knowledge that had been dismissed because of defendant's age, where testimony before first grand jury was not limited to carnal knowledge charge, there was no limitation of issues or offenses in presentation of evidence to first grand jury, and statement of victim, read to first grand jury in her presence and affirmed by her orally under oath, recited details of two acts of forcible rape. United States v. S. C. Wagoner (D.C. App. 1974, 313 A. 2d 719; rehearing denied 321 A. 2d 211; cert. denied 95 S.Ct. 630, 419 U.S. 1052).

Instructions

Instruction in prosecution for taking indecent liberties with minors referring to alternative method of committing offense, whereas only one method was charged in indictment, was not, taken as a whole, such as to authorize jury to convict on grounds not charged. C. L. Evans v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 299 A. 2d 136).

Sentence

Notwithstanding claim that failure to grant credit for time served in pretrial and presentence confinement was a violation of petitioner's guarantee to equal protection as well as the law and public policy of the District of Columbia, conclusive presumption arose that credit was given so as to preclude petitioner from obtaining relief, where petitioner was sentenced to two concurrent three to 10-year sentences on counts charging sodomy and an indecent act on a minor child, although petitioner faced a possible 20-year sentence on sodomy count in that victim was under 16 years of age. L. A. Arrington v. A. McGruder, et al. (1974, 490 F. 2d 795, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 227).

Sexual purpose

Aborted attempt to expose child's genitals, as evidenced by removing her pants, fairly could be said to demonstrate a sexual purpose within the terms of child molestation statute proscribing enticing a minor child to a place for purposes of taking immoral, improper or indecent liberties with the child. V. J. Moore v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 306 A. 2d 278).

Specific intent

In prosecution for taking indecent liberties with minor, specific intent to arouse accused may be inferred from accused's actions. C. L. Evans v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 299 A. 2d 136).

Voir dire questions

Refusal, in prosecution for sodomy and taking indecent liberties with a child, to permit accused to ask on voir dire "Is there anyone here who feels" that "sexual acts with a minor are either immoral, illegal or indecent" was not error, in that question was inherently vague and invaded function of trial court by inquiring with regard to proposition of law and in that question asked by judge overcame such latter objection and properly focused on potential juror prejudice. J. C. Davis v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 315 A. 2d 157).

§ 22-3502. Sodomy.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Bill of particulars

Government delinquency in failing to provide accused with bill of particulars was harmless error where complete and formal discovery was afforded and where there was no indication that defense counsel was surprised by trial evidence or was denied necessary information which would have been contained within a bill. J. C. Davis v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 315 A. 2d 157).

Constitutionality

Statute which proscribes solicitation for the purpose of committing sodomy, defined as taking into one's mouth or anus the sexual organ of any other person, does not violate constitutional guarantee of equal protection on its face by prohibiting acts between either two men or a man and a woman but not between two women. United States v. M. Cozart (D.C. App. 1974, 321 A. 2d 342).

Defendant who was charged with keeping a bawdy or disorderly house, specifically a commercial establishment resorted to for homosexual activities, had no standing to challenge constitutionality of statutory proscription against sodomy on theory that statute was overbroad in that it could be applied to conduct within private abode between those in a familial relationship as defendant was not himself within the class whose alleged right of privacy was affected by application of the statute. D. G. Harris v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 315 A. 2d 569; rev'g 293 A. 2d 851).

Construction

Cunnilingus is a sodomitic act within purview of statute which defines such act as taking into one's mouth or anus the sexual organ of any other person. United States v. M. Cozart (D.C. App. 1974, 321 A. 2d 342).

Discovery

Refusal, in criminal prosecution in which accused was convicted of sodomy, taking indecent liberties with a minor and assault with a deadly weapon and in which three potential government witnesses were of tender age, to grant accused discovery of names and addresses of government witnesses was not abuse of discretion. J. C. Davis v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 315 A. 2d 157).

Refusal to grant accused access to complaining witness' subpoenaed school records, which reflected no prior homosexual or other serious behavioral problems, was not reversible error. Id.

Discriminatory enforcement

Evidence which showed that while some women solicited each other for sodomitic acts, only men were arrested for homosexual solicitation under statute which made solicitation for sodomitic acts a crime, where there was no indication as to whether lesbian solicitation was known to the police, showed no more than a failure to prosecute others because of a lack of knowledge and did not show discriminatory enforcement. United States v. M. Cozart (D.C. App. 1974, 321 A. 2d 342).

Insanity defense

Where defendant, indicted for sodomy, assault with dangerous weapon and mayhem, neither raised defense of insanity prior to return of jury verdict of guilty nor brought to court's attention prior imprisonment for sex-related crime or attempted suicide while in prison and confinement there for psychiatric treatment, defendant had not been improperly deprived of defense of insanity during trial. E. T. Hughes v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 308 A. 2d 238).

Privacy rights

Participants in a sodomitic act performed in a public wooded area cannot invoke a right to privacy even though they may have believed that because of the hour of the night and the density of the foliage, their behavior would go unobserved. United States v. C. A. Buck (D.C. App. 1975, 342 A. 2d 48).

Where membership in "Health Club" could be obtained by public with minimum formality and for a modest fee, club was public in nature; thus, whether or not club's cubicles, in which sodomitic activity was alleged to have taken place between consenting adults, were secluded, such adults did not have the right to or reasonable expectation of privacy which would render the sodomitic activity outside proscription of sodomy statute. United States v. J. L. McKean et al. (D.C. App. 1975, 338 A. 2d 439).

Acts of sodomy which allegedly occurred at "homosexual health club" were not protected by any recognized right to privacy as the acts occurred not in a private abode but on premises of a commercial establishment open to the public. D. G. Harris v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 315 A. 2d 569; rev'g 293 A. 2d 851).

Sentence

Notwithstanding claim that failure to grant credit for time served in pretrial and presentence confinement was a violation of petitioner's guarantee to equal protection as well as the law and public policy of the District of Columbia, conclusive presumption arose that credit was given so as to preclude petitioner from obtaining relief, where petitioner was sentenced to two concurrent three to 10-year sentences on counts charging sodomy and an indecent act on a minor child, although petitioner faced a possible 20-year sentence on sodomy count in that victim was under 16 years of age. L. A. Arrington v. A. McGruder, et al. (1974, 490 F. 2d 795, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 227).

Sentence of ten years' imprisonment, and refusal to commit defendant to institution for treatment of sexual psychopathy, did not constitute cruel and unusual punishment of defendant after conviction of sodomy and assault with dangerous weapon. E. T. Hughes v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 308 A. 2d 238).

Voir dire questions

Refusal, in prosecution for sodomy and taking indecent liberties with a child, to permit accused to ask on voir dire "Is there anyone here who feels" that "sexual acts with a minor are either immoral, illegal or indecent" was not error, in that question was inherently vague and invaded function of trial court by inquiring with regard to proposition of law and in that question asked by judge overcame such latter objection and properly focused on potential juror prejudice. J. C. Davis v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 315 A.2d 157).

In prosecution for sodomy, refusal to permit accused to ask on voir dire "Do any of you ladies and gentlemen have any question with the theory of law that the penis must penetrate the anus" was not error, in that question focused on question of law for court and could have confused jurors as to their duty to follow court's instructions on the law. Id.

§ 22-3508. Hearing—Commitment to Saint Elizabeths Hospital.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Confinement

Where psychiatric reports, filed with court after defendant's conviction, although denominating defendant a sexual psychopath, also stated that defendant was suffering from a mental disorder and that the alleged offenses, if committed by him, were products of his illness, trial court correctly determined that defendant was not at that time eligible for commitment as sexual psychopath. E. T. Hughes v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 308 A. 2d 238).

Chapter 36.—IMPLEMENTS OF CRIME

§ 22-3601. Possession of implements of crime—Penalty.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Defense of addiction

Even if Court of Appeals is not statutorily precluded from permitting criminal defendant charged with possession of heroin for personal use or possession of narcotics paraphernalia to raise affirmative defense of lack of common-law criminal responsibility due to heroin addiction, Court would not upset balance of multipronged effort to reduce heroin addiction through law enforcement and treatment. L. F. Gorham v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 339 A. 2d 401).

Congress' avowed intent to prosecute and convict drug users where indicated for all crime nullifies authority of Court of Appeals to formulate a new common-law rule of criminal responsibility which would insulate those same drug users from criminal punishment. Id.

Decision permitting a defendant charged with possession of narcotics and narcotics paraphernalia to raise affirmative defense that he lacked capacity to refrain from using narcotics by reason of drug addiction cannot be rested on trial court record which does not disclose basis for expert witness' conclusion that defendant had an overwhelming compulsion psychologically to use heroin and there was no showing whether finding of addiction related to criminal responsibility or only to habitual use. W. R. Franklin v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 339 A. 2d 398).

Evidence—Admissibility

Where officers, when they arrived to execute search warrant, expected another person to be residing at address, and instead discovered that premises were occupied by defendant, who was not then there, and when defendant arrived he was asked to accompany officers to a bedroom, and there he was confronted with narcotics and paraphernalia and asked if he recognized the items and if they were his, there was no custodial interrogation of kind limited in Miranda decision, and inculpatory statements made by defendant were admissible. J. B. N. Tyler v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 298 A. 2d 224).

— Sufficiency

Evidence sustained conviction of possession of narcotics paraphernalia, even though no traces of heroin were found in defendant's department, in which substances shown to be used in "cutting" and injecting heroin were found. C. E. Rosser v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 313 A. 2d 876).

In prosecution for possession of narcotics paraphernalia and possession of dangerous drug, desoxyn, government established unbroken chain of custody as matter of reasonable probability, in view of testimony showing that envelopes had not been tampered with and sufficiently explaining any reason for delay in delivery. Id.

Defendant's possession of a small wooden pipe, without further evidence as to its shape and size and absent evidence as to nature and significance of marijuana residue in pipe, did not have the "sinister" implication that possession of the "implements" and "tools" of a crime raises and was not sufficient to support conviction of possessing implement of crime, to wit, narcotics paraphernalia. K. L. Williams v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 304 A. 2d 287).

— Suppression

Failure of trial court to consider tardy oral motion to suppress evidence did not vitiate conviction where court permitted counsel to develop point respecting validity of seizure and there was no showing that seizure was invalid. G. F. Thompson v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 307 A. 2d 764).

Instruments, tools, or implements

Lactose, dextrose, quinine and gelatin capsules, even though possessing special properties for providing bulk to heroin, were not "instruments," "tools" or "implements" within statute prohibiting possessions of any instrument, tool or other implement which is usually employed or may reasonably be employed in the commission of any crime, and possession of large quantities of such materials by owner of retail drugstore was not a criminal act under statute. R. P. Rosenberg v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 297 A. 2d 763).

Intent

Proof of intent to possess narcotics paraphernalia may be inferred from possession of "sinister" items. C. E. Rosser v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 313 A. 2d 876).

Probable cause

Where a concededly reliable informer gave tip based on personal knowledge which described defendant in great detail, and he gave defendant's alias and his present location and before arrest officers were able to corroborate the informant's tip in every detail with the exception of actual possession of narcotics, probable cause was established and narcotics and implement seized from defendant at time of arrest did not need to be suppressed. R. Banks v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 305 A. 2d 256).

Officer's observations of defendant, who was standing beside sink in his employer's restroom and appeared startled upon seeing policeman, who had entered in order to use the restroom, of defendant's freezing against the wall and of coin purse located on sink and similar to those in which officer had found narcotics in the past did not constitute probable cause for officer, who admitted that he had no reason to believe a crime was being committed when he looked into coin purse, to arrest defendant prior to the search, and search, which revealed narcotics paraphernalia and heroin, was therefore invalid. L. D. McWilliams v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 298 A. 2d 38).

Search and seizure

Where officers making routine check, at hotel owner's invitation, noticed readily apparent and accessible crack in door of guest room, officers' act of looking through crack was not an unreasonable search, and narcotics paraphernalia observed through crack in door and in officers' plain view provided officers with probable cause for ensuing rooftop surveillance and subsequent arrests. H. L. Borum v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 318 A. 2d 590).

Where officers making routine check, at hotel owner's invitation, noticed readily apparent and accessible crack in door of guest room and looked through crack and observed narcotics paraphernalia and defendant and others, officers' warrantless entry into room was justified by exigencies of situation. Id.

If narcotics paraphernalia was visible from doorway which was open when officers knocked, officer had right to seize it under the plain view doctrine. J. E. Wheeler v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 300 A. 2d 713).

Where police officer who had heard radio broadcast stating that three subjects were using narcotics in automobile parked at rear of warehouse went to the location and saw three persons seated in automobile matching description which had been broadcast, officer had justification for further affirmative action and his determination to identify himself as police officer and open the car's door simultaneously, while directing the occupants to get out, was permissible, and upon observing bottle-top cooker and full syringe on floor of the car, seizure of the evidence and arrest of the subjects became appropriate and there was no violation of constitutional right to be protected against unreasonable search and seizure. United States v. E. Mitchell (D.C. App. 1973, 299 A. 2d 540).

Where police officer was told by another that defendant, whom officer had questioned, had a syringe under wig, officer's momentary stopping of defendant, inquiry about wig, and request to defendant to remove her hat were reasonable, and defendant's denial of wearing a wig and its obvious presence furnished independent observation and corroboration which gave rise to a reasonable basis to arrest defendant and seize contents of her hand, which she had removed from beneath wig and which contained syringe and a bag of methadone, and to seize tinfoil pack, which apparently contained heroin, from starch box from which defendant began to eat at police station. United States v. S. P. Oliver (D.C. App. 1972, 297 A. 2d 778).

TITLE 23.—CRIMINAL PROCEDURE

This title was enacted by Pub. L. 91-358, Title II, § 210(a), July 29, 1970, 84 Stat. 604

Chapter 1.—GENERAL PROVISIONS

§ 23-101. Conduct of prosecutions

CROSS REFERENCE

Representation of indigents, see §§ 2-2222, 11-2601.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Certification

Question of whether corporation counsel or United States attorney should conduct proceedings charging juvenile with act of delinquency was not properly certifiable since juvenile was not involved in criminal prosecution. In the Matter of M. W. F. (D.C. App. 1973, 312 A. 2d 302).

Construction

The Court of Appeals has duty to make every effort to reconcile allegedly conflicting statutes and to give effect to language and intent of both, as long as doing so does not deprive one of statutes of its essential meaning. District of Columbia v. R. E. Smith et ano. (D.C. App. 1974, 329 A. 2d 128).

Prosecution by Corporation Counsel

Corporation Counsel, rather than United States attorney, was appropriate authority for prosecution of defendants for tampering with a parked vehicle in violation of police regulations of the District of Columbia. District of Columbia v. R. E. Smith et ano. (D.C. App. 1974, 329 A. 2d 128).

Statute, which provides that Corporation Counsel shall conduct prosecutions for violations of all police or municipal ordinances or regulations and for violations of all penal statutes in nature of police or municipal regulations, where maximum authority to the Corporation Counsel as to all municipal ordinances and regulations, punishment is a fine only, or imprisonment not exceeding one year, gives prosecutorial irrespective of the prescribed punishment. Id.

§ 23-103. Statements prior to sentence

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Plea bargaining

Where Government as part of plea bargaining only agreed to waive its statutory right of allocution at time of imposing of sentence for burglary, defendant did not have right to reasonably expect that Government's agreement not to allocute would extend to a hearing on his subsequent request that the imposed sentence be reduced and Government was entitled to submit information in opposition to motion to reduce. M. L. Braxton v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 328 A. 2d 385).

Purpose

Provisions of this section that "at any time when the defendant or his counsel addresses the court on the sentence to be imposed * * *" prosecuting attorney may address court as to sentence was intended to prohibit ex parte representations by the defense counsel to trial judge concerning sentencing and to permit prosecutor to rebut defendant's evidence of mitigating factors in sentencing or to present his recommendations on sentencing and does not prohibit government from allocuting as to sentencing even if defendant chooses not to make a statement. W. N. Quarles v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 349 A. 2d 690; cert. denied 96 S. Ct. 2169, — U.S. —).

§ 23-104. Appeals by United States and District of Columbia

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Appeal by District of Columbia

Government's appeal from order suppressing confessions of juvenile who was alleged to be delinquent was required to be filed within ten-day period provided for appeals in criminal cases rather than within the 30-day period provided for appeals of civil cases. District of Columbia v. M. A. C. (D.C. App. 1974, 328 A. 2d 375).

Appeal by United States

Motions judge erred in dismissing prosecutions for possession of narcotics with prejudice for want of prosecution after arresting officer failed to appear at hearing on accused's motion to suppress following dismissal of prior prosecution for want of prosecution because of officer's failure to appear at trial where accused made no proffer of evidence that he had been prejudiced by delay and advanced no claim that he had been denied a speedy trial and less than one year had elapsed between date of arrest and hearing on motion to suppress. United States v. R. W. Mack (D.C. App. 1972, 298 A. 2d 509).

Dismissal of information for want of prosecution, after denial of government's request for a continuance, sought to permit an appeal from suppression order, because of failure of government to comply with rules requiring written motion for continuance, service on opposite party, a hearing and request for continuance at least two days before trial, could not be entered to defeat jurisdiction of District of Columbia Court of Appeals on a timely appeal taken pursuant to statute allowing appeal by government from suppression order. United States v. S. P. Oliver (D.C. App. 1972, 297 A. 2d 778).

Where order of suppression of evidence, if lawful, effectively terminated the prosecution, trial date became academic, rule requiring written motion for a continuance and request for a continuance at least two days before trial became subordinate to government's statutory right to appeal during time when appeal could be noted and oral continuance request by government to permit an appeal from suppression order could not justify dismissal order on ground of government's failure to comply with rules. Id.

Where underlying rationale for dismissal of information was an erroneous belief that defendant would be incarcerated because of government's appeal from suppression order and a preoccupying disagreement with government's announced determination to proceed with the appeal, order of dismissal was without authority and void. Id.

Appealable orders

Trial court's order that the United States would not be permitted to call any person as a witness in criminal case unless, with respect to that witness, the government had fully complied with a prior order that the United States furnish pretrial to defense counsel the arrest and criminal records of prosecution witnesses is final and appealable where the government refused to comply with the order to produce and thus the order precluding the calling of the witnesses effectively terminated the prosecution. United States v. W. C. Ingram et ano. (D.C. App. 1975, 337 A.2d 488; cert. denied 96 S. Ct. 793, 423 U.S. 1058).

Dismissal of an information without prejudice is an appealable order. United States v. T. L. Cummings (D.C. App. 1973, 301 A. 2d 229).

That dismissal of indictment without prejudice created no bar to seeking a new indictment did not render dismissal order nonreviewable. United States v. M. M. Hector (D.C. App. 1972, 298 A. 2d 504).

Construction

Words "charged with a criminal offense" as used in this section providing that District of Columbia may appeal a suppression order entered before trial of a person charged with a criminal offense includes the term "delinquent act." District of Columbia v. M. E. H. (D.C. App. 1973, 312 A. 2d 561).

Evidence—Suppression

Where officer performed valid investigative stop of automobile whose driver was suspected of carrying loaded 45 automatic and continued to detain automobile when driver volunteered that he had toy gun in trunk, and where second officer then saw real gun through open car door and seized it, driver's right to be free from unreasonable seizure of person was not violated. United States v. F. R. Cousar (D.C. App. 1975, 349 A. 2d 454).

District of Columbia had right to appeal order of Family Division of Superior Court, entered at prehearing stage of juvenile delinquency proceeding, suppressing as evidence unregistered pistol and suppressing certain statements made by subject child prior to his arrest. District of Columbia v. M. E. H. (D.C. App. 1973, 312 A. 2d 561).

Motion to suppress evidence

Where pretrial motion to suppress has been denied and, realistically, only available issue in "possession of contraband" case is search or seizure, approved procedure is to stipulate the facts as alleged in information and have court render verdict thereon in order to preserve Fourth Amendment issue on appeal. United States v. J. L. Allen (D.C. App. 1975, 337 A. 2d 512).

Trial court erred in determining sua sponte to rehear motion to suppress, which had previously been considered and denied pretrial, where no newly discovered grounds were presented. Id.

First trial judge's refusal to permit defense counsel to be heard as to whether there was valid basis for excusing him from normal requirement of filing motion to suppress evidence prior to trial was harmless where first judge did not again reach case and second trial judge, in refusing to rehear the motion to suppress independently concluded that situation did not present an appropriate exception to the requirement. C. C. Anderson v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 326 A. 2d 807).

Trial court's refusal to hear motion to suppress evidence filed at time of trial was within his discretion where defense counsel did not claim that motion was based upon newly learned information but acknowledged that belated effort to move to suppress was tactical response to nonappearance of two witnesses Id.

Where defendant, charged with petit larceny, made no pretrial motion to suppress allegedly stolen notebooks which were introduced at trial without objection, any objection to evidence was waived by defendant who claimed on appeal that the notebooks should have been suppressed as having been seized illegally. T. Grennett v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 318 A. 2d 589).

When pretrial motion to suppress has been heard and decided as required by the Superior Court Criminal Rule in District of Columbia Code, that decision becomes law of the case and only if new grounds, including new facts, are advanced which defendant could not reasonably have been aware of may a trial judge entertain a renewed motion to suppress. J. E. Wheeler v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 300 A. 2d 713).

Where, at time motions to suppress were heard, government was not obligated to provide defense with police department forms indicating that narcotics paraphernalia had not been seen until after arresting officers had entered defendants' room, but forms because available at trial in which officer testified he had observed paraphernalia before entering room, the inconsistency constituted ground for new suppression hearing and, in absence of lower court ruling that forms were not in conflict with testimony and in light of other inconsistencies in officer's testimony and critical importance of officer's credibility, remand for fresh determination of suppression issue was necessary. Id.

Trial court's grant of suppression motion insofar as it related to property not covered by warrant, while deferring decision on question of validity of warrant on ground that criminal prosecution had not yet been instituted, was improper; court should have determined all of motion. United States v. G. A. Farmer (D.C. App. 1972, 297 A. 2d 783).

Representation of indigents, see §§ 2-2222, 11-2601.

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in section 11-2601.

NOTES TO DECISIONSConstruction

Subsection of this section providing that application for writ of habeas corpus in behalf of prisoner who is authorized to apply for relief by motion pursuant to the section shall not be entertained by the Superior Court or by any federal court if it appears the applicant has failed to make motion for relief under the section or that Superior Court has denied him relief is not intended to and does not affect the jurisdiction of United States District Court for the District of Columbia to entertain postconviction habeas petitions from local prisons but rather is an exhaustion of remedies statute, requiring initial submission of claims to the local courts and marking the terminal point for proceedings in the local court system. R. F. Palmore v. Superior Court of the District of Columbia et al. (1975, 515 F.2d 1294, 169 U.S. App. D.C. 323; cert. granted 96 S. Ct. 1101, 424 U.S. 907).

This section relating to entertainment of application for writ of habeas corpus on behalf of prisoner authorized to apply for relief from judgment by motion does not affect jurisdiction of federal district court under federal statutes relating to habeas corpus and operates only as an exhaustion of remedies provision. J. C. Pressley v. C. L. Swain (1975, 515 F. 2d 1290, 169 U.S. App. D.C. 319; cert. granted 96 S. Ct. 1101, 424 U.S. 907).

Effective assistance of counsel

If in a collateral attack based on allegations of ineffectiveness of appointed counsel the trial court concludes that a hearing should be held a non-Public Defender Service attorney should be appointed if the original trial was with that agency. W. J. Angarano v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 329 A. 2d 453).

An adequate specific showing that prima facie ineffectiveness exists is required before the District of Columbia Court of Appeals will grant the Public Defender Service leave to withdraw and appoint new counsel to determine whether to assert such an issue in the reviewing court or to seek collateral relief in the trial court. Id.

Exhaustion of remedies

Habeas corpus petitioner who had been convicted in Superior Court for carrying a pistol without a license and who had presented Fourth Amendment claim by pretrial motion to suppress evidence and again on appeal from conviction to the District of Columbia Court of Appeals had exhausted his local remedies despite not having made a motion for postconviction relief under this section. R. F. Palmore v. Superior Court of the District of Columbia et al. (1975, 515 F.2d 1294, 169 U.S. App. D.C. 323; cert. granted 96 S. Ct. 1101, 424 U.S. 907).

Although District of Columbia defendant's pro se collateral attack, which he styled as motions for new trial, were clearly untimely under rule, where government in opposing motions stated that even treating motions as ones to vacate sentence under statute they were utterly meritless and motions were considered on their merits on appeal to the District of Columbia Court of Appeals defendant had exhausted local remedies and defendant was entitled to petition for federal writ of habeas corpus. J. C. Pressley v. C. L. Swain (1975, 515 F. 2d 1290, 169 U.S. App. D.C. 319; cert. granted 96 S. Ct. 1101, 424 U.S. 907).

Hearing

It was not error for trial court to deny, without a hearing, defendant's petition for postconviction relief based on alleged ineffectiveness of counsel where the motion was vague and conclusory with no facial validity, where there was no claim of innocence or claim that plea of guilty was not entered voluntarily, and where defendant's attorney had filed numerous pretrial motions on defendant's behalf. J. V. Bettis v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 325 A. 2d 190).

§ 23-111. Proceedings to establish previous convictionsCROSS REFERENCE

Increased sentences for previous offenders, see §§ 22-104, 22-104a.

Challenge

A defendant can challenge prior convictions, sought to be used to enhance sentence under recidivist statute, at any time before sentencing. E. Smith v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 304 A. 2d 28; cert. denied 94 S. Ct. 846, 414 U.S. 1114).

Construction

Requirement that before court can sentence individuals subject to increased punishment on basis of information as to prior convictions the defendant must affirm that he has been previously convicted as alleged is mandatory and requires an affirmative statement by the defendant and was not satisfied by a concession by defense counsel. United States v. J. F. Bolden (1975, 514 F.2d 1301, 169 U.S. App. D.C. 60).

Provision of recidivist statute that failure of defendant to respond to pretrial information or Notice of Additional Penalties shall constitute a waiver of any challenge the defendant may have to prior convictions does not mean there is a waiver on failure to file a written response to the information; it is necessary only that the challenge be raised by response to the information before an increased sentence is imposed. E. Smith v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 304 A. 2d 28; cert. denied 94 S. Ct. 846, 414 U.S. 1114).

Provision of recidivist statute that, on defendant's failure to file written response to Notice of Additional Penalties, the court shall proceed to impose sentence as provided by law means that on such failure the court shall make inquiry whether defendant affirms or denies previous convictions, alleged in the information and shall inform defendant that any challenge not made before sentence is imposed may not thereafter be raised to attack sentence; such requirements are mandatory and cannot be avoided by merely granting to defendant, whether represented by counsel or not, an opportunity to say something to the court. Id.

Notice

Failure of defendant to file written response to service of notice or prior offense to be used to enhance punishment did not constitute waiver of her right to dispute convictions alleged in Notice of Additional Penalties. E. Smith v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 304 A. 2d 28; cert. denied 94 S.Ct. 846, 414 U.S. 1114).

Statutory procedure for filing a written response to Notice of Additional Penalties is mandatory when possible challenges to prior convictions, sought to enhance punishment, are available; failure to follow that procedure when challenges are known or should be known could be a violation of counsel's duty to his client. Id.

Procedure

Trial judge's failure to inquire of defendant whether he affirmed or denied previous convictions contained in government's information invalidates sentence for carrying a pistol without a license imposed under the recidivist sentencing procedure. L. Irby v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 342 A. 2d 33).

An enhanced sentence could not be imposed upon defendant, found guilty of grand larceny, where the information as to the prior felony convictions was not filed with clerk of court prior to trial as required by this section. J. A. Bond v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 310 A. 2d 221).

Sentence

A sentence under the recidivist statute is not a part of the offense itself; it is the possible punishment for the latter which determines whether the prosecution must be by indictment; recidivist statute comes into play after the trial and after accused has been found guilty and proceedings thereunder do not involve inquiry into guilt or innocence. E. Smith v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 304 A. 2d 28; cert. denied 94 S. Ct. 846, 414 U.S. 1114).

Where, at sentencing proceeding, trial court neglected to clearly inform defendant of prior convictions allegedly warranting enhancement of punishment on conviction of petit larceny or to inquire whether defendant affirmed or denied each conviction and court merely inquired of defendant regarding a prior petit larceny conviction not listed in pretrial information, which conviction she affirmed, 18 months' sentence was required to be set aside and case remanded for resentencing, notwithstanding that defendant had failed to file written answer to information. Id.

§ 23-112. Consecutive and concurrent sentences

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Consecutive sentences

Test is whether offenses for which sentences are levied to run consecutively are separate criminal acts. S. L. Banks v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 307 A. 2d 787).

Where there was no indication that sentence being served by defendant pursuant to conviction in federal district court arose out of same occurrence or acts as subsequent burglary and petit larceny convictions, and Congress intended sentences to run consecutively unless specified otherwise, denial of defendant's motion to have consecutive sentences on burglary and petit larceny convictions run concurrently with federal district court conviction was not abuse of discretion. Id.

Separate offenses

Imposition of consecutive sentences for assault with a dangerous weapon and carrying a dangerous weapon is proper, notwithstanding that offenses arose out of the same transaction, since offense of carrying a dangerous weapon requires proof that the weapon was unlicensed while offense of assault with a dangerous weapon does not. R. S. Hammond v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 345 A. 2d 140).

In prosecution for armed robbery and for assault with a dangerous weapon, trial court did not erroneously permit jury to return a separate verdict on assault with a dangerous weapon charge where evidence disclosed that after armed robbery of cash register of store defendant forced victim at gunpoint to walk to rear of store where she was searched and on leaving defendant warned victim about possibility of being shot if she came out before defendant got out of store. G. W. Bates v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 327 A. 2d 542).

Premeditated murder and felony murder were not separate "offenses" within the meaning of this section statute relating to sentences which are deemed to run consecutive to each other. United States v. R. L. Ammidown (1973, 497 F. 2d 615, 162 U.S. App. D.C. 28).

Chapter 3.—INDICTMENTS AND INFORMATIONS

SUBCHAPTER I.—GENERAL PROVISIONS

§ 23-301. Prosecution by indictment or information

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Dismissal

Where defendant did not assert that indictment was defective but court granted motion to dismiss, filed more than four months after preliminary hearing, solely on ground that judge handling hearing abused discretion in denying defendant's request to compel testimony of complaining witness and that trial judge at status hearing erred in denying second request for such testimony from witness who died after status hearing and where dismissal was taken as alternative to ordering preliminary hearing and as device to get appellate resolution of case, dismissal of indictment is reversible error. United States v. W. B. Davis (D.C. App. 1975, 330 A.2d 751).

Although all counsel should obey, whenever possible, rule providing for calendar management, dismissal of indictment without prejudice for defense counsel's failure to give required two-day notice of unpreparedness before trial, and for government's unpreparedness at trial as result of defense counsel's telling prosecutor day before trial that defense counsel was going to request continuance, was improper. United States v. J. B. Douglas (D.C. App. 1974, 330 A. 2d 243).

Grand jury proceedings—Subpena

Grand jury subpena duces tecum seeking production of attendance records of murder suspect's employer for six-day period bridging the day of the killing was not unreasonable or oppressive, and Superior Court's quashing the subpena as unreasonable and oppressive constitutes a usurpation of power. United States v. The Honorable

H. C. Moultrie, Associate Judge, etc. (D.C. App. 1975, 340 A.2d 828).

Indictment

Pendency of grand jury indictment charging assault with a dangerous weapon did not prohibit a second grand jury from considering and returning indictment charging not only the same count of assault with a dangerous weapon but the additional count of carrying a dangerous weapon, regardless of whether prior grand jury refused to return a bill charging the offense of carrying a dangerous weapon or simply did not consider such offense. United States v. C. Johnson (D.C. App. 1974, 328 A. 2d 769).

Though denominated a misdemeanor by § 22-1506, prescribed penalty of up to five years imprisonment made offense of "three-card monte and confidence games" prosecutable only by indictment. United States v. D. L. Brown et ano. (D.C. App. 1973, 309 A. 2d 256).

SUBCHAPTER II.—JOINDER

§ 23-311. Joinder of offenses and of defendants

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Joinder—Defendants

Joinder of defendants, one charged with a misdemeanor and the other with a felony in connection with carrying a deadly weapon, could be accomplished by filing an information against the former and, upon indictment of his codefendant, moving for joinder. T. Freeman v. Honorable D. S. Smith (D.C. App. 1973, 301 A. 2d 217).

—Offenses

The Government may properly charge in the same indictment offenses against both the federal bank (savings and loan) robbery statute and the local armed robbery statute, provided defendant is not ultimately sentenced under two statutes proscribing essentially the same offense. United States v. R. Shepard (1975, 515 F. 2d 1324, 169 U.S. App. D.C. 353).

Separate counts

Although defendant can properly be charged with both voluntary manslaughter and involuntary manslaughter in same indictment, duplicitous count is improper in that, upon conviction, it would not be clear to which crime guilty verdict referred and thus what penalty should be imposed, it would hamper both judge and jury in considering evidence, general verdict of guilty would not reveal whether defendant was unanimously found guilty of all offenses charged, right of protection against double jeopardy might be violated and it might deny right to notice of nature and cause of accusation. United States v. D. Bradford (D.C. App. 1975, 344 A. 2d 208).

§ 23-312. Joinder of indictments or informations for trial

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Plain error

Where defendant himself moved for joinder of indictments, where defendant did not object to admission of evidence of other crimes at trial for strategic reasons in order to prove defense of insanity, where much of evidence of other crimes would have been introduced regardless of joinder, and where possibility of prejudice was not enlarged by factor of joinder alone, trial court's failure to order a severance, sua sponte, was not plain error requiring reversal. M. Bell v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 332 A. 2d 351).

(f) A search warrant shall contain—

(1) the name of the issuing court, the name and signature of the issuing judicial officer, and the date of issuance;

(2) if the warrant is addressed to a specific officer, the name of that officer, otherwise, the classifications of officers to whom the warrant is addressed;

(3) a designation of the premises, vehicles, objects, or persons to be searched, sufficient for certainty of identification;

(4) a description of the property whose seizure is the object of the warrant;

(5) a direction that the warrant be executed during the hours of daylight or, where the judicial officers has found cause therefor, including one of the grounds set forth in section 23-522(c) (1), an authorization for execution at any time of day or night; and

(6) a direction that the warrant and an inventory of any property seized pursuant thereto be returned to the court on the next court day after its execution.

(As amended Oct. 26, 1974, Pub. L. 93-481, § 4(b), 88 Stat. 1455.)

AMENDMENT

1974—Act Oct. 26, 1974, Pub. L. 93-481, amended subsec. (f) by inserting "and" at the end of par. (5); by striking out par. (6) relating to "no knock" entry and search; and redesignating par. (7) as par. (6).

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Construction

General provision relating to search warrants found in the District of Columbia Code and then incorporated in similar form into the new Superior Court Rules was intended to be a counterpart to comparable Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure. L. Gooding v. United States (1974, 94 S.Ct. 1780, 416 U.S. 430; aff'g 477 F.2d 428, 155 U.S. App. D.C. 359).

Federal offenses

Operative facts surrounding search for narcotics indicated that standards for issuance of search warrant were governed by federal statute rather than local laws of District of Columbia, where, inter alia, a United States attorney filed warrant application with a federal magistrate, alleging violations of United States Code for which defendant was later indicted, and neither application nor supporting affidavits contained any mention of local narcotics laws; failure of Congress to include in federal statute a special provision authorizing District of Columbia police officers to obtain search warrants for investigating federal offenses could not be taken as a deliberate exclusion in view of the overall statutory framework. L. Gooding v. United States (1974, 94 S. Ct. 1780, 416 U.S. 430; aff'g 477 F.2d 428, 155 U.S. App. D.C. 259).

Nighttime searches

Federal statute providing that a search warrant relating to offenses involving controlled substances may be served at any time of day or night if a judge or United States Magistrate is satisfied that probable cause exists for warrant and for its service at such time provides relevant tests by which to judge validity of search warrants executed at nighttime in connection with violations of federal narcotics laws, rather than District of Columbia statutes or Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure. United States v. L. Gooding (1973, 477 F. 2d 428, 155 U.S. App. D.C. 259, rev'g 328 F. Supp. 1005; aff'd 94 S. Ct. 1780, 416 U.S. 430).

Scope of warrant

Where search warrant was issued for apartment on affidavit which recited that within preceding two weeks information had come to police from reliable informant that narcotics were being sold in apartment and that agent had purchased narcotics at apartment, and officers after announcing their purpose heard noise followed by sound of window breaking and upon entry found party attempting to escape through window, search of purse which belonged to defendant who was in apartment and which was sitting on table was proper. United States v. G. E. Johnson (1973, 475 F. 2d 977, 154 U.S. App. D.C. 393).

Where search warrant authorized officers to search entire apartment for narcotics, apartment visitor's purse which was sitting on table could properly be searched in pursuit of items for which warrant had issued. Id.

Sufficiency of warrant

Warrant for search of premises at designated street address was sufficient to include back room of shop which had formerly had separate entrance on another street and which could be entered only through the apparel shop address. E. A. Short v. District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1973, 300 A. 2d 450).

§ 23-522. Applications for search warrants

(c) The application may also contain a request that the search warrant be made executable at any hour of the day or night upon the ground that there is probable cause to believe that (1) it cannot be executed during the hours of daylight, (2) the property sought is likely to be removed or destroyed if not seized forthwith, or (3) the property sought is not likely to be found except at certain times or in certain circumstances. Any request made pursuant to this subsection must be accompanied and supported by allegations of fact supporting such request. (As amended Oct. 26, 1974, Pub. L. 93-481, § 4(c), 88 Stat. 1455.)

AMENDMENT

1974—Oct. 26, 1974, Pub. L. 93-481, amended subsec. (c) generally, thereby eliminating "no knock" entry and search provisions formerly contained in par. (2) of subsec. (c).

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Affidavit—Sufficiency

Affidavit, which stated that attesting officer watched front door of apartment building, a multistoried structure with many units, after giving informant money to purchase narcotics from defendant rather than watching defendant's door does not, on theory that officer could not attest to informant's entry into defendant's apartment, thereby render search warrant based on such affidavit invalid. J. T. Jones v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 336 A.2d 535; cert. denied 96 S. Ct. 427, 423 U.S. 997).

There was no need to demonstrate, in affidavit in support of a search warrant, reliability of informant who merely aided in initial contact with person from whom agent purchased heroin, where thereafter investigation proceeded independently, and since affidavit contained observations of agent accompanying such person to address respect a purchase of heroin and presence of heroin in premises, affidavit reflected sufficient probable cause to issue search warrant. J. B. N. Tyler v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 298 A. 2d 224).

Alleged fact that there was no evidence to show that person from whom undercover agent purchased heroin obtained the heroin from within defendant's residence because such person was not searched by undercover agent prior to his entry did not render affidavit in support of search warrant inadequate, where affidavit demonstrated that agent's covert status was unknown to person from whom he purchased the heroin and therefore he was in no position to search such person without compromising his status, and there was no reason to assume false dealings. Id.

Nighttime searches

Federal statute providing that a search warrant relating to offenses involving controlled substances may be served at any time of day or night if a judge or United States Magistrate is satisfied that probable cause exists for warrant and for its service at such time provides relevant tests by which to judge validity of search warrants executed at nighttime in connection with violations of federal narcotics laws, rather than District of Columbia statutes or Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure. *United States v. Probable cause

In determining whether probable cause exists for magistrate to issue search warrant, so long as magistrate is sufficiently informed of underlying circumstances which justify belief in informer's reliability and underlying circumstances upon which informer concluded that contraband was where he claimed it was, informer's allegations require no independent corroboration. J. T. Jones v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 336 A.2d 535; cert. denied 96 S. Ct. 427, 423 U.S. 997).

§ 23-523. Time of execution of search warrants

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Construction

General provision relating to search warrants found in the District of Columbia Code and then incorporated in similar form into the new Superior Court Rules was intended to be a counterpart to comparable Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure. L. Gooding v. United States (1974, 94 S.Ct. 1780, 416 U.S. 430; aff'g 477 F.2d 428, 155 U.S. App. D.C. 259).

Delay

Where warrant authorized search of delicatessen within ten days of date of issuance of warrant for gambling paraphernalia, fact that police permitted eight days to elapse before executing the warrant after receiving tip from informant that people were inside that had numbers slips on them did not render search unlawful. United States v. J. R. Graves et ano. (D.C. App. 1974, 315 A. 2d 559).

Execution at night

Federal statute providing that a search warrant relating to offenses involving controlled substances may be served at any time of day or night if a judge or United States Magistrate is satisfied that probable cause exists for warrant and for its service at such time provides relevant tests by which to judge validity of search warrants executed at nighttime in connection with violations of federal narcotics laws, rather than District of Columbia statutes or Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure. *United States v. § 23-524. Execution of search warrants

(a) An officer executing a warrant directing a search of a dwelling house or other building or a vehicle shall execute such warrant in accordance with section 3109 of title 18, United States Code.

* * * * *

(As amended Oct. 26, 1974, Pub. L. 93-481, § 4(d), 88 Stat. 1456.)

AMENDMENT

1974—Act Oct. 26, 1974, Pub. L. 93-481, amended subsec. (a) by substituting "section 3109 of title 18, United States Code" for "section 23-591".

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Motion to suppress evidence

Trial court's grant of suppression motion insofar as it related to property not covered by warrant, while deferring decision on question of validity of warrant on ground that criminal prosecution had not yet been instituted, was improper; court should have determined all of motion. United States v. G. A. Farmer (D.C. App. 1972, 297 A. 2d 783).

Search and seizure

Officers executing warrant for search of delicatessen for gambling paraphernalia, having received tip from informant that people were inside that had numbers slips on them, had sufficient grounds to search the five or six persons on the premises when the warrant was executed. United States v. J. R. Graves et ano. (D.C. App. 1974, 315 A.2d 559).

Where on executing warrant authorizing search of after-hours club or bar for a "gaming table and other related gambling paraphernalia," police officers knocked twice and announced they were police officers with a search warrant, after hearing someone run away from the door, officers waited approximately 30 seconds and then forced door open and from previous observations police had probable cause to believe that extensive gambling was being carried on, police had sufficient grounds to search the individuals present and tinfoil packet found on in-depth search of an occupant was properly seized and would be admissible in prosecution for possession of heroin; officers had reasonable cause to believe that occupants possessed, concealed and were about to remove or destroy evidence for which they had a search warrant. United States v. W. Miller (D.C. App. 1972, 298 A. 2d 34).

SUBCHAPTER III.—WIRE INTERCEPTION AND INTERCEPTION OF ORAL COMMUNICATIONS

§ 23-543. Possession, sale, distribution, manufacture, assembly, and advertising of wire or oral communication intercepting devices prohibited

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Plea of guilty

Where prosecution in its opening statement had outlined overwhelming case against defendants, charged with burglary of political party headquarters and illegal electronic surveillance, pleas were accepted only after extraordinarily elaborate procedure, stretching over four days, conducted largely in camera, and involving two competent attorneys, and neither counsel, prosecutor, nor judge exerted the slightest pressure on defendants to induce them to plead guilty, withdrawal of pleas would substantially prejudice legitimate prosecution interests, defendants were granted "use immunity" so that they might testify before grand jury and congressional committees and, at time of plea, defendants had denied employment by government intelligence agencies, defendants would not be entitled, eight months after pleading guilty, to withdraw their pleas because they honestly, though mistakenly, believed that "national security" considerations required their silence. United States v. B. L. Barker (1975, 514 F.2d 208, 168 U.S. App. D.C. 312; cert. denied 95 S. Ct. 2420, 421 U.S. 1013).

§ 23-544. Confiscation of wire or oral communication intercepting devices

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

§ 23-547. Procedure for authorization or approval of interception of wire or oral communications

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Construction

This section requiring that wiretap order specify the identity of person, if known, whose communications are to be intercepted does not impose any broader obligation on Government to identify "known" individuals in its wiretap applications than that imposed by provision specifying that applications for wiretap order shall include the identity of the person, if known, who committed, is committing, or is about to commit the offense and whose communications are to be intercepted. United States v. A. R. Moore, Jr. (1975, 513 F.2d 485, 168 U.S. App. D.C. 227).

Disclosure of prior applications

Government attorneys who sought authorization for wiretaps of certain individuals in connection with investigation of gambling activities were required to disclose to court fact that prior authorization for interception of communications of one of the persons under investigation had been granted, even though the prior authorization had been in connection with an unrelated narcotics investigation. United States v. J. A. Bellosi (1974, 501 F. 2d 833, 163 U.S. App. D.C. 273).

Identification of "known" person

Where Government investigators had probable cause to believe that defendant was a principal involved in gambling offenses under investigation, and also had probable cause to believe defendant would be overheard in conversations transpiring between telephones involved, defendant was a person "known" to be committing criminal offenses within mandate of this section that application for wiretap shall include identity of person, if known, who committed, is committing, or is about to commit offense and whose communications are to be intercepted. United States v. A. R. Moore, Jr. (1975, 513 F.2d 485, 168 U.S. App. D.C. 227).

Even though Government investigators had codefendant's full name and address as well as confidential source's information concerning gambling activities of an individual having same first name as codefendant, information available to Government investigators at time of wiretap application and order was insufficient to establish probable cause to believe defendant was implicated in the gambling offenses being investigated and was likely to be intercepted over the target telephones. Id.

§ 23-551. Procedure for disclosure and suppression of intercepted wire or oral communications

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Standing

All persons whose telephone conversations were intercepted pursuant to wiretap which was authorized on basis of application which failed to disclose that one of the persons under investigation had previously been the subject of a wiretap had standing to seek suppression of the intercepted communication. United States v. J. A. Bellosi (1974, 501 F. 2d 833, 163 U.S. App. D.C. 273).

Suppression

Communications which were intercepted pursuant to wiretap which was authorized on basis of application which failed to disclose previous wiretap authorization directed against one of the individuals under investigation were "unlawfully intercepted" within meaning of statute which provides for suppression of communications which are unlawfully intercepted. United States v. J. A. Bellosi (1974, 501 F. 2d 833, 163 U.S. App. D.C. 273).

§ 23-553. Authorization for disclosure and use of intercepted wire or oral communications

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Disclosure without court order

Where gambling paraphernalia seized pursuant to search and arrest warrants would have been lawfully seized even if metropolitan police department officers' disclosure of surveillance data to FBI had been violative of statute requiring officer who intercepts communications relating to offenses other than those specified in order of authorization to make application to a judge for disclosure and use, and this evidence was sufficient to sustain defendant's conviction, any noncompliance with such statute was harmless error. United States v. A. R. Moore, Jr. (1975, 513 F.2d 485, 168 U.S. App. D.C. 227).

Where wiretap applications and orders concerned gambling offenses for which the statute permitted court-authorized installation of electronic surveillance equipment, and evidence was intercepted which not only related to such offenses but also established probable cause to believe federal gambling offenses were being committed, metropolitan police department officers' disclosure of such evidence to FBI was not within contemplation of statute requiring officer who intercepts communications relating to offenses other than those specified in order of authorization to make application to a judge for disclosure and use. Id.

SUBCHAPTER IV.—ARREST WARRANT AND SUMMONS

SUBCHAPTER REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This subchapter is referred to in section 23-501.

§ 23-561. Issuance, form, and contents

(b) (1) An arrest warrant shall be signed by the judicial officer and shall state or contain the name of the issuing court, the date of issuance of the warrant, a description of the offense charged, and the name of the person to be arrested or, if his name is unknown, any name or description by which he can be identified with reasonable certainty. It shall command that the person be arrested and brought before the issuing court or officer.

(As amended Oct. 26, 1974, Pub. L. 93-481, § 4(e), 88 Stat. 1456.)

AMENDMENT

1974—Act Oct. 26, 1974, Pub. L. 93-481, repealed the last sentence of subsec. (b) (1) which read: "If the complaint establishes probable cause to believe that one of the conditions set out in subparagraphs (A) through (D) of section 23-591(c) (2) is likely to exist at the time and place at which such warrant is to be executed, the warrant may contain an authorization that it be executed as provided in section 23-591."

§ 23-562. Execution and return

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Processing arrestees—Unnecessary delay

Right of an arrestee to post collateral should be read in conjunction with the requirement that a person arrested with or without warrant be taken before a court or magistrate without unnecessary delay; booking and collateral release of a detainee should proceed without any unnecessary delays. Washington Mobilization Committee et al. v. M. J. Cullinane et al. (1975, 400 F. Supp. 186).

Mere fact that persons who were arrested during mass arrests attendant to demonstration spent hours in detention, often in inconvenient circumstances, before being processed and released does not, of itself, compel the conclusion that the police were unnecessarily dilatory; police will not be required to adhere to a two-hour time limit on collateral release in the future. Id.

Police department's policy of not allowing attorneys or representatives of organizations to post collateral for detainees who had been arrested during demonstrations but whom the attorneys could not identify in advance was an unnecessary delay in effectuating the release of the arrestees. Id.

Right to counsel

Person does not have the right to counsel at the time of booking or collateral release; those events are not interrogative stages of the criminal process but merely administrative prerequisite. Washington Mobilization Committee et al. v. M. J. Cullinane et al. (1975, 400 F. Supp. 186).

SUBCHAPTER V.—ARREST WITHOUT WARRANT

§ 23-581. Arrests without warrant by law enforcement officers

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Arrest records—Expungement

Class-wide injunctive relief ordering police department to expunge records of persons who had been arrested during mass demonstrations without probable cause is inappropriate; persons arrested should present request for expungement of their records to the police department, which should not continue to assert that it is barred by statute from expunging arrest records and that amplification is the sole remedy. Washington Mobilization Committee et al. v. M. J. Cullinane et al. (1975, 400 F. Supp. 186).

On failure of showing of probable cause for arrests, in action to declare certain acts with respect to arrests and prosecutions unconstitutional and to enjoin further prosecutions in connection with disorderly conduct type offenses related to antiwar demonstrations in District of Columbia during week of May 3, 1971, defendant officials were ordered to convey to counsel for plaintiffs for destruction all specified records that would in any way relate, inform or reflect that any member of class had been arrested or charged with an offense from and including May 3 through May 6, 1971, and it was ordered that seizures of members of class from and including May 3, 1971, through May 6, 1971, would be deemed to have been "detentions" rather than "arrests." N. Sullivan et al. v. C. F. Murphy et al. (1974, 380 F. Supp. 867).

Liability for improper arrest

District of Columbia police inspector is individually liable for unlawful and unreasonable arrests of members of religious group, who were conducting peaceful prayer vigil near White House, where inspector had established police lines due to claimed danger of property damage and personal injury created by influx of "outsiders" into the vigil lines, but there was no evidence to suggest possibility of violence or property damage at scene of the vigil other than simple fact that "outsiders" who joined vigil had same appearance as persons who were present at monument grounds when "unknown" persons destroyed property. L. Tatum et al. v. R. C. B. Morton et al. (1974, 402 F. Supp. 719).

District of Columbia under common-law theory of respondent superior, is liable for actions of police inspector who was operating within scope of his duties as senior police officer at scene of unlawful arrests of members of religious group who were conducting peaceful prayer vigil near White House. Id.

Mass arrests

Police department which, in the past, had violated constitutional rights of persons arrested during mass arrests attendant to demonstrations is required to formulate a comprehensive written plan clearly stating the policies and procedures to be followed by the department in mass demonstrations and to clearly delineate the duties of officers involved. Washington Mobilization Committee et al. v. M. J. Cullinane et al. (1975, 400 F. Supp. 186).

Miranda warnings

Failure of police officers to advise persons being arrested as part of mass arrest made at time of demonstration of the specific charges being made against them and to give the arrestees their Miranda warnings constitutes a denial of due process. Washington Mobilization Committee et al. v. M. J. Cullinane et al. (1975, 400 F. Supp. 186).

Mode of arrest

Whether or not police officer who made warrantless arrest verbally characterized the particular crime for which he made his arrest at the time of making same was immaterial, since the description given by officer did not go to the question of probable cause and only question was whether officer had reasonable ground to believe a felony had been committed. J. A. Bond v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 310 A.2d 221).

Probable cause

Where police officer looked into hotel room after door was opened and saw people injecting some substance into themselves, officer had probable cause to believe that individuals inside were injecting narcotics, thereby violating the law, and he had both right and duty to seize contraband and place individuals under arrest. R. E. Matthews v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 335 A.2d 251).

Where informant supplied police officer with detailed information relating to possession of marijuana by defendant and every aspect of such information, including place, time, and physical appearance, was checked and verified by police officer, police officer had probable cause for arrest. United States v. R. D. Malcolm (D.C. App. 1975, 331 A.2d 329).

Police officer who had interviewed alleged assault victim and concluded that his complaint, to the effect that accused had pointed a gun at him and threatened to kill him, was genuine, had probable cause to believe that an armed assault had taken place and that accused had committed it, and in light of the exigent nature of the circumstances had probable cause to arrest accused without an arrest warrant. United States v. H. Simpson (D.C. App. 1975, 330 A.2d 756).

Even though Florida police officers relied principally on offenses committed in District of Columbia in arresting defendant and stated that fact to him at time of arrest, where Florida officers also believed that defendant's possession and negotiation in Florida of money orders stolen in District of Columbia constituted violations of Florida law, police officers had probable cause to arrest defendant without a warrant. United States v. J. M. Joyner (1974, 492 F.2d 655, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 389).

Where defendant on police officer's request, after fourth encounter with defendant and codefendant displayed an automobile radio he was carrying and codefendant denied knowing defendant, which was highly improbable on basis of officer's prior observations indicating that codefendant was acting some how as a lookout, officer was possessed of sufficient facts and circumstances warranting belief that offense had been committed and justifying arrest, even though officer had received no report of crime of automobile radio theft. J. E. Wray v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 315 A.2d 843).

The Constitution does not permit arrest at the scene of a demonstration, without probable cause at the time of the arrest, in the hope that evidence uncovered during the process of detention may serve as basis for prosecuting at least some of those arrested. N. Sullivan et al. v. C. F. Murphy, Corporation Counsel, et al. (1973, 478 F.2d 938, 156 U.S. App. D.C. 28; cert. denied 94 S. Ct. 162, 414 U.S. 880).

When the public authorities take action that must stand or fall on basis of an underlying arrest and when the validity of that arrest is questioned in an appropriate proceeding, the burden of establishing probable cause rests entirely upon the government. Id.

Where large numbers of persons were arrested during May, 1971, civil disorders, many of arrests were made without probable cause, arrestees were not given judicial hearing on probable cause, and possibility existed that many of the persons who obtained their release by posting bond were misled by erroneous information as to nature and consequences of posting bail and circumstances under which the bond could be recovered, federal court had jurisdiction to invalidate the forfeitures of the bonds. Id.

Where officer observed accused looking or searching behind desk in room of office building and observed him depart as soon as officer's presence became known and accused answered "Nothing" when officer addressed defendant outside building and asked him what he had been doing in the office, officer had probable cause to arrest accused and fruits of larcenies seized from accused's person incident to the arrest were admissible. W. Arrington v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 311 A.2d 838).

Officer who observed defendant, a high school student outside school building, trying to stuff some money into envelope similar to those used in other narcotics transactions at the school and who saw a known narcotics addict approach defendant who started to run when officer reached for the envelope and tore a portion of the envelope from defendant's hand did not have probable cause to arrest defendant at the moment the envelope was seized, and heroin found in the envelope should have been suppressed. F. L. Waters v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 311 A. 2d 835).

Police officers who were admitted to defendant's apartment with defendant's consent during course of investigation of death of five-year-old girl and who observed scratches on defendant's face, presence of candy, general disarray of room, and indications of recent bathing by defendant had probable cause for arrest. United States v. W. Sheard (1972, 473 F. 2d 139, 154 U.S. App. D.C. 9; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 2784, 412 U.S. 943).

Where defendant, who had been questioned by officer on another matter, was still in view, three blocks away, when officer, who had been told that defendant had syringe under wig, called for scout car and stopped defendant and asked if she was wearing a wig, defendant had not left officer's presence in such a way as to make inoperative statute permitting arrest without a warrant if officer has probable cause to believe person has committed or is committing an offense in his presence. United States v. S. P. Oliver (D.C. App. 1972, 297 A. 2d 778).

Where police officer was told by another that defendant, whom officer had questioned, had a syringe under wig, officer's momentary stopping of defendant, inquiry about wig, and request to defendant to remove her hat were reasonable, and defendant's denial of wearing a wig and its obvious presence furnished independent observation and corroboration which gave rise to a reasonable basis to arrest defendant and seize contents of her hand, which she had removed from beneath wig and which contained syringe and a bag of methadone, and to seize tinfoil pack, which apparently contained heroin, from starch box from which defendant began to eat at police station. Id.

Processing arrestees—Facilities and care

Although problems involving overcrowded cells and inadequate sanitary facilities in jails where persons arrested during mass arrests made at time of demonstrations were kept might have been obviated by better planning, the conditions do not appear to be of sufficient gravity to be deemed a deprivation of a constitutional right. Washington Mobilization Committee et al. v. M. J. Cullinane et al. (1975, 400 F. Supp. 186).

Failure of police officers to give adequate medical attention to persons who were taken into custody during mass arrests at time of demonstrations amounts to deprivation of constitutional rights. Id.

— General

Fingerprinting and photographing of persons arrested in mass demonstrations is reasonable and appropriate to the task of processing arrestees. Washington Mobilization Committee et al. v. M. J. Cullinane et al. (1975, 400 F. Supp. 186).

Search and seizure

Police, who had learned of armed assault committed by accused, and, who, before entering accused's apartment, heard close of squeaky door, were entitled to make an arrest and effect a limited search for weapons incident thereto, for their own safety, and .38 revolver found in stove which was readily accessible to the three people in the room was admissible against the accused, subsequently identified by the victim, even though the accused was a functional cripple and was not arrested until the pistol had been seized. United States v. H. Simpson (D.C. App. 1975, 330 A.2d 756).

Where officer had probable cause to arrest defendant for operating a motor vehicle after revocation of his operator's permit and effected a full custody arrest, search of defendant's person without search warrant, inspection of crumpled cigarette package found on defendant's person and seizure of heroin capsules found in the package were permissible even though officer did not indicate any subjective fear of defendant and did not suspect that defendant was armed. United States v. W. Robinson, Jr. (1973, 94 S.Ct. 467, 414 U.S. 218; rev'g 471 F. 2d 1082, 153 U.S. App. D.C. 114).

Following arrest of defendant under warrant for operating motor vehicle after revocation of operator's permit, police officer was authorized to conduct "full field search" of defendant, remove envelope from pocket inside coat and open it to determine if it contained narcotics. United States v. K. C. Simmons (D.C. App. 1973, 302 A. 2d 728).

Where defendant was arrested for the petty offense of driving with a learner's permit while unaccompanied by a licensed driver and was frisked at scene and no weapons were found, arresting officer who then took defendant to the station and instead of informing defendant, who had $171 cash in his pockets, of his right to post $50 collateral, as prescribed for the petty offense, and leave the precinct station, required defendant as a booking inventory procedure to empty his pockets, conducted an unreasonable search rendering narcotics seized from pocket inadmissible. United States v. H. E. Mills (1972, 472 F. 2d 1231, 153 U.S. App. D.C. 156).

Informing person arrested for petty offense of his option to post collateral and giving him an opportunity to exercise that option is a necessary condition to a thorough and complete search that is conducted only as incident to needs of stationhouse detention. Id.

When person is charged with a collateral-type petty offense under which he rightfully has opportunity to post collateral and avoid further detention and there is no probable cause to believe that he committed a more serious crime, police may not engage in an inventory search of offender or an equivalent direction that he empty his pockets and seek to support it on ground of holding him in further confinement, unless at a minimum he was notified of his opportunity to post collateral and refused or was unable to do so. Id.

Absent "special circumstances," a police officer has no right to search either the person or the vehicle incident to a lawful arrest for violation of a mere motor vehicle regulation. United States v. W. Robinson, Jr. (1972, 471 F. 2d 1082, 153 U.S. App. D.C. 114; rev'd 94 S. Ct. 467, 414 U.S. 218).

Arresting officers did not have reasonable grounds to search a passenger in back seat of an automobile stopped during "rush hour" for speeding even if after automobile stopped they observed passenger move his right arm and shoulder as if to hide something or put something away, and a gun and heroin found in such search should have been suppressed pursuant to defendant's motions. United States v. L. N. Page (D.C. App. 1972, 298 A. 2d 233).

Validity of arrest

Where officer had victim point out suspects, officer took victim to office of prosecutor for protection and upon returning was unable to find defendant and another and then went to motel at which defendant was reportedly staying and arrested defendant and his companion as they were about to leave the city, arrest without a warrant, effectuated by unconsented to entry into motel room, for not only violation of the three-card monte statute but grand larceny was valid and paraphernalia seized as incident to arrest were admissible. J. A. Bond v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 310 A. 2d 221).

SUBCHAPTER VI.—AUTHORITY TO BREAK AND ENTER UNDER CERTAIN CONDITIONS

REPEAL OF SUBCHAPTER

Section 4(a) of Act Oct. 26, 1974, Pub. L. 93-481, 88 Stat. 1455, as amended Jan. 3, 1975, Pub. L. 93-635, § 16, 88 Stat. 2178, provided in part that subchapter VI of chapter 5 of title 23 of the District of Columbia Code is repealed.

Section, Act July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 630, related to authority to break and enter under certain conditions.

NOTES TO DECISIONS UNDER PRIOR LAW

Announcement of identity

Where experienced police officer, familiar with narcotics and extent of narcotics abuse at hotel, knocked on door of hotel room of woman who was known to him, male voice asked who was there and officer responded "police", door was opened and officer saw group of people in process of injecting presumed narcotics, officer was familiar with layout of room and knew that it contained a sink which would have permitted easy disposal of narcotics, and officer was in uniform and could be certain that doorman and any others who saw him would recognize him as police officer, any further announcement by officer before entering would have been a useless gesture, and thus he was not required to state his identity and purpose before entering. R. E. Matthews v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 335 A.2d 251).

Breaking and entering

Where following execution of search warrant, several police officers went to defendant's apartment, knocked on defendant's door, policewoman in response to question "Who is it?" said "Sheryl. Is John there?", defendant then opened door several inches, police officer pushed it open rest of way and defendant stepped aside and all entered to execute warrant, and officer who led the way announced "Police officers; search warrant," defendant, by stepping away from door on seeing police permitted entry and thus police did not break and enter apartment in violation of this section by illegally announcing their identity and purpose as or after they entered rather than before. J. T. Jones v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 336 A.2d 535; cert. denied 96 S. Ct. 427, 423 U.S. 997).

Where police officer's entrance into hotel room was gained by overcoming some momentary resistance from doorman, notwithstanding fact that officer had responded "police" when asked who was at the door, the entry constitutes a "breaking" within meaning of this section which requires that breaking and entry shall not be made until after police officer makes announcement of his identity and purpose. R. E. Matthews v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 335 A.2d 251).

Probable cause

Where before officers entered hotel room officers knew (1) that occupants of room appeared to be on verge of injecting narcotics, (2) that at least one of them was aware of nearby police presence, (3) that there was a sink in room, and (4) that door had been braced shut with a board, and officers had made numerous prior narcotics arrests at hotel, officers had probable cause to believe that prior announcement would have been useless gesture and likely to have resulted in destruction of evidence, and no-knock entry was lawful. H. L. Borum v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 318 A.2d 590).

Chapter 7.—EXTRADITION AND FUGITIVES FROM JUSTICE

CHAPTER REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This chapter is referred to in section 11-2601.

§ 23-704. Extradition

CROSS REFERENCE

Representation of indigents, see § 11-2601.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Evidence

Deficient showing of substantial charge in papers of demanding state can be supplemented by testimony of person possessing necessary information in order to make sufficient showing. R. Tucker v. Commonwealth of Virginia (D.C. App. 1973, 308 A.2d 783).

Evidence at extradition hearing, including testimony of affiant as to basis for Virginia warrant, was sufficient to establish probable cause to support rendition. Id.

Chapter 11.—PROFESSIONAL BONDSMEN

§ 23-1110. Designation of official to take bail or collateral when court is not in session; issuance of citations

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Processing arrestees—Unnecessary delay

Right of an arrestee to post collateral should be read in conjunction with the requirement that a person arrested with or without warrant be taken before a court or magistrate without unnecessary delay; booking and collateral release of a detainee should proceed without any unnecessary delays. Washington Mobilization Com- mittee et al. v. M. J. Cullinane et al. (1975, 400 F. Supp. 186).

Police department's policy of not allowing attorneys or representatives of organizations to post collateral for detainees who had been arrested during demonstrations but whom the attorneys could not identify in advance was an unnecessary delay in effectuating the release of the arrestees. Id.

Right to counsel

Person does not have the right to counsel at the time of booking or collateral release; those events are not interrogative stages of the criminal process but merely administrative prerequisite. Washington Mobilization Committee et al. v. M. J. Cullinane et al. (1975, 400 F. Supp. 186).

Search and seizure

The official who is called upon to make the determinations involved in decision on incarceration—the arrangements for bail, the possibility of a citation issued at the stationhouse—must make that decision before it may be used to justify an intrusion on privacy as one permissible under the Fourth Amendment; the mere possibility that such a search might later be justified cannot serve to eliminate accused's rights under the Fourth Amendment at time of arrest. United States v. W. Robinson, Jr. (1972, 471 F.2d 1082, 153 U.S. App. D.C. 114; rev'd 94 S. Ct. 467, 414 U.S. 218).

Stationhouse clerks

Ordinarily a person arrested for an offense for which he may post bond or collateral is brought immediately to the Superior Court for that purpose, and if Superior Court is not in session, the stationhouse clerks who have the function of "booking" offenders serve also as acting clerks of the Superior Court and are therefore authorized to accept collateral or bond, but such stationhouse clerks have no discretion to either increase or decrease the amount of bond or collateral required by court rules. United States v. W. Robinson, Jr. (1972, 471 F.2d 1082, 153 U.S. App. D.C. 114; rev'd on other grounds 94 S. Ct. 467, 414 U.S. 218).

Chapter 13.—BAIL AGENCY AND PRETRIAL DETENTION

SUBCHAPTER I.—DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA BAIL AGENCY

§ 23-1303. Interviews with detainees; investigations and reports; information as confidential; consideration and use of reports in making bail determinations

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Impeachment, use of information for

Defendant was properly impeached by use of prior inconsistent statement given by him to representative of District of Columbia Bail Agency in the prosecution of offense for which the bail agency statement was given. J. Herbert, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 340 A.2d 802).

Stipulation as to impeachment testimony to be offered by employee of District of Columbia Bail Agency as to certain statements made to him by defendant after arrest was binding on defendant, notwithstanding contention that this section prohibits use of any information given Bail Agency for purpose of impeachment at trial. L. A. Cowan v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 331 A.2d 323).

Pretrial detention reports

Failure of Government to comply with rule requiring attorney for Government to make biweekly report to court listing each defendant held pending trial for period in excess of ten days and to state reasons why such defendants were still being held in custody cancelled any negative effect that defendants' failure to assert right to speedy trial formally until day of trial might have had on validity of the speedy trial claim. United States v. E. L. Cooper (1974, 504 F.2d 260, 164 U.S. App. D.C. 191).

Record on appeal

Record on appeal from denial of motion to withdraw guilty pleas, raising serious unanswered questions about whether defendant's decision to plead was materially affected by, inter alia, defense counsel's failure to seek an independent mental examination of defendant, or to call the psychiatrist to testify or the influence of ex parte communications between U.S. Attorney and examining staff, or psychiatrists' failure to file promptly his letters or court's failure to inquire into circumstances surrounding the examination was inadequate for proper consideration of district court's reasons for denying the motion. United States v. G. M. Morgan (1973, 482 F.2d 786, 157 U.S. App. D.C. 197).

§ 23-1307. Annual reports to executive committee, Congress, and Commissioner

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

SUBCHAPTER II.—RELEASE AND PRETRIAL DETENTION

§ 23-1321. Release in noncapital cases prior to trial

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Bail—Excessive

Although accused charged with grand larceny and released on personal recognizance bond allegedly threatened a witness and was arrested on charge of obstructing justice, setting of surety bond of $5,000 is not justified on theory that, in view of the serious nature of the pending charges, amounting to an assault on integrity of judicial system, and the unemployment of accused, accused was unreliable and unlikely to abide by nonfinancial conditions of release; thus case must be remanded for proceedings on issue of pretrial detention or appropriate conditions of release. H. D. Jones v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 347 A.2d 399).

Under Bail Reform Act of 1966, and under District of Columbia local bail provisions, a money bond may not be used to assure detention. B. F. Villines v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 312 A.2d 304).

Conditions of release

Where trial court set secured money bonds of $10,000 each for two defendants charged with murder during perpetration of robbery, but record did not contain full information concerning nature and circumstances of offense and why other conditions of release would not be suitable, proceedings on appeal after defendants' motions for review of bond had been overruled would be remanded for supplementation of record by complete statement by trial court on those matters or, if trial court deemed it appropriate, entry of new orders respecting pretrial bail. D.C. Bouknight et ano. v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 305 A.2d 524).

Custodial release

Particularly when requested by accused, some form of third-party custody should be explored and rationally imposed or rejected before a monetary bond is selected. H. D. Jones v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 347 A.2d 399).

Setting of third-party custody and intensity thereof as condition of pretrial release need not immediately result in release because custodian obtained, as well as degree of supervision undertaken, must be acceptable to court before release is permitted. Id.

§ 23-1322. Detention prior to trial

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Bail

Pretrial order setting $10,000 bail for release of accused, who was charged with robbery and weapon assault in case of considerable notoriety and who exhibited self-oriented pattern of life with little or no recognition of social responsibility, and rejecting accused's plan to be placed in multiparty, 24-hour custody of his father, mother and grandmother would be affirmed. T. Marshall v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 308 A.2d 766).

— Excessive

Although accused charged with grand larceny and released on personal recognizance bond allegedly threatened a witness and was arrested on charge of obstructing justice, setting of surety bond of $5,000 is not justified on theory that, in view of the serious nature of the pending charges, amounting to an assault on integrity of judicial system, and the unemployment of accused, accused was unreliable and unlikely to abide by nonfinancial conditions of release; thus case must be remanded for proceedings on issue of pretrial detention or appropriate conditions of release. H. D. Jones v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 347 A.2d 399).

Under Bail Reform Act of 1966, and under District of Columbia local bail provisions, a money bond may not be used to assure detention. B. F. Villines v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 312 A.2d 304).

Constitutionality

As applied after showing that defendant had threatened witnesses, pretrial detention statute was not unconstitutional as resulting in denial of defendant's right to bail prior to trial. T. E. Blunt v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 322 A.2d 579).

Pretrial detention statute was not unconstitutional as denying due process by abridging presumption of innocence. Id.

Pretrial detention statute provided procedure for detention hearings which satisfied requirements of fundamental fairness and did not deprive defendant of due process by denying him right to cross-examine witnesses who alleged that he had threatened them. Id.

Pretrial detention statute did not unconstitutionally deny defendant due process of law by establishing "clear and convincing" evidence as standard of proof in detention hearings rather than "reasonable doubt" standard. Id.

Construction

Pretrial detention statute does not require that government make motion for pretrial detention as soon as grounds therefor become apparent or be thereafter foreclosed from making such motion. T. E. Blunt v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 322 A.2d 579).

Evidence—Sufficiency

Showing of defendant's lengthy criminal record spanning 22 years, highly assaultive nature of defendant's past offenses and gravity of pending charge of assault with deadly weapon, together with failure of defense to present any suitable structured program of release, supported finding that no condition or combination of conditions of release would reasonably assure witness' safety and that defendant should therefore be committed to pretrial detention. T. E. Blunt v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 322 A.2d 579).

Findings—Sufficiency

Even though defendant contested complaining witness' version of events which led to defendant's arrest for obstructing justice, had trial court inquired into that charge and concluded that there was clear and convincing evidence that defendant was guilty of obstruction of justice, his detention would have been warranted pursuant to pretrial detention provisions of this section. H. D. Jones v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 347 A.2d 399).

Finding by trial judge that defendant was a person described in pretrial detention statute was sufficient to permit Court of Appeals to determine that court had found allegations that defendant threatened government witnesses to be true by clear and convincing evidence. T. E. Blunt v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 322 A.2d 579).

Identification

If Government's case turns upon testimony of identification witness, and defense counsel forecasts irreparable suggestivity if witness appears at preliminary hearing, his remedy lies in a motion for a lineup order, to assure that identification witness will first view the suspect at a lineup, rather than in the magistrate's hearing room; the magistrate or judge should grant this motion, unless cause to the contrary is shown, since a lineup conducted by police, with attendance of defense counsel, assures or at least promotes reliability of identification and is therefore in interest of justice. United States v. E. Smith (1972, 473 F.2d 1148, 154 U.S. App. D.C. 111).

Mootness

Where subsequent to time amended complaint was filed challenging constitutionality of preventive detention provisions of District of Columbia Court Reform and Criminal Procedure Act by plaintiff who had been incarcerated under such provisions, the District of Columbia Court of Appeals vacated the order of the Superior Court under which plaintiff had been detained, and as result of proceedings on remand a parole violation warrant was executed against plaintiff who was being detained pending trial as a parole violator, the complaint would be dismissed as moot as against contention that "collateral consequences" attached to original determination of superior court that plaintiff should be preventively detained an as against contention that in view of short term nature of preventive detention orders appellate review of detention orders, at least if limited to individual cases of detention, would always be frustrated on mootness grounds. S. Dash, Chairman, et al. v. Hon. J. N. Mitchell, Attorney General etc., et al. (1972, 356 F. Supp. 1292).

Proof

Where, although government's proffer of proof that defendant had made threats against prospective witnesses as technically made before government made its motion for pretrial detention, defendant and his counsel were present at time of proffer but made no effort to rebut it and both failed to ask court for additional time to gather evidence to rebut allegation of threats or took advantage of actual offer of court for such time, any error made by court in relying on government's proffer did not prejudice defendant and was harmless. T. E. Blunt v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 322 A.2d 579).

Standing

"Organizational plaintiffs" consisting of individual trustees of Public Defender Service of District of Columbia, Washington Urban League Incorporated, and American Civil Liberties Union Fund of the national capital area had no standing to challenge constitutionality of District of Columbia Reform and Criminal Procedure Act of 1970, where allegations failed to set out any "injury in fact" to the plaintiffs. S. Dash, Chairman, et al. v. Hon. J. N. Mitchell, Attorney General etc., et al. (1972, 356 F. Supp. 1292).

Plaintiffs had no standing as federal taxpayers to challenge constitutionality of Act on theory that the plaintiffs' tax payments and those of other taxpayers would be used to defray costs of pretrial detention of persons pursuant to the Act, since the Act serves primarily to "regulate" one aspect of administration of criminal justice within the District of Columbia, and any expenditure of funds in administration of the preventive division was only "incidental" in character. Id.

Plaintiffs had no standing as District of Columbia taxpayers to challenge constitutionality of Act on theory that plaintiffs' tax payments and those of other taxpayers of District would be used to defray costs of pretrial detention of persons pursuant to the Act, since the preventive detention provisions were not part of a "spending program" but served primarily to "regulate" one aspect of administration of criminal justice within the District. Id.

A complaint alleging that plaintiff "is subject to pretrial detention if charged with another such offense [crime of violence]" did not state a justiciable case or controversy so as to give standing to challenge constitutionality of Act, where, inter alia, there were no allegations of possibility of another arrest for a "crime of violence," and there was no allegation that plaintiff was inhibited or deterred in exercise of his First Amendment rights. Id.

Allegation that plaintiff had been arrested for a "dangerous crime" did not give him standing to challenge constitutionality of preventive detention provisions of Act on ground that plaintiff was inhibited or deterred in exercise of his First Amendment rights, where there was no allegation that plaintiff had any reason to fear that preventive detention would be sought, there was no allegation that plaintiff was or had been inhibited or deterred in exercise of First Amendment rights, and the "dangerous crime" charge against plaintiff had been dismissed. Id.

Threats to witnesses

Court is not prevented by defendant's right to bail from acting to protect witnesses from threats by defendant, thus safeguarding integrity of its own process. T. E. Blunt v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 322 A.2d 579).

Time for hearing

Commitment of defendant to pretrial detention was not rendered improper by mere fact that government did not move for such detention until five months after defendant's arrest. T. E. Blunt v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 322 A.2d 579).

§ 23-1324. Appeal from conditions of release

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Pretrial bail

Pretrial order setting $10,000 bail for release of accused, who was charged with robbery and weapon assault in case of considerable notoriety and who exhibited self-oriented pattern of life with little or no recognition of social responsibility, and rejecting accused's plan to be placed in multiparty, 24-hour custody of his father, mother and grandmother would be affirmed. T. Marshall v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 308 A.2d 766).

Remand

Where trial court set secured money bonds of $10,000 each for two defendants charged with murder during perpetration of robbery, but record did not contain full information concerning nature and circumstances of offense and why other conditions of release would not be suitable, proceedings on appeal after defendants' motions for review of bond had been overruled would be remanded for supplementation of record by complete statement by trial court on those matters or, if trial court deemed it appropriate, entry of new orders respecting pretrial bail. D. C. Bouknight et ano. v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 305 A.2d 524).

§ 23-1325. Release in capital cases or after conviction

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Applicability

Federal Bail Reform Act (18 U.S.C. 3148), rather than District of Columbia Code bail provisions, is applicable where a defendant, convicted in federal court of a District of Columbia Code offense, presents a motion for release pending appeal in federal courts of District of Columbia. United States v. W. Brown (1973, 483 F.2d 1314, 157 U.S. App. D.C. 311).

Bail—Excessive

Under Bail Reform Act of 1966, and under District of Columbia local bail provisions, a money bond may not be used to assure detention. B. F. Villines v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 312 A.2d 304).

Construction

Applications for release of prisoners convicted in the District of Columbia under federal criminal statutes having nationwide application must be considered under the Bail Reform Act of 1966 and not under the 1970 Court Reform and Criminal Procedure Act [this subchapter]. United States v. T. E. Stanley (1972, 469 F.2d 576, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 170).

Likelihood of reversal

Defendant, who was convicted of manslaughter and as to whom trial judge could not find a likelihood of reversal though he did not consider risk of flight or danger, would not be granted release under statutory provisions on non-financial conditions pending appeal. United States v. W. Jones (1972, 476 F.2d 883, 155 U.S. App. D.C. 127).

Risk of flight or danger

Since defendant raised substantial issues on appeal he had a right to be released, assuming he could show that he was unlikely to leave the jurisdiction or pose danger to others. United States v. J. L. Sarvis (1975, 523 F.2d 1177, 173 U.S. App. D.C. 228).

Only basis for refusal to reduce a postconviction surety bond must be found in a necessity to ensure against flight. B. F. Villines v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 312 A.2d 304).

In view of defendant's past record of convictions, character, and fact of conviction for inducing a female to engage in prostitution, compelling a female by threats and duress to live a life of prostitution against her will, assault with a dangerous weapon, and mayhem and malicious disfigurement, order setting postconviction bail was unsupported respecting necessary finding as to non-dangerousness, and defendant should have been ordered detained pending appeal and should have remained in custody, not because he lacked means to make bail, but for reason that his release would present danger to community. Id.

Defendants, who were convicted of second-degree murder and carrying a deadly weapon and as to whom trial judge was unable to find that they were not likely to flee or pose a danger though he did not discuss substantiality of the appeal, would not be granted bail pending appeal. United States v. C. L. Smith (1972, 476 F. 2d 884, 155 U.S. App. D.C. 128).

§ 23-1327. Penalties for failure to appear

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Construction

Phrase "released * * * prior to the commencement of his sentence" in this section relating to offense of willful failure to appear in court as required is intended to make it certain that defendant will be subject to sanctions of bail-jumping statute at all stages of criminal proceeding until he surrenders to serve his sentence and is not intended to indicate that conviction and sentence in underlying offense are conditions precedent to bail-jumping conviction. W. J. Williams v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 331 A.2d 341).

Elements of offense

Fact that underlying burglary charge was dismissed does not render invalid defendant's conviction for willfully failing to appear at preliminary hearing on burglary charge. W. J. Williams v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 331 A.2d 341).

For conviction of willful failure to appear while subject to conditions of release, Government satisfies burden of showing that failure to appear is willful by demonstrating what is commonly referred to as general intent of defendant to commit act of omission, and no specific intent need be proved. F. L. Patton v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 326 A. 2d 818).

Instructions

In prosecution for willfully failing to appear at preliminary hearing on second-degree burglary charge, defendant was not entitled to instruction on defense of intoxication, where defendant testified that he was intoxicated on alcohol and had been taking a stimulant at time when he was scheduled to appear but he produced no evidence that he had reached a point of incapacitating intoxication. W. J. Williams v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 331 A.2d 341).

Set aside of bond forfeiture

Given proffer of data regarding asserted departures from customary practice by bail agency and clerk's office, bondsman's assistance in apprehending defendant and the delay or prejudice suffered by government by breach, it was error for trial judge not to have held an evidentiary hearing on motion of bondsman to set aside bond forfeiture. United States v. J. J. Nell et ano. (1975, 515 F.2d 1351, 169 U.S. App. D.C. 380).

Willfulness

Trial court's reliance upon statutory presumption to establish the element of "willfulness," necessary to a conviction of bail jumping, did not violate defendant's Fifth Amendment rights to due process and privilege against self-incrimination; moreover, defendant did not raise that issue in the trial court and, under the circumstances, the Court of Appeals would decline to exercise its discretion to notice the asserted error raised for the first time on appeal. D. M. Robinson v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 322 A. 2d 271).

§ 23-1332. Applicability of subchapter

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Construction

Applications for release of prisoners convicted in the District of Columbia under federal criminal statutes having nationwide application must be considered under the Bail Reform Act of 1966 and not under the 1970 Court Reform and Criminal Procedure Act [this subchapter]. United States v. T. E. Stanley (1972, 469 F. 2d 576, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 170).

§ 23-1702. Provision for death chamber; appointment of executioner and assistants; fees

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

TITLE 24.—PRISONERS AND THEIR TREATMENT

Chapter 1.—PROBATION

§ 24-104. Discharge from or continuance of probation—Modification or revocation of order.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Construction

Probation statutes are broadly drawn and necessarily must lend themselves to flexibility. J. Wright v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 315 A.2d 839).

Statute should not be so construed as to result in absurdity, where statute fairly leaves room for construction to avoid such result. Id.

Under statute providing for modification of terms and conditions of order of probation "during the probationary term," "probationary term" should be construed for revocation purposes as including term beginning at time probation is granted. Id.

Revocation

Probation must not be revoked except after exercise of informed discretion based upon hearing in accordance with due process requirements. J. Wright v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 315 A.2d 839).

Once granted, probation does not become vested right; it is granted in sound exercise of discretion and so may be revoked. Id.

Where defendant convicted of attempted petit larceny was sentenced to imprisonment for 365 days, of which 180 days was to be served under work release program and the remainder suspended, and work release was to be followed by one year's probation, and defendant arrived at halfway house but that same evening left and did not return, sentencing court had power, after adequate hearing at which defendant was represented by counsel, to vacate prior order suspending sentence, and to revoke probation, though statute provided for modification of terms and conditions of order of probation at any time "during the probationary term." Id.

A probationer must be given advance notice of probation revocation hearing, must be informed of charges against him, and must be given an opportunity to meet and answer the charges. United States v. W. H. Joyner (1973, 486 F.2d 1261, 159 U.S. App. D.C. 1).

Facts that "Important Notice From Your Bondsman," advising probationer to appear in court on certain date, did not explain purpose of hearing, that probationer did not personally receive any notification, that until day of hearing probationer's attorney had not seen him for several months, and that revocation was based on a simple statement of all charges made, without explanation of circumstances out of which they arose, without presentation of evidence, and without specification by court of which of the charges, if less than all, the court's determination to revoke probation was based upon combined to render probation revocation hearing defective. Id.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Computation of sentence

Department of Corrections improperly computed prisoner's sentences where it failed to give prisoner credit toward parole eligibility for time served under sentence which was later vacated. J. T. Cogdell v. D. C. Jackson et al. (1975, 397 F. Supp. 362).

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Jurisdiction

Parole board secures its jurisdiction over parolee by issuing violation warrant before date of parole expiration, and such jurisdiction is not lost simply because board chooses to delay revoking parole until intervening criminal sentence has been fully served. D. H. Sutherland v. District of Columbia Board of Parole (1973, 366 F. Supp. 270).

Warrant as detainer

Parole board's decision to maintain warrant as detainer in excess of three years without affording parole revocation hearing violated parolee's right to due process under the Fifth Amendment. W. H. Jones v. S. Johnston, Parole Executive etc. (1974, 368 F. Supp. 571).

§ 24-206. Revocation of parole after retaking—Hearing—New parole.

CROSS REFERENCE

Representation of indigents, see §§ 2-2222, 11-2601.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Discretion of board

Parole board must consider mitigating circumstances and rehabilitative potential as well as existence of parole violations before determining that reincarceration is appropriate. D. H. Sutherland v. District of Columbia Board of Parole (1973, 366 F. Supp. 270).

Jurisdiction

Parole board secures its jurisdiction over parolee by issuing violation warrant before date of parole expiration, and such jurisdiction is not lost simply because board chooses to delay revoking parole until intervening criminal sentence has been fully served. D. H. Sutherland v. District of Columbia Board of Parole (1973, 368 F. Supp. 270).

Prompt disposition of consequence of parole violation

Failure to provide parolee with parole revocation hearing or even dispositional interview during period of approximately three years while parole violation warrant was lodged as detainer against parolee who was in prison required cancellation of the warrant even though parolee had been convicted of a crime while on parole. W. H. Jones v. S. Johnston, Parole Executive etc. (1974, 368 F. Supp. 571).

It is of paramount importance that parole board not stop in its review of alleged parole violation at detainer stage but continue with critical decision of whether parolee has violated terms of his parole and, if he has, what measures are appropriate both in terms of the community and the parolee himself. Id.

Federal prisoner had right to prompt parole revocation hearing on parole revocation detainer warrant lodged against him while he was serving ten-year term in federal penitentiary, and parole board could not wait until prisoner's current sentence had been served before holding hearing or revoking parole. D. H. Sutherland v. District of Columbia Board of Parole (1973, 366 F. Supp. 270).

Where no parole revocation hearing had been held for more than five months after parole revocation warrant was lodged as detainer on federal prisoner, it was too late for parole board to cure its error by affording prisoner revocation hearing and court would direct that board cancel warrant. Id.

Right to counsel

Where violation of parole consisted in not reporting to parole headquarters immediately upon release and parolee remained at liberty four years without acquiring any criminal record, and his parole had been mandatory, absence of counsel at parole revocation proceeding warranted setting aside order of revocation. R. W. Baker v. T. R. Sard et al. (1973, 486 F. 2d 415, 158 U.S. App. D.C. 348).

Sentence upon reimprisonment

Fact that petitioner had not been released by the time of his maximum release date was not a basis for concluding that he was being unlawfully held by the parole board in violation of his rights to due process where, as a parole violator during term of his original sentence, he was required to return to incarceration to serve balance of sentence and lost time which he spent on parole before violation, practical effect of which was to extend ultimate release date. L. A. Arrington v. A. McGruder, et al. (1974, 490 F. 2d 795, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 227).

§ 24-209. Federal Parole Board—Authority over United States prisoners convicted in the District of Columbia.NOTES TO DECISIONS*Prompt disposition of consequence of parole violation

Failure to provide parolee with parole revocation hearing or even dispositional interview during period of approximately three years while parole violation warrant was lodged as detainer against parolee who was in prison required cancellation of the warrant even though parolee had been convicted of a crime while on parole. *W. the Fifth Amendment. W. H. Jones v. S. Johnston, Parole Executive etc. (1974, 368 F. Supp. 571).

Chapter 3.—INSANE CRIMINALS

§ 24-301. Commitment of persons of unsound mind to the District of Columbia General Hospital—Certification to the court—Acquittal by jury on grounds of insanity—Confinement in a mental institution—Conditions for release after confinement—Conditional release—Expenses—Writ of habeas corpus—Inconsistent provisions of Federal Statutes superseded—Return order for apprehension of escaped inmates—Procedure and time limitation for pleading insanity as a defense.

NOTES TO DECISIONSBurden of proof

There is justification for preponderance of proof standard for commitment of the insanity-acquitted even if higher standard is required prior to civil commitment for propensity and even though there is no justification for denying the insanity-acquitted the right to jury trial that is recognized for those involved in civil commitment proceedings. United States v. J. J. Brown (1973, 478 F. 2d 306, 155 U.S. App. D.C. 402).

Where insanity-acquitted individual has been in detention for considerable period of time, his continued detention vel non should be governed by same standard of burden of proof applied to civil commitments; extent of period calls for sound discretion, considering nature of crime, nature of treatment, and response of person, and generally will not exceed five years and should never exceed maximum sentence for offense, less mandatory release time. Id.

Defendant acquitted by reason of insanity could be committed on determination of mental illness by preponderance of evidence, despite contention that due process required reasonable doubt standard in involuntary civil commitment proceeding and that equal protection required same standard for the insanity-acquitted. Id.

— On petition for release

Where, prior to Bolton decision holding that persons acquitted by reason of insanity must be given judicial hearing similar to committed persons prior to their commitment, petitioner was committed to mental hospital after he was found not guilty by reason of insanity and petitioner had been confined for over nine of ten years for which he might have been sentenced criminally, trial court should consider whether government should bear burden of proving continued confinement was justified. G. C. Waite v. L. Jacobs (1973, 475 F. 2d 392, 154 U.S. App. D.C. 281).

Commitment after acquittal by reason of insanity

If defendant is found not guilty by reason of insanity, it is the duty of the trial court to commit him to mental hospital for hearing to determine whether defendant is entitled to relief and in that hearing the defendant has burden of proving by preponderance of the evidence that he is not likely to injure himself or other persons due to mental illness if he is released from custody. United States v. A. W. Brawner (1972, 471 F. 2d 969, 153 U.S. App. D.C. 1).

Competency hearing

When differing views of experts exist on issue of defendant's sanity at time of offense and the views supporting the insanity defense are not inherently incredible, their presentation in an on-the-record inquiry would aid the trial judge in exercising in an informed manner his discretion as to whether to interpose the insanity defense and would allow the appellate court to intelligently review that exercise for signs of abuse. United States v. R. E. David (1975, 511 F. 2d 355, 167 U.S. App. D.C. 117).

Where court, after defendant's conviction and prior to sentencing, requested and received a psychiatric report showing defendant to be competent to engage in the pending proceedings, to which report defendant did not object, failure to hold hearing on defendant's competency was not an abuse of discretion. E. T. Hughes v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 308 A. 2d 238).

Competency to stand trial

In making a determination of competency to stand trial, it may be very useful for the trial judge to question both the defendant and his counsel; the applicable criteria to measure one's ability to consult with his lawyer and to understand the course of legal proceedings and thus counsel's firsthand evaluation of a defendant's ability to consult on his case and to understand the charges and proceedings against him may be as valuable as an expert psychiatric opinion on competency. United States v. R. E. David (1975, 511 F. 2d 355, 167 U.S. App. D.C. 117).

Conditional release

Evidence concerning extremely short period of time during which patient who had been committed to hospital after being acquitted of rape and murder by reason of insanity had been without medication, apparent haste to subject him to psychological testing and the inner turmoil still reflected therein and patient's elopement from hospital shortly after being told to assume a great deal of responsibility for his own future raised sufficient questions about patient's mental stability and adequacy of hospital's investigation into his mental status to support trial judge's denial of conditional release which had been recommended by the hospital. United States v. L. C. Ecker, II (1973, 479 F. 2d 1206, 156 U.S. App. D.C. 223).

In determining whether patient who has been committed to hospital after being acquitted of crime by reason of insanity should be given conditional release from hospital, hospital and trial court, which must approve hospital's recommendation for such release, should elucidate with specificity those factors which weigh heavily in their decisions. Id.

Theoretical limits of prison term to which patient might have been sentenced for murder had he not been acquitted by reason of insanity were of no relevance in determining whether patient should have been conditionally released from hospital to which he had been committed following his acquittal. Id.

Construction

Defendant acquitted by reason of mental retardation is within provisions of this section for commitment of insanity—acquitted to hospital for mentally ill, until eligible for release, and commitment is mandatory. United States v. M. K. Shorter (D.C. App. 1975, 343 A. 2d 569).

Continuance for mental examination

Refusal, in prosecution for offenses, which allegedly took place in November, 1971, of sodomy, taking indecent liberties with a minor and assault with a deadly weapon, to grant continuance for psychiatric examination of accused merely on basis of fact that accused's record included at least one 1967 conviction for a crime against nature was not an abuse of discretion. J. C. Davis v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 315 A. 2d 157).

Discretion of court

The determination of a defendant's competency to stand trial must be that of the trial judge; it is the duty of the trial judge to make a specific judicial determination of competency to stand trial, rather than accept psychiatric advice as determinative on the issue. United States v. R. E. David (1975, 511 F. 2d 355, 167 U.S. App. D.C. 117).

Equal protection of the laws

Exercise of trial judge's statutory, broad power of review over decision of hospital, to which patient had been committed following his acquittal of rape and murder by reason of insanity, to release him conditionally did not deny patient equal protection. United States v. L. C. Ecker, II (1973, 479 F. 2d 1206, 156 U.S. App. D.C. 223).

After expiration of period for which acquitee might have been incarcerated had he been convicted, it may be irrational, within meaning of equal protection doctrine, to distinguish between acquitee and committee. G. C. Waite v. L. Jacobs (1973, 475 F. 2d 392, 154 U.S. App. D.C. 281).

Once maximum sentence period has expired, it is unconstitutional to discriminate against acquitee, as compared with committee, for purposes of release from indefinite commitment. Id.

Escape

Arrest of defendant on felony charge was terminated and lost its legal vitality when he was acquitted by reason of insanity; thus, defendant's escape from mental hospital to which he was committed following the acquittal did not constitute an escape from custody pursuant to a lawful arrest and did not violate the Federal Escape Act. United States v. W. C. Powell (1974, 503 F. 2d 195, 164 U.S. App. D.C. 104).

Evidence—Abnormal mental condition

Even when there is no defense of insanity, expert testimony of abnormal mental condition will be admissible when it bears on the existence of specific mental element necessary for a crime, provided trial judge determines that the testimony is grounded in sufficient scientific support, and would aid jury in reaching decision on ultimate issues; overruling Fisher v. United States, 80 U.S. App. D.C. 96, 149 F. 2d 28. United States v. A. W. Brawner (1972, 471 F. 2d 969, 153 U.S. App. D.C. 1).

A defendant who presents evidence that his abnormal condition of the mind has substantially impaired behavioral controls is exculpated if his behavioral controls were not only substantially impaired but were impaired to such extent that he lacked substantial capacity to conform his conduct to the law. Id.

— Mental disease or defect

The introduction or proffer of past criminal and anti-social actions is not admissible as evidence of mental disease unless accompanied by expert testimony, supported by showing of the concordance of a responsible segment of professional opinion, that the particular characteristics of these actions constitute convincing evidence of an underlying mental disease that substantially impairs behavioral controls. United States v. A. W. Brawner (1972, 471 F. 2d 969, 153 U.S. App. D.C. 1).

Habeas corpus

This section which precludes a person who has been committed to a hospital for mentally ill after being acquitted by reason of insanity and who has not filed a motion for his release from applying for habeas corpus unless his remedy is inadequate or ineffective to test validity of his detention, defendant, who was committed under pre-Bolton procedures, was foreclosed from petitioning for federal habeas corpus on ground that he should be released from confinement unless government bore burden of proving that his mental condition fell within intentment of relevant commitment statutes, until he first presented to District of Columbia Superior Court his argument for altering burden of proof in regard to pre-Bolton defendants. J. A. Johnson v. L. Robinson (1974, 509 F. 2d 395, 166 U.S. App. D.C. 62).

Insanity defense

Insanity defense is raised where as result of mental disease or defect a defendant lacks substantial capacity either to appreciate criminality of his conduct or to conform his conduct to requirements of law, and, "mental retardation" being mental defect capable of affecting both mental processes and behavior controls to extent that defendant in given situation might not be able to appreciate wrongfulness of his conduct or might not be able to conform his conduct to requirements of law is a basis for insanity defense. United States v. M. K. Shorter (D.C. App. 1975, 343 A. 2d 569).

This section which places burden on accused to prove insanity defense by preponderance of evidence applied to productivity as well as insanity, in criminal prosecution, where, at time of offense charged, defense of insanity was a unitary concept requiring proof of insanity and productivity. United States v. L. Greene (1973, 489 F. 2d

This section which requires accused to prove insanity defense by preponderance of evidence does not deny equal protection merely because different standard of proof concerning such defense is applicable in other federal jurisdictions. Id.

This section which requires accused to prove insanity defense by preponderance of evidence did not deny due process to defendant who was accused of violation of D.C. statute pertaining to felony murder, in that sanity was not an element of such offense. Id.

Where offenses with which defendant was charged were committed at time when the prosecution had the burden of proving criminal responsibility beyond a reasonable doubt once defendant had raised an insanity defense, where statute was thereafter amended to preclude acquittal on ground of insanity unless insanity was affirmatively established by a preponderance of the evidence, and where defendant raised insanity defense, giving of instruction, over objection, that defendant had burden of establishing his insanity defense by a preponderance of the evidence violated the ex post facto clause of the Constitution, despite contention that amendment provided for a mere procedural change. United States v. E. B. Williams, Jr. (1973, 475 F. 2d 355, 154 U.S. App. D.C. 244).

Where defendant, indicted for sodomy, assault with dangerous weapon and mayhem, neither raised defense of insanity prior to return of jury verdict of guilty nor brought to court's attention prior imprisonment for sex-related crime or attempted suicide while in prison and confinement there for psychiatric treatment, defendant had not been improperly deprived of defense of insanity during trial. E. T. Hughes v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 308 A. 2d 238).

A person is not responsible for criminal conduct if at the time of such conduct as result of mental disease or defect he lacks substantial capacity to appreciate the wrongfulness of his conduct or to conform his conduct to the requirements of the law; overruling Durham v. United States, 94 U.S. App. D.C. 228, 214 F. 2d 862. United States v. A. W. Brawner (1972, 471 F. 2d 969, 153 U.S. App. D.C. 1).

Rule that a person is not responsible for criminal conduct if at the time of such conduct as result of mental disease or defect he lacks substantial capacity to appreciate the wrongfulness of his conduct or to conform his conduct to the requirements of the law is prospective in its application and applies only to trial commencing after June 23, 1972. Id.

Within rule that a person is not responsible for criminal conduct if at the time of such conduct as result of mental disease or defect he lacks substantial capacity to appreciate the wrongfulness of his conduct or to conform his conduct to requirements of the law, the term "mental disease or defect" includes any abnormal condition of the mind which substantially affects mental or emotional processes and substantially impairs behavior controls. Id.

A defendant is exculpated if he lacks substantial capacity to appreciate that his conduct is wrongful. Id.

Exculpation from guilt is established not by mental disease or defect alone but only if "as result" defendant lacks the substantial capacity required for responsibility. Id.

In order to be exculpated from guilt by reason of conduct which results from mental disease or defect, accused must be lacking in substantial capacity to appreciate the wrongfulness of his conduct or to conform his conduct to the requirements of the law at time of such conduct. Id.

Instructions

In appropriate case, a defendant may request omission from instruction on defense of insanity of the phrase pertaining to lack of capacity to appreciate wrongfulness, if that particular matter is not involved on the facts, and defendant fears that jury that does not attend rigorously to the details of the instruction may erroneously suppose that the defense is lost if defendant appreciates wrongfulness. United States v. A. W. Brawner (1972, 471 F. 2d 969, 153 U.S. App. D.C. 1).

Suggested instruction on defense of insanity in criminal cases is formulated by the court. Id.

In instructing that even though defendant did not have abnormal mental condition that absolves him of criminal responsibility, he may have had condition that negatives the specific mental state required for a higher degree of crime, the trial court may not substitute for the term "abnormal mental condition" any other terms such as "mental unsoundness." Id.

Mandatory commitment

Where trial court raised the defense of insanity sua sponte and found defendant not guilty by reason of insanity of destroying the property of the United States, trial court was not entitled to automatically commit defendant; the automatic commitment applied only in event the defendant himself raised the defense of insanity. United States v. B. L. Wright (1975, 511 F. 2d 1311, 167 U.S. App. D.C. 309).

Negligence

Where on August 11, general hospital to which patient had been committed to determine his competency to stand trial on charge of assaulting his wife reported that patient was suffering from chronic brain syndrome due to actual brain damage, patient was committed to mental hospital and superintendent of mental hospital, on December 19, informed trial court that patient had recovered from mental disorder and was mentally competent to stand trial though mental hospital personnel knew that patient had suffered from organic brain defect and nothing in their evaluation differed from findings reported by general hospital, mental hospital was negligent in failing to transmit adequate information to trial court and United States, of which hospital was an agent, was liable for death of patient's wife who was fatally shot by patient less than two months after his discharge from hospital. H. M. Hicks et al. v. United States (1973, 357 F. Supp. 434; aff'd 511 F. 2d 407, 167 U.S. App. D.C. 169).

Psychiatric assistance

Examinations of defendant by government psychiatrists during 15-day confinement at government hospital and 50-minute examination conducted by psychiatrist by order of the court were not equivalent to the indigent defendant's right to psychiatric services necessary to an adequate defense in his case and it was error for trial court to deny defendant's timely request for psychiatric assistance. United States v. W. J. Chavis, Jr. (1973, 486 F. 2d 1290, 159 U.S. App. D.C. 30).

Where defendant had right to ex parte hearing on motion for appointment of psychiatrist to aid the defense and prosecutor twice reversed himself on the adequacy of a psychiatric examination of the defendant by legal psychiatric services psychiatrist, it was improper for trial court to deny the motion because the prosecutor intervened to oppose it. Id.

Record on appeal

Record on appeal from denial of motion to withdraw guilty pleas, raising serious unanswered questions about whether defendant's decision to plead was materially affected by, inter alia, defense counsel's failure to seek an independent mental examination of defendant, or to call the psychiatrist to testify or the influence of ex parte communications between U.S. Attorney and examining staff, or psychiatrists' failure to file promptly his letters or court's failure to inquire into circumstances surrounding the examination was inadequate for proper consideration of district court's reasons for denying the motion. United States v. G. M. Morgan (1973, 482 F. 2d 786, 157 U.S. App. D.C. 197).

NOTES TO DECISIONS

In general

Sentence of ten years' imprisonment, and refusal to commit defendant to institution for treatment of sexual psychopathy, did not constitute cruel and unusual punishment of defendant after conviction of sodomy and assault with dangerous weapon. E. T. Hughes v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 308 A. 2d 238).

§ 24-425. Place of imprisonment—Designation by Attorney General—Transfer.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Escape from custody of Attorney General

Evidence that defendant was sentenced, upon his conviction of robbery, to the custody of the Attorney General for a specified term, that he served part of his sentence at reformatory, that he was then admitted to a halfway house run by a nonprofit organization operating under a contract with the Department of Corrections, and that, after being told he was to be returned to the reformatory for a "violation," he left the halfway house without permission established an escape from the Attorney General's legal custody to which defendant was remitted at the time of sentence, and which continued even when he was assigned to a facility not under the control of the Department of Justice. United States v. J. I. Taylor (1973, 485 F. 2d 1077, 158 U.S. App. D.C. 298).

§ 24-426. Payment of rewards—Apprehension of prison fugitives and of conditional release and parole violators.

The Mayor of the District of Columbia, pursuant to regulations prescribed by the Council of the District of Columbia, is authorized to provide for the payment of rewards for the capture, or for information leading to the apprehension, of fugitives from District of Columbia penal, correctional, and welfare institutions and of conditional release and parole violators. Funds appropriated pursuant to this section shall be apportioned and expended in the discretion of, and upon such conditions as may be imposed by, the Mayor of the District of Columbia. No reward money shall be paid to any officer or employee of the Metropolitan Police Department, or of any penal, correctional, or welfare institution, or of any court, legal agency, or other agency closely involved in the criminal justice system. (Oct. 26, 1973, Pub. L. 93-140, § 11, 87 Stat. 506.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Duty owed to inmates—Evidence

Plaintiff suing District of Columbia for injuries he received while inmate in Lorton Reformatory was not required to prove that District of Columbia owned and operated Lorton Reformatory, since such fact should have been judicially noticed on basis of common knowledge or statutory enactment. J. L. Gaither, Jr. v. District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1975, 333 A. 2d 57).

—Jury question

Whether guard at Lorton Reformatory breached duty to inmate on theory that guard knew of odor of gas near gas burner under coffee urn yet ordered inmate to light the burner is jury question, in action against District of Columbia for injuries received. J. L. Gaither, Jr. v. District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1975, 333 A. 2d 57).

Jurisdiction

To have a single decree binding on all prisons in District of Columbia's prison system, to achieve uniformity in treatment of inmates, and to provide for supervision of administrator of district correctional system by single court which imposed sentences, District Court for Eastern District of Virginia should decline to decide class action by inmates of Lorton Reformatory, located in Virginia but part of District of Columbia prison system, complaining that disciplinary proceedings denied due process rights and should transfer cause to District Court of District of Columbia. N. Wright, III, et al. v. D. C. Jackson et al. (1974, 505 F. 2d 1229).

SUBCHAPTER IV.—WORK RELEASE PROGRAM

§ 24-461. Authority to establish program for minor offenders—Grant of privilege in special circumstances.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Abuse of discretion

Assuming that petitioner claiming denial of constitutional rights meant to cite the D.C. statute establishing a work release program, it could not be held that district court abused discretion in finding that there were no special circumstances which merited the granting of work release privilege to petitioner. L. I. Green v. United States (1973, 481 F.2d 1140, 157 U.S. App. D.C. 40).

Application

District of Columbia Work Release Act applies only to three enumerated classes of persons imprisoned for minor offenses, not to imprisoned felons; as to the latter, work release is granted at the discretion of the Attorney General under the provisions of federal statute. R. Contee v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 315 A.2d 149).

§ 24-462. Recommendations—Requests for privilege—Necessity for order of sentencing court.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Court order

Placement in work release program is available only by court order. J. E. Armstead v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 310 A.2d 255).

Misdemeanant's sentence of "six months with narcotic treatment in vocational rehabilitation" did not constitute explicit court order necessary for valid placement of misdemeanant in work release program. Id.

Department of Corrections is not privileged to interpret ambiguous order of trial judge as authorizing work release when order does not specifically so provide. Id.

§ 24-463. Terms and conditions for release to be provided in court order.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Abuse of discretion

Assuming that petitioner claiming denial of constitutional rights meant to cite the D.C. statute establishing a work release program, it could not be held that district court abused discretion in finding that there were no special circumstances which merited the granting of work release privilege to petitioner. *L. SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

§ 24-465. Punishment of prisoner for failure to comply with plan—Prosecution by Corporation Counsel.

CROSS REFERENCE

Rewards for apprehension of conditional release and parole violators, see § 24-426.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Prosecution

Defendants, who, in course of serving sentences for felonies, were transferred to a half-way house, were guilty of escape from penal institution when they felt the half-way house and did not return. United States v. M. Venable (D.C. App. 1974, 316 A.2d 857).

Misdemeanant who was placed in halfway house for participation in work release program due to administrative error rather than by court order required for valid placement, and who left and failed to return to halfway house, was properly prosecuted under § 22-2601 which prescribes punishment for escape from penal institution rather than the section which prescribes punishment for violation of work release plan. J. E. Armstead v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 310 A.2d 255).

Revocation of probation

Where defendant convicted of attempted petit larceny was sentenced to imprisonment for 365 days, of which 180 days was to be served under work release program and the remainder suspended, and work release was to be followed by one year's probation, and defendant arrived at halfway house but that same evening left and did not return, sentencing court had power, after adequate hearing at which defendant was represented by counsel, to vacate prior order suspending sentence, and to revoke probation, through statute provided for modification of terms and conditions of order of probation at any time "during the probationary term." J. Wright v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 315 A.2d 839).

COMMISSIONER'S ORDER GOVERNING REIMBURSEMENT FOR TREATMENT SERVICES PROVIDED TO ALCOHOLIC PATIENTS BY THE D.C. GOVERNMENT

Commissioner's Order No. 74-23, Jan. 31, 1974, ORDERED:

1. That this Order governs the reimbursement policy for treatment services provided to alcoholic patients by the District of Columbia Government in accordance with the provisions of Section 14 of Public Law 90-452, D.C. Code Supplement II 24-534, the District of Columbia Alcoholic Rehabilitation Act of 1967, which requires that any person who receives such treatment is required to reimburse the District of Columbia for all or such part of the actual cost of providing such services as the Commissioner or his designated representative may require; and,

2. That the Director of Human Resources is hereby delegated the authority and responsibility to carry out this Order and to promulgate the necessary administrative directives. In this connection:

a. He shall, through his designated representative, enter into contracts for reimbursement of treatment costs in the name of the District of Columbia Government with persons liable or willing to assume responsibility for payment for treatment furnished under the provisions of this Order; and furthermore,

b. Because Congress further provided that administrative exceptions could be made where the Commissioner or his designated representative waived this reimbursement liability as being unreasonable in certain cases, he may waive, or authorize his designated representative to waive, liability under this Order governing eligibility and standards of payment for treatment of alcoholic patients whenever in his opinion circumstances warrant such action, provided that a record of each such waiver shall be kept in a special file in the Department of Human Resources and shall be made available to such reviewing bodies as the Commissioner may designate; and

c. He shall review this Order at intervals not to exceed one year and recommend to the Commissioner of the District of Columbia such revisions as may be indicated. Changes in per diem rates only may exceed this interval if required.

A. Standards for Payment

1. Liability for payment for the treatment given to alcoholic patients will be determined, according to ability to pay, in the following order:

- a. Person receiving treatment (or his estate)
- b. Father
- c. Mother
- d. Spouse
- e. Adult Children

2. Determination of ability to pay shall take into consideration income and resources such as liquid assets, compensation, or insurance. The ability to pay of the patient and legally responsible relatives shall be determined in accordance with income standards and administrative guidelines established by the Director of Human Resources. The patient, or his responsible relative, shall be required to sign a contract to meet the agreed terms of payment. This contract may be renegotiated whenever any change of factors occurs upon which the original patient contract was based and will be effective as of the date of renegotiation.

3. Treatment services provided to alcoholic patients will be provided at the expense of the District of Columbia to all patients for the first month. After the first month, patients of the Rehabilitation Center for Alcoholics with a gross income between $100 and $600 a month shall be charged at the rate of 20% of their monthly income or $4.00 per day, whichever is less. Patients with a gross income of $600 a month, or with sufficient liquid assets as determined by the Director of Human Resources, shall be charged at the rate of 20% of their income or $18.25 per day, whichever is less. In cases where patients are unable to pay, the responsible relative (as listed in Paragraph 1) of alcoholic patients shall be charged for the cost of treatment on the same basis as patients.

B. Effective Date

The provisions of this Order shall be effective on 2-1-74.

§ 24-535. Donations of services and gifts—Deposit of gifts in a trust fund account in the Treasury of the United States—Use of gifts, by Commissioner, to carry out purposes of this chapter.

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

§ 24-601. Purpose.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Construction

District of Columbia's "Rehabilitation of Users of Narcotics" statute provision, stating that the statute shall not be used to substitute treatment for punishment in cases of crime committed by drug users, means that, when the Government is able successfully to prosecute any drug user for a criminal offense under any federal statute, it may do so. United States v. R. Moore (1973, 486 F. 2d 1139, 158 U.S. App. D.C. 375; cert. denied 94 S. Ct. 298, 414 U.S. 980).

Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Addition as defense to criminal prosecution

Decision permitting a defendant charged with possession of narcotics and narcotics paraphernalia to raise affirmative defense that he lacked capacity to refrain from using narcotics by reason of drug addiction cannot be rested on trial court record which does not disclose basis for expert witness' conclusion that defendant had an overwhelming compulsion psychologically to use heroin and there was no showing whether finding of addiction related to criminal responsibility or only to habitual use. W. R. Franklin v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 339 A.2d 398).

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Findings of fact—Sufficiency

Findings and conclusions of law by Alcoholic Beverage Control Board that there were sufficient off-street parking facilities to serve patrons of applicant for retailer's class C liquor license, that adequate valet service for parking would be available, that it was not shown that issuance of license would cause increase in trash and litter in the area and that premises were appropriate for issuance of license were supported by substantial evidence. Citizens Association of Georgetown, Inc. v. District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board (D.C. App. 1974, 323 A.2d 715).

Detailed recitation of testimony and conclusionary statements of District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board's view of such testimony as establishing entitlement to retailer's class C alcoholic beverages license were too inadequate to permit review, and remand was necessary. Citizens Association of Georgetown, Inc. v. District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board (D.C. App. 1974, 316 A.2d 865).

Notice

Where, on petition for review of order of Alcoholic Beverage Control Board granting application to transfer alcoholic beverage retailer's license, petitioners were present and accorded fair opportunity to be heard, they could not complain that statutory requirements were not satisfied because there was no indication in Board's decision that required notice of hearing was ever published. R. F. Schiffmann et al. v. District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board (D.C. App. 1973, 302 A.2d 235).

In case of hearing on application to transfer alcoholic beverage retailer's license, better practice would have been for the board to have included in record copies of notice of publication required by statute. Id.

Objections

On petition for review of order granting application for transfer of retail liquor license, evidence did not support claim that Alcoholic Beverage Control Board had furnished petitioners with ambiguous and misleading instructions for preparation of protest petitions. R. F. Schiffmann et al. v. District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board (D.C. App. 1973, 302 A.2d 235).

Prejudicial error

Record on review established no prejudicial error in Alcoholic Beverage Control Board's compliance with court's prior decision, amounting to substantial compliance with order that Board take further proceedings and enter into record all information which would be relevant and material to statutory criteria for issuance or denial of license and which would be relied upon in any degree by the Board. Citizens Association of Georgetown, Inc. v. District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board (D.C. App. 1973, 305 A.2d 861).

§ 25-117. Transfer of license—Fee—Conditions imposed.

CROSS REFERENCE

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Administrative procedure

Where Alcoholic Beverage Control Board personally inspected premises and, subsequent to hearing on application for transfer of license and not in presence of parties, measured area to see if proposed liquor store violated regulation prohibiting liquor store within 400 feet of recreational area entrance then requested remand to remedy procedural defects but limited remand to question of measurements without setting forth facts revealed by personal inspection and giving parties opportunity to address themselves to those facts when decision as to main entrance was based on both testimony and personal inspection, Board's refusal to admit further testimony at remand hearing on question of main entrance was error. Northeast Liquors, Inc. v. District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board (D.C. App. 1973, 302 A.2d 222).

Construction

In enacting this section providing that Board of Alcoholic Beverage Control, " * * shall not allow the transfer of the license of any person against whom there is pending in the courts or before the Board any charge of keeping a disorderly house, or of violating this chapter or the laws against gambling in the District of Columbia," Congress sought to prevent transfer "by the licensee" when said licensee has charges pending against him, and said proviso does not apply to cases where transfer is sought by someone other than the present license holder. D. Hornstein et al. v. District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board (D.C. App. 1974, 321 A.2d 567).

Evil sought to be prevented by section providing that Board of Alcoholic Beverage Control " * * shall not allow the transfer of the license of any person against whom" charges are pending, was transfer by licensee who is the putative subject of revocation or suspension. Id.

Due process

There was no denial of due process in Alcoholic Beverage Control Board's scheduling of hearing on protest of transfer of liquor license ten days prior to the resignation of one of its members, even if members knew that said member would be resigning. Palisades Citizens Association v. District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board (D.C. App. 1974, 324 A.2d 692).

Findings of fact

No written findings were required for disposition of petition for reconsideration of transfer order entered by Alcoholic Beverage Control Board. Palisades Citizens Association v. District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board (D.C. App. 1974, 324 A.2d 692).

Judicial review

On petition for review of order of Alcoholic Beverage Control Board granting application for transfer of alcoholic beverage retailer's license, Court of Appeals may not disturb any action of Board in exercise of its statutory powers unless such action is plainly wrong or without support in substantial evidence in administrative record. R. F. Schiffmann et al. v. District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board (D.C. App. 1973, 302 A.2d 235).

Moral character

Due process requires information in Alcoholic Beverage Control Board's confidential file concerning an applicant's moral fitness and good character to be made available to parties as part of the record. Northeast Liquors, Inc. v. District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board (D.C. App. 1973, 302 A.2d 222).

Ordinarily, party opposing transfer of liquor license has burden of showing change in circumstances relating to the applicant's moral character. Id.

Where case concerns application for transfer of liquor license rather than initial granting of license, appellate court must presume that matter of applicant's moral character was determined by the Board when original license was issued. Id.

In absence of any evidence in record as to whether confidential information concerning applicant's moral character was made available to party opposing transfer of applicant's liquor license at hearing, decision of the Board allowing transfer of license would be remanded. Id.

Notice

Where, on petition for review of order of Alcoholic Beverage Control Board granting application to transfer alcoholic beverage retailer's license, petitioners were present and accorded fair opportunity to be heard, they could not complain that statutory requirements were not satisfied because there was no indication in Board's decision that required notice of hearing was ever published. R. F. Schiffmann et al. v. District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board (D.C. App. 1973, 302 A. 2d 235).

In case of hearing on application to transfer alcoholic beverage retailer's license, better practice would have been for the Board to have included in record copies of notice of publication required by statute. Id.

Objections

On petition for review of order granting application for transfer of retail liquor license, evidence did not support claim that Alcoholic Beverage Control Board had furnished petitioners with ambiguous and misleading instructions for preparation of protest petitions. R. F. Schiffmann et al. v. District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board (D.C. App. 1973, 302 A. 2d 235).

Remand

Where Court of Appeals could not determine from the record whether Alcoholic Beverage Control Board's decision denying petition for reconsideration of transfer order had been issued while there was a quorum on the Board, case was remanded to the Board to determine whether such quorum existed. Palisades Citizens Association v. District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board (D.C. App. 1974, 324 A.2d 692).

Transfer of license

Where mortgage holders of liquor business purchased business at foreclosure sale when the licensee ceased to do business on the premises as a result of charges against its officers of permitting illegal activity on the premises, and sought transfer of licensee's liquor license, this section providing that Board of Alcoholic Beverage Control " * * shall not allow the transfer of the license of any person against whom charges are pending," did not prevent requested transfer of liquor license to mortgage holders. D. Hornstein et al. v. District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board (D.C. App. 1974, 321 A.2d 567).

§ 25-118. Revocation of license—Causes—Hearing—Discretionary closing for one year.

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Discretion of Board

Revocation of petitioner's retailer's Class "C" alcoholic beverage license by Alcoholic Beverage Control Board was not an abuse of discretion, despite claim that, in imposing sanction, Board treated petitioner differently than others in similar situations and, in so doing, ignored its own precedents and procedures and failed to justify different treatment accorded petitioner, where petitioner admitted charges alleging unlawful receipt and possession of unstamped distilled spirits, concealment of goods on restaurant premises with intent to defeat collection of taxes (both felonies), failing to superintend business, and permitting an unregistered .22 caliber rifle to be kept on premises. Alrob Enterprises, Inc. v. District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board (D.C. App. 1975, 337 A.2d 497).

Fifteen-day suspension of liquor license when doorman refused to permit entry of police officers unless each paid a $2 admission charge though he was told that they were on official business and identification was displayed, and when manager of the premises failed to intervene to provide officers with full opportunity to examine the premises as required by regulations, was within Alcoholic Beverage Control Board's statutory authority and discretion, despite contention that, when compared with sanctions imposed in other cases, such suspension failed to accord licensee equal protection, equal justice, and due process. The Meteor Corporation v. District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board (D.C. App. 1974, 316 A.2d 545).

Review

Where findings of Alcoholic Beverage Control Board on which it based suspension of license were supported by substantial evidence, reviewing court was not at liberty to disturb the Board's action. The Meteor Corporation v. District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board (D.C. App. 1974, 316 A.2d 545).

§ 25-121. Sale to minors or intoxicated persons—Liability of licensee.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Civil liability

Complaint which was brought by victim of shooting committed by District of Columbia police officer and which alleged that bar owner violated a statutory duty owed to the victim by serving the officer at time when it was known or should have been known that the officer was intoxicated and might pose a danger to others stated a cause of action against the bar owner. D. S. Marusa v. District of Columbia et al. (1973, 484 F. 2d 828, 157 U.S. App. D.C. 348).

In order for violation of a criminal law or regulation to create civil liability, the law or regulation should generally be one designed to promote safety, plaintiff must be a member of class to be protected by the statute and defendant must be person upon whom the statute imposes specific duties. Id.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Illegal contracts—Coverage by insurance

If title insurance policy insuring lender and its successors in interest against any defect in execution of deed of trust covered loss caused by lender's violation of Loan Shark Law [this chapter] enforcement of the policy by successor in interest would not contravene public policy, where successor in interest should have known that loan transaction violated Loan Shark Law, but could not have had subjective knowledge of any violation. Hartford Life Insurance Co. v. Title Guarantee Co. et al. (1975, 520 F.2d 1170, 172 U.S. App. D.C. 156).

Injunctions

Plaintiff, which brought suit seeking cancellation of note and deed of trust or, in the alternative, revision of note and trust, and which could obtain the relief sought only by asserting and establishing the unconstitutionality of federal statute, was not entitled to issuance of a preliminary injunction restraining foreclosure pending final action on the complaint, since the statute upon which plaintiff was relying was presumptively constitutional and since plaintiff failed to establish a likelihood or probability of success on the merits. Murray Co. v. National Mortgage Corporation et al. (D.C. App. 1973, 299 A.2d 147).

TITLE 28.—COMMERCIAL INSTRUMENTS AND TRANSACTIONS

Uniform Commercial Code set out herein as subtitle I, was enacted into law on Dec. 30, 1963, by Pub. L. 88-243, 77 Stat. 630, § 1, effective Jan. 1, 1965

SUBTITLE I.—UNIFORM COMMERCIAL CODE

Article 1.—GENERAL PROVISIONS

PART 1.—SHORT TITLE, CONSTRUCTION, APPLICATION AND SUBJECT MATTER

§ 28:1-103. Supplementary general principles of law applicable

NOTES TO DECISIONS

General

When Uniform Commercial Code did not apply to precise situation, i.e., where bank paid checks lacking one of two required signatures and made disbursements of loan advances contrary to loan agreement, general contract principles governed, and defenses of contributory negligence and proximate cause were not available. G & R Corporation, et al. v. American Security & Trust Company (1975, 523 F.2d 1164, 173 U.S. App. D.C. 215).

PART 2.—GENERAL DEFINITIONS AND PRINCIPLES OF INTERPRETATION

§ 28:1-201. General definitions

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Good faith

Willful ignorance or failure by person in possession of a note to inquire may, for purposes of determining whether he is a holder in due course, negate good faith. C. L. Slaughter et al. v. Jefferson Federal Savings & Loan Association et al. (1973, 361 F. Supp. 590).

§ 28:1-207. Performance or acceptance under reservation of rights

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Special circumstances

Indefinite quantity contract for mobile generator sets did not involve such special circumstances as to prevent application of doctrine that performance of otherwise unenforceable contract rendered contract enforceable. Federal Electric Corporation v. United States (1973, 486 F. 2d 1377, 202 Ct.Cl. 1028).

Article 2.—SALES

PART 3.—GENERAL OBLIGATION AND CONSTRUCTION OF CONTRACT

§ 28:2-302. Unconscionable contract or clause

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Unconscionable contract

Where contract price paid to corporation under home improvement contracts was usually at least double the cost and reasonable profit to contractor, such contracts were unconscionable for purposes of raising defense against holders of notes arising out of financing of such contracts. C. L. Slaughter et al. v. Jefferson Federal Savings & Loan Association et al. (1973, 361 F. Supp. 590).

§ 28:2-313. Express warranties by affirmation, promise, description, sample

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Representations

Representation made by reputable brewer of beer to distributor of carbon dioxide that the surplus carbon dioxide brewer was willing to sell to distributor was from time to time used by brewer in the manufacture of its own beer was a representation on which the distributor was entitled to rely on as a matter of fact. Rock Creek Ginger Ale Company, Inc. v. Thermice Corporation (1971, 352 F. Supp. 522).

Samples

Where distributor of carbon dioxide entered into negotiations for purchase of surplus carbon dioxide of brewer and demanded and was furnished a sample which distributor tested and found of satisfactory quality and odor free and past deliveries aggregating over 700,000 pounds of carbon dioxide had been picked up by buyer-distributor from brewer with no deviation from quality of sample or any objectionable odor which formed basis of suit by bottler against distributor, sample must be considered as describing values of goods contracted for from brewer in absence of a clear, convincing and unmistakable denial of such responsibility. Rock Creek Ginger Ale Company, Inc. v. Thermice Corporation (1971, 352 F. Supp. 522).

§ 28:2-314. Implied warranty: merchantability; usage of trade

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Automobiles

When purchaser acquired new automobile there was by operation of law an implied warranty from both the manufacturer and dealer that the automobile was fit and suitable for the ordinary purposes for which an automobile is sold and used. B. Williams v. Steuart Motor Company et ano. (1974, 494 F. 2d 1074, 161 U.S. App. D.C. 155).

Merchant

Where distributor of carbon dioxide negotiated the purchase of brewer's surplus carbon dioxide, sales of carbon dioxide by brewer, which was a beer manufacturer and not merchant of carbon dioxide, was not subject to implied warranties of merchantability. Rock Creek Ginger Ale Company, Inc. v. Thermice Corporation (1971, 352 F. Supp. 522).

Warranty

Seller's implied warranty of merchantability of gas air conditioner was effective prior to expiration of seller's express manufacturer's warranty where such express warranty contained no language, which excluded or modified the implied warranty. K. R. Lee, Jr. et ano. v. Air Care, Inc. (D.C. App. 1974, 325 A. 2d 598).

§ 28:2-316. Exclusion or modification of warranties

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Exclusion or modification

Seller's implied warranty of merchantability of gas air conditioner was effective prior to expiration of seller's express manufacturer's warranty where such express warranty contained no language, which excluded or modified the implied warranty, and was not inconsistent with the implied warranty. K. R. Lee, Jr. et ano. v. Air Care, Inc. (D.C. App. 1974, 325 A.2d 598).

Limitation of liability

Warranty and limitation of liability clauses which restrict buyer's remedies to repair and replacement of non-conforming parts and limit manufacturer seller's liability regardless of its negligence in causing such nonconformities are valid and enforceable. Potomac Electric Power Company v. Westinghouse Electric Corporation (1974, 385 F. Supp. 572).

§ 28:2-317. Cumulation and conflict of warranties express or implied

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Cumulative warranties

Seller's implied warranty of merchantability of gas air conditioner was effective prior to expiration of seller's express manufacturer's warranty where such express warranty contained no language, which excluded or modified the implied warranty, and was not inconsistent with the implied warranty. K. R. Lee, Jr. et ano. v. Air Care, Inc. (D.C. App. 1974, 325 A.2d 598).

PART 6.—BREACH, REPUDIATION AND EXCUSE

§ 28:2-607. Effect of acceptance; notice of breach; burden of establishing breach after acceptance; notice of claim or litigation to person answerable over

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Notice of breach

Assuming applicability of this section requiring buyer to notify seller of breach within a reasonable time, with respect to carbon dioxide distributor, found liable in damages for delivery of defective carbon dioxide to bottler and bringing third-party complaint against brewer which sold carbon dioxide to distributor which neither sought to return the goods or to receive a rebate because of the defect, notice to brewer, from which distributor was making weekly pickups, of defect in carbon dioxide within a week of the time distributor learned of the defect was reasonable and in compliance with this section. Rock Creek Ginger Ale Company, Inc. v. Thermice Corporation (1971, 352 F. Supp. 522).

PART 7.—REMEDIES

§ 28:2-706. Seller's resale including contract for resale

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Mitigated damages

Where bank disbursed joint venture funds on one signature instead of two as required and joint venturer suffered loss, transfer of investment realty to such joint venturer by other joint venturer, who had diverted the funds, could be said to have been caused by bank's breach of contract, and any profit on immediate resale of such investment realty would have mitigated damages payable by bank, but profits realized by resale three years later did not. G & R Corporation, et al. v. American Security & Trust Company (1975, 523 F.2d 1164, 173 U.S. App. D.C. 215).

§ 28:2-712. "Cover"; buyer's procurement of substitute goods

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Mitigated damages

Where bank disbursed joint venture funds on one signature instead of two as required and joint venturer suffered loss, transfer of investment realty to such joint venturer by other joint venturer, who had diverted the funds, could be said to have been caused by bank's breach of contract, and any profit on immediate resale of such investment realty would have mitigated damages payable by bank, but profits realized by resale three years later did not. G & R Corporation, et al. v. American Security & Trust Company (1975, 523 F.2d 1164, 173 U.S. App. D.C. 215).

§ 28:2-715. Buyer's incidental and consequential damages

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Consequential damages

Where manufacturer seller had continuously exerted its best efforts to correct problem which caused turbine generator to suffer from excessive heat rate, and where turbine generator was still operative and where increased fuel costs due to heat rate were not excessive, damages for increased heat costs were consequential and not recoverable from manufacturer seller where warranty provision of sales contract specifically limited liability to replacement of parts. Potomac Electric Power Company v. Westinghouse Electric Corporation (1974, 385 F. Supp. 572).

§ 28:2-719. Contractual modification or limitation of remedy

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Limitation of liability

Warranty and limitation of liability clauses which restrict buyer's remedies to repair and replacement of non-conforming parts and limit manufacturer seller's liability regardless of its negligence in causing such nonconformities are valid and enforceable. Potomac Electric Power Company v. Westinghouse Electric Corporation (1974, 385 F. Supp. 572).

§ 28:2-725. Statute of limitations in contracts for sale

CROSS REFERENCE

Limitation of actions, generally, see § 12-301.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Costs on appeal

Where appeal by plaintiff purchaser of automobile, in action for breach of contract against automobile dealer and manufacturer, in which action judgment had been entered for defendants on grounds that action was commenced more than six years after purchase of the automobile and thus was barred by the statute of limitations, was completely lacking in substance, appeal would be dismissed as frivolous and double costs would be assessed against purchaser. E. E. Tolson, Jr. v. Handley Ford, Inc. et ano. (D.C. App. 1973, 304 A.2d 634).

Article 3.—COMMERCIAL PAPER

PART 3.—RIGHTS OF A HOLDER

§ 28:3-302. Holder in due course

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Alleged fraud

In view of the apparent inconsistency in district court findings and because record showed that defendant purchased note on recommendation of his accountant action to enjoin sale of plaintiff's home to satisfy lien of deed of trust was remanded to district court for development of additional information in determining whether defendant was a holder in due course with respect to whom claims of fraud in procurement of note and usury would not be valid defenses. J. M. Warren v. A. Lopatin et al. (1973, 475 F.2d 1329, 155 U.S. App. D.C. 60).

Burden of proof

Burden of proof rests on person claiming to be immune from certain defenses to note on ground that he is a holder in due course even if entire transaction occurred prior to effective date of the UCC, and to sustain such burden he must demonstrate that he has taken the instrument for value, in good faith and without notice of any defense against it on the part of any person. C. L. Slaughter et al. v. Jefferson Federal Savings & Loan Association et al. (1973, 361 F. Supp. 590).

Fraud

Failure of real estate broker, who was supposedly acting as agent for homeowners to obtain financing for home improvement contracts and who knew that scheme to defraud was in operation, that charges to be made by corporation for improvements to be made were grossly excessive and that false representations might well have been used as part of corporation's high pressure tactics, to disclose such knowledge to homeowners was, for purposes of raising defense against holders of notes arising out of financing of such contracts, as much a fraud as affirmative misrepresentation. C. L. Slaughter et al. v. Jefferson Federal Savings & Loan Association et al. (1973, 361 F. Supp. 590).

Good faith

Willful ignorance or failure by person in possession of a note to inquire may, for purposes of determining whether he is a holder in due course, negate good faith. C. L. Slaughter et al. v. Jefferson Federal Savings & Loan Association et al. (1973, 361 F. Supp. 590).

Where associations, which refinanced mortgages so as to finance unconscionable home improvement contracts, knew that many of homeowners were of limited intelligence and were being refinanced out of notes with lower interest rates of monthly payments and where such associations were concerned solely with sufficiency of their security and did not inquire into bona fides and contract requirements and settlements adjustments, associations had not acted in good faith and thus were not "holders in due course" of homeowners' first trust notes and were not immune from defenses of fraud in the inducement, unconscionable dealing and usury. Id.

Where finance company bought second trust notes, which arose from corporation's fraudulent home improvement scheme, from broker, who was not an agent of company, paid value for notes, acted in good faith without notice of any defenses to notes and bought such notes only for a short period and stopped when it learned of corporation's undesirable practices, company was a "holder in due course" and thus was free of claims of fraud in the inducement, unconscionability and usury. Id.

Notice

Where knowledge which vice-chairman of board of bank had acquired of partnership difficulties and settlement between maker and payee of note, which was given as part of partnership settlement agreement and which payee endorsed to bank, was acquired in his individual capacity as a private accountant and not as an official or employee of the bank, such knowledge was not imputable to the bank for purpose of determining whether bank, which sought to recover on note, had received knowledge that note was conditional and subject to defenses, including defense of failure of consideration. R. M. Millman v. State National Bank of Maryland et ano. (D.C. App. 1974, 323 A.2d 723).

Reformation of instrument

Where homeowner's notes resulted from financing of fraudulent, unconscionable home improvement contracts, notes held by federal savings and loan associations, which were not holders in due course, would be cancelled and each homeowner would be treated as having made "new loan" which was for an amount equal to true value received and which was at interest rates and for period stated in his original loan. C. L. Slaughter et al. v. Jefferson Federal Savings & Loan Association et al. (1973, 361 F. Supp. 590).

Unconscionable contract

Where contract price paid to corporation under home improvement contracts was usually at least double the cost and reasonable profit to contractor, such contracts were unconscionable for purposes of raising defense against holders of notes arising out of financing of such contracts. C. L. Slaughter et al. v. Jefferson Federal Savings & Loan Association et al. (1973, 361 F. Supp. 590).

§ 28:3-303. Taking for value

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Collateral

Whether bank, seeking to recover on note, took note in payment of an outstanding loan or as collateral for issuance of the loan was immaterial to determination whether bank was holder in due course since a holder who takes a negotiable instrument as collateral for a loan takes for value and may thereby be a holder in due course. R. M. Millman v. State National Bank of Maryland et ano. (D.C. App. 1974, 323 A.2d 723).

§ 28:3-304. Notice to purchaser

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Alleged fraud

In view of the apparent inconsistency in district court findings and because record showed that defendant purchased note on recommendation of his accountant action to enjoin sale of plaintiff's home to satisfy lien of deed of trust was remanded to district court for development of additional information in determining whether defendant was a holder in due course with respect to whom claims of fraud in procurement of note and usury would not be valid defenses. J. M. Warren v. A. Lopatin et al. (1973, 475 F. 2d 1329, 155 U.S. App. D.C. 60).

§ 28:3-305. Rights of a holder in due course

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Evidence

Evidence, in action by homeowners for rescission and restitution of money paid on second trust notes arising out of corporation's fraudulent home improvement scheme, failed to establish that licensed broker, who bought second trust notes from corporation and who sold such notes to defendant finance company, was anything but an independent broker, and thus established, with regard to claims against company of Loan Shark Law violations and of illegal money lending, that company had made no loans. C. L. Slaughter et al. v. Jefferson Federal Savings & Loan Association et al. (1973, 361 F. Supp. 590).

Evidence, in action by homeowners for rescission and restitution of money paid on notes arising under fraudulent home improvement scheme, failed to establish that sufficient opportunity was not given homeowners to know contents of documents which they signed and thus failed to establish fraud in the factum. Id.

Immunity from defenses

Since bank, to which payee endorsed and delivered note, was a holder in due course, the bank which sued maker and payee, took note free of maker's defenses asserted against the payee, including defense of want of consideration. R. M. Millman v. State National Bank of Maryland et ano. (D.C. App. 1974, 323 A.2d 723).

Holder in due course is immune from defenses to notes based on claims of fraud in the inducement, unconscionable dealing and usury. C. L. Slaughter et al. v. Jefferson Federal Savings & Loan Association et al. (1973, 361 F. Supp. 590).

§ 28:3-306. Rights of one not holder in due course

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Reformation of instrument

Where homeowner's notes resulted from financing of fraudulent, unconscionable home improvement contracts, notes held by federal savings and loan associations, which were not holders in due course, would be cancelled and each homeowner would be treated as having made "new loan" which was for an amount equal to true value received and which was at interest rates and for period stated in his original loan. C. L. Slaughter et al. v. Jefferson Federal Savings & Loan Association et al. (1973, 361 F. Supp. 590).

§ 28:3-307. Burden of establishing signatures, defenses and due course

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Alleged fraud

In view of the apparent inconsistency in district court findings and because record showed that defendant purchased note on recommendation of his accountant action to enjoin sale of plaintiff's home to satisfy lien of deed of trust was remanded to district court for development of additional information in determining whether defendant was a holder in due course with respect to whom claims of fraud in procurement of note and usury would not be valid defenses. J. M. Warren v. A. Lopatin et al. (1973, 475 F. 2d 1329, 155 U.S. App. D.C. 60).

Applicable law

Provisions of this section that when signatures are admitted or established production of the instrument entitles a holder to recover on it unless the defendant establishes a defense apply to suit on notes although the transaction took place prior to the effective date of this section. R. J. Toomey et ano. v. D. S. Cammack (D.C. App. 1975, 345 A.2d 453).

Burden of proof

Burden of proof rests on person claiming to be immune from certain defenses to note on ground that he is a holder in due course even if entire transaction occurred prior to effective date of the UCC, and to sustain such burden he must demonstrate that he has taken the instrument for value, in good faith and without notice of any defense against it on the part of any person. C. L. Slaughter et al. v. Jefferson Federal Savings & Loan Association et al. (1973, 361 F. Supp. 590).

Reformation of instrument

Where homeowner's notes resulted from financing of fraudulent, unconscionable home improvement contracts, notes held by federal savings and loan associations, which were not holders in due course, would be cancelled and each homeowner would be treated as having made "new loan" which was for an amount equal to true value received and which was at interest rates and for period stated in his original loan. C. L. Slaughter et al. v. Jefferson Federal Savings & Loan Association et al. (1973, 361 F. Supp. 590).

PART 4.—LIABILITY OF PARTIES

§ 28:3-401. Signature

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Absence of signature

After foreclosure was had on first deed of trust and proceeds of sale left nothing for payment of second deed of trust, bona fide assignees of rights of bona fide assignee of rights under such second deed of trust which was evidenced by a note can sue purchasers directly on their contract to assume such second deed of trust, though note did not contain purchasers' signatures and thus they could not be held liable on such instrument itself. City Mortgage Investment Club et ano. v. P. C. Beh et ano. (D.C. App. 1975, 334 A.2d 183).

§ 28:3-417. Warranties on presentment and transfer

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Transfer "without recourse"

Although, with respect to unenforceability of note endorsed "without recourse" because of illegality of underlying loan, transferee had full knowledge of same facts as its transferor and made the same "mistake" of law, transferee did not subjectively know when it accepted the note that a good defense existed against it, and thus was entitled to coverage of warranty. Hartford Life Insurance Co. v. Title Guarantee Co. et al. (1975, 520 F.2d 1170, 172 U.S. App. D.C. 156).

Article 4.—BANK DEPOSITS AND COLLECTIONS

PART 2.—COLLECTION OF ITEMS: DEPOSITARY AND COLLECTING BANKS

§ 28:4-208. Security interest of collecting bank in items, accompanying documents and proceeds

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Holder in due course

Where wife had obtained a temporary restraining order on October 2, 1972, barring withdrawal of any of husband's retirement funds from husband's account at first bank before defendant second bank presented checks signed by husband to first bank, wife has a prior claim to funds in account of first bank insofar as temporary restraining order is a valid attachment of those funds, even though defendant bank cashed husband's checks on September 28, September 29, and October 2, 1972, without having notice of wife's claim to the funds. L. O. Trigo v. The Riggs National Bank of Washington, D.C. (D.C. App. 1975, 338 A.2d 445).

§ 28:4-209. When bank gives value for purposes of holder in due course

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Holder in due course

Where wife had obtained a temporary restraining order on October 2, 1972, barring withdrawal of any of husband's retirement funds from husband's account at first bank before defendant second bank presented checks signed by husband to first bank, wife has a prior claim to funds in account of first bank insofar as temporary restraining order is a valid attachment of those funds, even though defendant bank cashed husband's checks on September 28, September 29, and October 2, 1972, without having notice of wife's claim to the funds. L. O. Trigo v. The Riggs National Bank of Washington, D.C. (D.C. App. 1975, 338 A.2d 445).

PART 3.—COLLECTION OF ITEMS: PAYOR BANKS

§ 28:4-303. When items subject to notice, stop-order, legal process or setoff; order in which items may be charged or certified

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Notice

Where wife had obtained a temporary restraining order on October 2, 1972, barring withdrawal of any of husband's retirement funds from husband's account at first bank before defendant second bank presented checks signed by husband to first bank, wife has a prior claim to funds in account of first bank insofar as temporary restraining order is a valid attachment of those funds, even though defendant bank cashed husband's checks on September 28, September 29, and October 2, 1972, without having notice of wife's claim to the funds. L. O. Trigo v. The Riggs National Bank of Washington, D.C. (D.C. App. 1975, 338 A.2d 445).

PART 4.—RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN PAYOR BANK AND ITS CUSTOMERS

§ 28:4-406. Customer's duty to discover and report unauthorized signature or alteration

NOTES TO DECISIONS

General

Where Uniform Commercial Code did not apply to precise situation, i.e., where bank paid checks lacking one of two required signatures and made disbursements of loan advances contrary to loan agreement, general contract principles governed, and defenses of contributory negligence and proximate cause were not available. G & R Corporation, et al. v. American Security & Trust Company (1975, 523 F.2d 1164, 173 U.S. App. D.C. 215).

Notice

Purpose of provision of this section allowing maximum one-year limitation, regardless of negligence of bank's customer, for customer to assert claims against bank for payment of items bearing unauthorized signatures or material alterations is to compel customer to notify bank of wrongful payment of item within reasonable time, and customer's duty to discover and notify is limited to notice that item has been improperly paid; provision does not compel customer to declare at that time his intention to avail himself of legal remedies against the bank. G & R Corporation, et al. v. American Security & Trust Company (1975, 523 F.2d 1164, 173 U.S. App. D.C. 215).

Where bank not only authorized diversion of funds from joint venture account but also received the benefits thereof, bank would not be heard to complain that it lacked notice of such disbursement, and bank was not protected by this section providing maximum one-year limitation, regardless of negligence of bank or customer, for customer to assert claims against bank for disbursements made upon unauthorized signature or alteration. Id.

Unauthorized signature

Where drawing on joint venture account with bank required signature of one of two contractors and signature of one of two other joint venturers, and bank paid upon the signatures of the contractors alone, neither signature was an "unauthorized signature" within meaning of this section providing that customer's negligence in examining bank statement and notifying bank may preclude him from recovering from bank for payment of items bearing unauthorized signatures or material alterations. G & R Corporation, et al. v. American Security & Trust Company (1975, 523 F. 2d 1164, 173 U.S. App. D.C. 215).

Article 9.—SECURED TRANSACTIONS; SALES OF ACCOUNTS, CONTRACT RIGHTS AND CHATTEL PAPER

PART 5.—DEFAULT

§ 28:9-501. Default; procedure when security agreement covers both real and personal property

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Replevin

Upon failure of conditional vendee to make payment, conditional vendor has right to replevy the goods and either keep them as his own or dispose of them by sale provided conditional vendor adheres to notice provisions of the Uniform Commercial Code. J. R. Roebuck et ano. v. Walker-Thomas Furniture Co., Inc. (D.C. App. 1973, 310 A. 2d 845).

Rights in collateral

Conditional vendee's ownership rights in collateral are not cut off as a result of failure to make payment and entry of default judgment, but rather such default merely satisfies a condition precedent to the conditional vendor's right to invoke certain remedies. J. R. Roebuck et ano. v. Walker-Thomas Furniture Co., Inc. (D.C. App. 1973, 310 A. 2d 845).

§ 28:9-504. Secured party's right to dispose of collateral after default; effect of disposition

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Construction

It is only where secured creditor ignores rights against the collateral and elects to proceed on the underlying debt that subsequent disposal of collateral is not governed by requirements of Uniform Commercial Code. J. R. Roebuck et ano. v. Walker-Thomas Furniture Co., Inc. (D.C. App. 1973, 310 A. 2d 845).

Notice

Upon failure of conditional vendee to make payment, conditional vendor has right to replevy the goods and either keep them as his own or dispose of them by sale provided conditional vendor adheres to notice provisions of the Uniform Commercial Code. J. R. Roebuck et ano. v. Walker-Thomas Furniture Co., Inc. (D.C. App. 1973, 310 A. 2d 845).

Chapter 23.—ASSIGNMENT OF CHOSSES IN ACTION

§ 28-2303. Assignment of nonnegotiable contract

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Intent

In enacting statutory provision allowing assignee to sue in his own name, Congress did not intend the statute to be utilized to evade the prohibition against the unauthorized practice of law by laymen, but rather only sought to allow suit on a debt, which is assigned for procedural convenience, to be brought in the name of the assignee. J. H. Marshall & Associates, Inc. v. W. A. Burlinson (D.C. App. 1973, 313 A. 2d 587).

Chapter 27.—BUSINESS HOLIDAYS AND COMPUTATION OF TIME

SUBCHAPTER I.—BUSINESS HOLIDAYS

§ 28-2701. Holidays designated—Time for performing acts extended

The following days in each year, namely, the first day of January, commonly called New Year's Day; the fifteenth day of January, commonly called Dr.

King's Birthday; the twenty-second day of February, known as Washington's Birthday; the Fourth of July; the thirtieth day of May, commonly called Decoration Day; the first Monday in September, known as Labor Day; the twenty-fifth day of December, commonly called Christmas Day; every Saturday, after twelve o'clock noon; any day appointed or recommended by the President of the United States as a day of public feasting or thanksgiving, and the day of the inauguration of the President, in every fourth year are holidays in the District for all purposes. When a day set apart as a legal holiday falls on Sunday the next succeeding day is a holiday. In such cases, and when a Sunday and a holiday fall on successive days, all commercial paper falling due on any of those days shall, for all purposes of presenting for payment or acceptance, be deemed to mature and be presentable for payment or acceptance on the next secular business day succeeding. Every Saturday is a holiday in the District for (1) every bank or banking institution having an office or banking house located within the District, (2) every Federal savings and loan association whose main office is in the District, and (3) every building association, building and loan association, or savings and loan association, incorporated or unincorporated, organized and operating under the laws of and having an office located within the District. An act which would otherwise be required, authorized, or permitted to be performed on Saturday in the District at the office or banking house of, or by, any such bank or bank institution, Federal savings and loan association, building association, building and loan association, or savings and loan association, if Saturday were not a holiday, shall or may be so performed on the next succeeding business day, and liability or loss of rights of any kind may not result from such delay. (Aug. 30, 1964, 78 Stat. 671, Pub. L. 88-509, § 1, eff. Jan. 1, 1965; Aug. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-11, § 103, 22 DCR 1804.)

SHORT TITLE

Section 101 of Act Aug. 1, 1975, D. C. Law 1-11, provided: "That this act [amending § 28-2701] may be cited as the 'King Birthday Act'."

FINDINGS AND PURPOSES

Section 101 of Act Aug. 1, 1975, D. C. Law 1-11, provided: "(a) The Council of the District of Columbia wishes to commemorate in an appropriate manner the birthday of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., to acknowledge an honor:

"(1) His leadership in the struggle for moral principles of government and humane treatment of persons in all nations of the world;

"(2) His leadership and lifetime dedication against discrimination, war and racism;

"(3) His leadership in the struggle for civil rights of all Americans, and in particular the quest for self-determination for the District of Columbia.

"(b) The Council of the District of Columbia further finds that there is now no holiday in the District of Columbia in commemoration of the contributions of any Black citizen."

AMENDMENT

1975—Act Aug. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-11, inserted "the fifteenth day of January, commonly called Dr. King's Birthday;" immediately after the first semicolon.

EFFECTIVE DATE OF 1975 AMENDMENT

Section 104 of Act Aug. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-11, provided: "This act [amending § 28-2701] becomes effective on the 31st day after submission to the Speaker of the House and President of the Senate provided that a resolution disapproving this act has not been adopted by the Congress (P.L. 93-198); 87 Stat. 714 [see § 1-147(c)]."

SUBCHAPTER II.—COMPUTATION OF TIME

§ 28-2711. Daylight-saving time

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

Chapter 33.—INTEREST AND USURY

Sec.

28-3309. District of Columbia Council authorized to exempt certain loans, and to change rates of interest.

AMENDMENT

1973—Item 28-3309 was added to the chapter analysis by Act Dec. 29, 1973, Pub. L. 93-229, § 1(b).

§ 28-3301. Rate of interest expressed in contract

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Computation of interest

Act of bank in computing interest on personal, unsecured installment loans without regard to declining balance of principal was usurious under law of District of Columbia where amount of interest charged exceeded that which would be assessed by computing interest at maximum permissible rate with regard to unpaid balances of principal. D. Cohen et al. v. District of Columbia National Bank et al. (1974, 382 F. Supp. 270).

Neither fact that it had been past practice in District of Columbia to compute interest on installment loans without regard to declining balance of principal nor fact that there had been no direct congressional intervention to alter practice could serve as a justification for procedure when it resulted in usurious interest rates in excess of eight percent. Id.

Where loans, under which interest charges, if they were spread over life of loan and if fee at time of settlement were included, would not have been usurious but would have been usurious if fee were added to interest of the first year, were in accord with the law when such loans were made, loans were not usurious ab initio. C. L. Slaughter et al. v. Jefferson Federal Savings & Loan Association et al. (1973, 361 F. Supp. 590).

A loan is usurious only if the total interest exacted exceeds that which would have been collected had the maximum lawful rate of interest been charged over the entire period of the loan. Montgomery Federal Savings and Loan Association v. E. Baer et ano. (D.C. App. 1973, 308 A. 2d 768).

Construction

In context of personal, unsecured installment loans, term "principal amount," within this section providing that parties to an instrument in writing for payment of money may contract for payment of interest on principal amount at any rate not exceeding eight percent per annum, refers to original principal amount of loan, rather than actual principal amount which remains under control of borrower, and operates to prohibit a bank from computing interest without regard to declining balance of loan if interest rates in excess of eight percent result therefrom. D. Cohen et al. v. District of Columbia National Bank et al. (1974, 382 F. Supp. 270).

Subsequent enactment of legislation more favorable to position of bank engaging in usurious practice of computing interest without regard to declining balance of principal did not have any retroactive effect; any favorable implication was effectively rebutted by plain wording of statute as to unpaid balances. Id.

Within meaning of this section providing that the parties to a written instrument for the payment of money at a future time may contract therein for the payment of interest on the principal at a rate not exceeding eight percent per annum, the phrase "8 percent per annum" relates to the rate of interest and rate alone; it has no bearing on the time of payment, as to which the section is simply silent. Montgomery Federal Savings and Loan Association v. E. Baer et ano. (D.C. App. 1973, 308 A. 2d 768).

Revolving charge accounts

Financial institution which issued credit cards honored by independent merchants is entitled to same exemption from usury laws under the "time-price" doctrine as enjoyed by retailers who operated their own revolving charge account plans. B. L. Kass et ano. v. Central Charge Service, Inc. (D.C. App. 1973, 304 A. 2d 632).

Under usury statute existing prior to enactment of D.C. Consumer Credit Protection Act of 1971, a retail merchant could enforce a revolving charge account agreement with a customer, terms of which required payment of one and one-half percent per month on balances remaining unpaid after first billing cycle for goods purchased on credit. B. L. Kass et ano. v. Garfinckel, Brooks Brothers, Miller & Rhoads, Inc. (D.C. App. 1973, 299 A. 2d 542).

Time-price sale

The time-price doctrine, that is, that a bona fide sale of property on credit at a price which exceeds cash price by more than legal rate of interest does not constitute usury since the seller is privileged to fix one price for cash and another for credit, is broad enough to apply to conditional sales as well as revolving credit transactions. B. L. Kass et ano. v. Garfinckel, Brooks Brothers, Miller & Rhoads, Inc. (D.C. App. 1973, 299 A. 2d 542).

Usury

A loan is usurious under law of District of Columbia, when declining balance of principal is taken into account throughout term thereof, if total interest exacted exceeds that which would have been collected had the maximum lawful rate of interest been charged over entire period of loan. D. Cohen et al. v. District of Columbia National Bank et al. (1974, 382 F. Supp. 270).

Whether a loan is secured or unsecured, under prevailing District of Columbia case law, failure to take declining principal balance into account can taint a loan with usury, if it results in actual interest rates in excess of eight percent. Id.

Custom and practice of District of Columbia banking community of computing interest on installment loans without regard to declining balance of principal did not preclude determination that practice was usurious where it resulted in actual interest rates in excess of eight percent. Id.

A general exception to usury statute in District of Columbia exists, at least for a bank chartered under National Bank Act, in case of a discounted loan, but where discount feature is combined with an installment feature, fact that discount feature is present does not redeem loan from taint of usury insofar as installment feature is concerned. Id.

§ 28-3303. Usury defined

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Computation of interest

Where loans, under which interest charges, if they were spread over life of loan and if fee at time of settlement were included, would not have been usurious but would have been usurious if fee were added to interest of the first year, were in accord with the law when such loans were made, loans were not usurious ab initio. C. L. Slaughter et al. v. Jefferson Federal Savings & Loan Association et al. (1973, 361 F. Supp. 590).

A loan is usurious only if the total interest exacted exceeds that which would have been collected had the maximum lawful rate of interest been charged over the entire period of the loan. Montgomery Federal Savings and Loan Association v. E. Baer et ano. (D.C. App. 1973, 308 A. 2d 768).

Placement fees

Loan placement fee should relate to the whole loan for the entire period it is outstanding and is not attributable to interest in any single year; therefore, the payment of "points" by the borrower, although paid in full the first year, is in consideration of the lender making the full loan for the entire term and the borrower does not pay such a fee for the privilege of having the use of a money for only one year. Montgomery Federal Savings and Loan Association v. E. Baer et ano. (D.C. App. 1973, 308 A. 2d 768).

Revolving charge accounts

Financial institution which issued credit cards honored by independent merchants is entitled to same exemption from usury laws under the "time-price" doctrine as enjoyed by retailers who operated their own revolving charge account plans. B. L. Kass et ano. v. Central Charge Service, Inc. (D.C. App. 1973, 304 A. 2d 632).

Under usury statute existing prior to enactment of D.C. Consumer Credit Protection Act of 1971, a retail merchant could enforce a revolving charge account agreement with a customer, terms of which required payment of one and one-half percent per month on balances remaining unpaid after first billing cycle for goods purchased on credit. B. L. Kass et ano. v. Garfinkel, Brooks Brothers, Miller & Rhoads, Inc. (D.C. App. 1973, 299 A. 2d 542).

Time-price sale

The time-price doctrine, that is, that a bona fide sale of property on credit at a price which exceeds cash price by more than legal rate of interest does not constitute usury since the seller is privileged to fix one price for cash and another for credit, is broad enough to apply to conditional sales as well as revolving credit transactions. B. L. Kass et ano. v. Garfinkel, Brooks Brothers, Miller & Rhoads, Inc. (D.C. App. 1973, 299 A. 2d 542).

§ 28-3309. District of Columbia Council authorized to exempt certain loans, and to change rates of interest

The District of Columbia Council is authorized from time to time to provide by regulation for (1) the exemption from the provisions of this chapter of any loan or financial transaction, and (2) the change of any interest rate specified in this chapter. The Council is further authorized to amend or repeal any such regulation at any time, but no such amendment or repeal relating to any exemption made under authority of this section shall affect any such loan or financial transaction lawfully made or entered into while such exemption is in effect. (Added Dec. 29, 1973, Pub. L. 93-229, § 1(a), 87 Stat. 945.)

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

Chapter 35.—STATUTE OF FRAUDS

§ 28-3502. Special promise to answer for debt or default of another

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Authority to sign

Conclusion of trial court, based on resolution of conflicting testimony in action by purchaser for specific performance of contract to sell real estate owned by mother and daughter as joint tenants, that the mother who affixed signatures of both to the contract did, because of prior transactions, have authority to affix the signature of her daughter to the contract is not erroneous. M. A. Gustin v. R. D. Stegall et ano., Administrator, etc. (D.C. App. 1975, 347 A. 2d 917; cert. denied 96 S. Ct. 2174, — U.S. —).

Memorandum

Itemized statement for services performed for municipality by landscape architect and city planner pursuant to oral contract with acting director of agency satisfied statute of frauds. L. E. Coffin, Jr. v. District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1974, 320 A. 2d 301).

Oral promise

Oral contract contemplating long-term employment is void under statute of frauds. K. T. E. Gebhard et al. v. GAF Corporation (1973, 59 F.R.D. 504).

Performance—Partial performance

Husband's authorizing filing of pretrial praecipe and withdrawing countersuit in divorce proceeding commenced by wife is sufficient to bring oral agreement, which had been negotiated with consent of husband and wife, and which provided that title to marital estate was to be given to husband in return for cash payment and withdrawal of countersuit, outside statute of frauds, and thus trial court, after verifying consent of wife, was in error in refusing to hold that parties were bound by such agreement. C. J. Brown v. P. F. Brown (D.C. App. 1975, 343 A.2d 59).

Although statute provides that any agreement involving an interest in real estate which purportedly is for a term in excess of one year must be in writing to be enforceable, the effectiveness of such legislation is not absolute and partial or complete performance under an oral contract may remove the case from the applicability of the statute. Amberger & Wohlfarth, Inc. v. District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1973, 300 A. 2d 460).

— Within one year

If contract contains alternative forms of performance it is enforceable so long as one alternative may be performed within a year. H. S. Sperling v. A. J. Sullivan et al. (1973, 361 F. Supp. 282).

Chapter 38.—CONSUMER PROTECTIONS

§ 28-3808. Assignees subject to defenses

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Construction

Provision of consumer protection law that act can only be asserted as a defense to or setoff against claim by the assignee is not applicable and did not limit scope of counterclaim where the statute was enacted after the commencement of that action. J. H. Marshall & Associates, Inc. v. W. A. Burleson (D.C. App. 1973, 313 A. 2d 587).

§ 29-211. Liability of stockholders.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Piercing the corporate veil

Where corporation was formed with wife as sole stockholder to protect business of husband and wife from claims of husband's judgment creditors, wife extensively commingled corporate with personal funds and formalities of corporate form were in a large part disregarded, judgment creditor of corporation is entitled to have corporate veil pierced on basis that corporation had no independent existence but was used as personal instrumentality of husband and wife and creditor is entitled to recover amount of judgment from husband and wife. *R. Practice of law

Where collection agency practices terminated by Court of Appeals as being an unauthorized practice of law had been long carried on without judicial disapproval and where judgments had been valid under law existing when they were rendered, decision terminating such practices would not be applied retroactively. Kelly Adjustment Co. v. R. Boyd et ano. (D.C. App. 1975, 342 A.2d 361).

Collection agency did not become entitled to utilize practices which constituted the unauthorized practice of law merely because it received the grant by corporate charter from the District of Columbia to conduct its collection business and to do what is necessary to carry out its purposes. *J. § 29-1018. Board of directors.NOTES TO DECISIONS*Fiduciary duty

A director or trustee of a charitable hospital organized under the Non-Profit Corporation Act of the District of Columbia is in default of his fiduciary duty to manage the fiscal and investment affairs of the hospital if it has been shown by a preponderance of the evidence (1) that while assigned to a particular committee of the board having general financial or investment responsibility under the bylaws of the corporation, he has failed to use due diligence in supervising the actions of those officers, employees or outside experts to whom the responsibility for making day-to-day financial or investment decision has been delegated; (2), that he knowingly permitted the hospital to enter into business transaction with himself or with any corporation, partnership or association in which he then had a substantial interest or held a position as trustee, director, general manager or principal officer, without having previously informed persons charged with approving that transaction of his interest or position and of any significant reasons, unknown to or not fully appreciated by such persons, why the transaction might not be in the best interest of the hospital; or (3) that he actively participated in or voted in favor of a decision by the board or any committee or subcommittee thereof to transact business with himself or with any corporation, partnership or association in which he then had a substantial interest or held a position as trustee, director, general manager or principal officer, or if he otherwise failed to perform his duties honestly, in good faith, and with a reasonable amount of diligence and care. D. M. Stern et al. v. Lucy Webb Hayes National Training School for Deaconesses and Missionaries et al. (1974, 381 F. Supp. 1003).

TITLE 30.—DOMESTIC RELATIONS

Chapter 1.—MARRIAGE

§ 30-101. Prohibitions—Marriages void ab initio.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Laches and estoppel

Where two couples obtained Mexican divorces which were invalid because none of four parties was domiciled in Mexico, two of them merely spent a few hours in that country in year when divorces were obtained and absent spouses merely executed powers of attorney but entered no appearance in Mexican court, husband, who later married the other's supposed ex-wife, was estopped from challenging Mexican decrees on jurisdictional grounds in suit to annul his second marriage. A. S. Clagett v. J. D. B. King (D.C. App. 1973, 308 A.2d 245).

§ 30-104. Annulment—Party plaintiff—Next friend—Capable person who knowingly contracted illegal marriage.

§ 30-110. Duty of clerk before issuing license—Perjury.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Constitutionality

Requirement of this section that marriage license applications record color of applicant is not required by a compelling government interest and does not have a rational basis, and thus is unconstitutional under equal protection clause. A. B. Pedersen et al. v. J. M. Burton, Clerk (1975, 400 F.Supp. 960).

§ 30-118. Marriage license applications as public records and open to inspection—Accessibility.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Constitutionality

Requirement of this section that marriage license applications which record color of applicant be disclosed is not required by a compelling government interest and does not have a rational basis, and thus is unconstitutional under equal protection clause. A. B. Pedersen et al. v. J. M. Burton, Clerk (1975, 400 F.Supp. 960).

Chapter 2.—PROPERTY RIGHTS

§ 30-208. Power of married women separately to trade, to contract, and to sue and be sued—Husband not liable for wife's separate contract or tort.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Interspousal immunity

Law of District of Columbia, which was place of parties' domicile and center of relationship, rather than law of New York, which was site of both injury and conduct which caused it, was applicable, where negligence was not in issue, and issue was one of capacity to sue. L. T. Edmunds v. J. A. Edmunds et ano. (1972, 353 F. Supp. 287).

Chapter 3.—UNIFORM SUPPORT

§ 30-304. Extent of duties of support.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Due process

Application of this chapter did not deny mother from whom support was sought due process even if mother had not been given notice of initiating proceeding where mother was provided with notice of proceeding in responding court and was given opportunity to be heard at hearing which she attended with appointed counsel in responding court. M. Watson v. M. Dreadin (D.C. App. 1973, 309 A.2d 493; cert. denied 94 S. Ct. 1488, 415 U.S. 959).

Misconduct

Welfare of child should not be prejudiced by delictum of a parent, and mother's misconduct toward father, even if it consists of impeding his visitation rights, does not justify father's failure to support his child. V. E. Norton v. J. Norton, Jr. (D.C. App. 1972, 298 A.2d 514).

§ 30-309. Complaint on behalf of a minor—Who may bring.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Custody

In a case under this chapter, question of whether maternal grandmother, who initiated petition in Florida, had valid custody of child was not for determination by courts of District of Columbia where mother from whom support was sought resided, where maternal grandmother had obtained legal custody under preliminary order of Florida court and the mother produced no further order to the contrary. M. Watson v. M. Dreadin (D.C. App. 1973, 309 A.2d 493; cert. denied 94 S. Ct. 1488, 415 U.S. 959).

Law governing

Law of initiating jurisdiction determines requisite status of petitioning party. M. Watson v. M. Dreadin (D.C. App. 1973, 309 A.2d 493; cert. denied 94 S. Ct. 1488, 415 U.S. 959).

Standing

In proceedings in responding court under this chapter, mother, from whom support for child was sought, could not challenge standing of maternal grandmother, who had been granted custody of child under preliminary order of initiating court, to initiate the support proceedings. M. Watson v. M. Dreadin (D.C. App. 1973, 309 A.2d 493; cert. denied 94 S. Ct. 1488, 415 U.S. 959).

§ 30-314. Duty of the court when the District of Columbia is responding State.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Due process

Application of this chapter did not deny mother from whom support was sought due process even if mother had not been given notice of initiating proceeding where mother was provided with notice of proceeding in responding court and was given opportunity to be heard at hearing which she attended with appointed counsel in responding court. M. Watson v. M. Dreadin (D.C. App. 1973, 309 A. 2d 493; cert. denied 94 S. Ct. 1488, 415 U.S. 959).

Duty of court

Although mother had removed herself and child from jurisdiction of court to California, trial court should have proceeded to determine child's support petition on its merits rather than dismissing rule to show cause, where there was no specific finding that mother was in contempt or had trifled with court, nor was child residing in a foreign country beyond reach of court, and reciprocal support enforcement statute, placing specific responsibility on courts of District of Columbia to hear and determine petition, obviated necessity of child and mother appearing personally to pursue support action. V. E. Norton v. J. Norton, Jr. (D.C. App. 1972, 298 A. 2d 514).

§ 30-315. Order of support—Bond—Contempt.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Evidence—Sufficiency

Evidence that mother had incurred over $300 in telephone calls to maternal grandmother who had custody of child, that mother had offered to send airplane ticket to grandmother to be used to transport child from Florida to Washington, D.C., where mother resided and that mother was employable, at least to extent of earning money by caring for children of working mothers, sustained finding that mother was financially able to provide $10 per week for support of child. M. Watson v. M. Dreadin (D.C. App. 1973, 309 A. 2d 493; cert. denied 94 S. Ct. 1488, 415 U.S. 959).

31-110. Repealed.
31-115. Repealed.
31-120. Repealed.

§ 31-101. Election and number of members—Term of office—Commencement of term—Compensation of members—Qualifications—Forfeiture of office for failure to maintain qualifications—Vacancies—President—Secretary—Meetings.

(a) The control of the public schools in the District of Columbia is vested in a Board of Education to consist of eleven elected members, three of whom are to be elected at large, and one to be elected from each of the eight school election wards established under chapter 11 of title 1. The election of the members of the Board of Education shall be conducted on a nonpartisan basis and in accordance with such chapter.

(b)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (3) of this subsection and section 1-1110(e), the term of office of a member of the Board of Education shall be four years.

* * * * *

(3) The term of office of a member of the Board of Education elected at a general election shall begin at noon on the fourth Monday in January next following such election. A member may serve more than one term. However, the term of office of a member of the Board of Education elected in the general election for member of the Board of Education to be held in 1973 and thereafter shall expire at noon of the thirtieth day after the Board of Elections certifies the results of the election, including any runoff election, for members of the Board of Education in the fourth year of such member's term. The term of a member of the Board of Education elected in the general election to be held in 1977 and thereafter shall begin immediately upon the expiration of the term preceding it.

CODIFICATION

Subsection (a) of this section is based on sec. 495 of the District of Columbia Self-Government and Governmental Reorganization Act (Pub. L. 93-198, approved Dec. 24, 1973). A prior subsection (a) was based on sec. 2 of Act June 20, 1906, as redesignated and amended; see 1973 main edition of the Code.

AMENDMENT

1973—Section 2 of Act Aug. 14, 1973, Pub. L. 93-92, amended section by (1) striking out "paragraph (2)" in subsec. (b)(1) and inserting "paragraph (3)" in lieu thereof, and (2) inserting in subsec. (b)(3) the second and third sentences as above set out.

EFFECTIVE DATE OF NEW SUBSEC. (a)

Section 771 of Act Dec. 24, 1973, Pub. L. 93-198, as amended, set out as a note under § 1-121, provided in part that subsec. (a) of this section is effective on Jan. 2, 1975, if a majority of the registered qualified electors in the District of Columbia voting on the charter issue in the charter referendum accepted the charter set out in title IV of such Act. The charter was approved by the voters on May 7, 1974.

EFFECTIVE DATE OF 1973 AMENDMENT BY PUB. L. 93-92

Section 3 of Act Aug. 14, 1973, Pub. L. 93-92, provided: "The amendments made by this Act [amending this section and §§ 1-1102, 1-1105, 1-1108, 1-1109, 1-1110, 1-1111] shall take effect on and after the date of enactment of this Act."

CONTINUATION OF BOARD OF EDUCATION

Section 719 of Act Dec. 24, 1973, Pub. L. 93-198, 87 Stat. 821, provided: "The term of any member elected to the District of Columbia Board of Education, and the powers and duties of the Board of Education, shall not be affected by the provisions of section 495 [§ 31-101(a)]. No provision of such section shall be construed to extend the term of any such member or to terminate the term of any such member."

CROSS REFERENCE

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in sections 31-1601, 31-1621, 31-1702.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Meetings—Closed

The term "superintendent," as used in statutory scheme and contract, envisioned an employer-employee relationship between the Board of Education and the superintendent of schools; accordingly, while the meetings at which the Board developed and adopted standards by which it would evaluate the performance of the present superintendent were not held to terminate the superintendent's employment, the meetings' agenda were unquestionably "related matter" as contemplated by statute and are properly subject to closed sessions. R. Goodwin et al. v. District of Columbia Board of Education et al. (D.C. App. 1975, 343 A.2d 63).

Board of Education's adoption of evaluative standards by which to assess the performance of the present superintendent of schools is not a "final policy decision" within the meaning of this section providing, in part, that "no final policy decision on such other matters may be made by the Board of Education in a meeting (or part thereof) closed to the public." Id.

Given the express intent of Congress to allow certain meetings of the Board of Education to be closed and the embodiment of that intent in a specific statute (this section), that prior statute remains in effect as a qualification of section 1-1503a requiring meetings of the District government to be open to the public. Id.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Employer-employee relationship with Board

The term "superintendent," as used in statutory scheme and contract, envisioned an employer-employee relationship between the Board of Education and the superintendent of schools; accordingly, while the meetings at which the Board developed and adopted standards by which it would evaluate the performance of the present superintendent were not held to terminate the superintendent's employment, the meetings' agenda were unquestionably "related matter" as contemplated by statute and are properly subject to closed sessions. R. Goodwin et al. v. District of Columbia Board of Education et al. (D.C. App. 1975, 343 A.2d 63).

§ 31-108. Removal of superintendent.

§ 31-1118. Use of appropriated funds for transportation of students, to change racial balance in schools—Education of individuals in elementary or secondary schools outside the District—Exceptions.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Constitutionality

Fact that provision forbidding use of funds appropriated for District of Columbia to educate any individual in an elementary or secondary school outside the District was inserted within five days after plan inviting enrollment of District children in Maryland schools was approved by respective school boards and publicly announced and that the section appeared in context of an "anti-busing" provision and that report accompanying section to legislative floor made it plain that section was aimed at eliminating plan, did not provide basis for invalidating statute, otherwise valid on its face, on ground that purpose was to impede racial segregation. J. Bulluck et al. v. W. Washington, Commissioner etc., et al. (1972, 468 F. 2d 1096, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 39).

Discrimination

Fact that Congress authorizes the District of Columbia to educate some handicapped and foster children outside the District does not require that Congress authorize a program of general or limited racial integration between schools of the District and schools of adjacent states. J. Bulluck et al. v. W. Washington, Commissioner etc., et al. (1972, 468 F. 2d 1096, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 39).

Equal protection

This section providing that, except in case of foster children already outside the District of Columbia and those handicapped children for whom educational facilities do not exist in public school systems of the District, no funds appropriated for the District may be used for cost of education, including cost of transportation, of any individual in an elementary or secondary school located outside the District does not deny equal protection to Black pupils seeking racial integration between schools of the District and schools of adjacent states; statutory classification is reasonable since Congress could rationally decide that special situation in which the two excepted classes found themselves warranted expenditure of funds necessary to provide for their education. J. Bulluck et al. v. W. Washington, Commissioner etc., et al. (1972, 468 F. 2d 1096, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 39).

Mootness

Suit seeking declaration of unconstitutionality of statute barring use of funds appropriated for District of Columbia to educate any individual in an elementary or secondary school located outside the district was not rendered moot by District school board's termination of program to educate elementary students in Maryland shortly after opening of present school year, while appeal from dismissal of complaint was sub judice; since statute still existed and proponents of plan continued to advocate its reinstatement, court had a concrete factual situation in which proponents had a continuing interest and court was not required to await direct violation of statute before passing on its validity. J. Bulluck et al. v. W. Washington, Commissioner etc., et al. (1972, 468 F. 2d 1096, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 39).

§ 31-1119. Driver education program.

The Board of Education is authorized, within the limits of appropriations therefor, to accept, on a loan basis, and to maintain and provide for insurance of motor vehicles, for use in the driver education programs of the public schools. (Oct. 26, 1973, Pub. L. 93-140, § 20, 87 Stat. 508.)

AMENDMENTS

1975—Section 4 of Act Jan. 3, 1975, Pub. L. 93-635, amended the salary schedule, effective on the first day of the first pay period beginning on or after September 1, 1974, by—

(1) striking out "$29,900" in service step 5 of class 3 and inserting in lieu thereof "$29,990";

(2) striking out "13,620" in service step 9 of Group A-1 of class 15 and inserting in lieu thereof "13,520";

(3) striking out "Group B, master's degree" in class 15 and inserting in lieu thereof "Group B, bachelor's degree + 30 or master's degree";

(4) striking out "14,780" in service step 8 of Group C of class 15 and inserting in lieu thereof "14,730"; and

(5) striking out "17,180" in service step 12 of Group C of class 15 and inserting in lieu thereof "17,130".

Section 5 of such Act, effective on and after September 3, 1974, amended the salary schedule that became effective on the first day of first pay period beginning on or after January 1, 1975, as follows: (1) by striking out "10,410" in service step 6 of Group A-1 of class 15 and inserting in lieu thereof "12,410"; and (2) by striking out "20,559" in Longevity step Y of Group D of class 15 and inserting in lieu thereof "20,550".

1974—Section 202(1) of Act Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407, amended the salary schedule generally, effective on the first day of the first pay period beginning after September 1, 1974, Provided, however, That salary paid to class 1A shall not exceed the amount payable to level III of the Executive Schedule and that the salary payable to any other class shall not exceed the amount payable to level V of the Executive Schedule.

Section 202(2) of such Act amended the salary schedule generally, effective on the first day of the first pay period beginning on or after January 1, 1975, except that salary paid to class 1A shall not exceed the amount payable to level III of the Executive Schedule and that the salary paid to any other class shall not exceed the amount payable to level V of the Executive Schedule.

SHORT TITLE

Section 201 of Act Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407, title II, provided: "This title [amending §§ 31-1501 and 31-1511; and enacting §§ 31-1501a, 31-1513, and provisions set out as notes under § 31-1501] may be cited as the 'Teachers' Salary Act Amendments of 1974'."

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in sections 31-609, 31-632 note, 31-634, 31-635, 31-691a note, 31-733, 31-746, 31-1511, 31-1512, 31-1513, 31-1521, 31-1522, 31-1531 to 31-1536, 31-1542 to 31-1548.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Laches

Complaint of temporary District of Columbia school teacher was barred by laches, where teacher first learned of potential cause of action on April 15, 1967, when she was notified of her salary placement and where she received definitive ruling thereon from chief examiner on May 1, 1967, affirming her salary placement, but teacher failed to institute suit for five years and made no further attempt to pursue her case administratively for more than two years. C. L. Clark v. H. J. Scott, Superintendent of Schools, et al. (D.C. App. 1974, 329 A. 2d 442).

Laches as bar to complaint arising out of District of Columbia teacher salary grade dispute was not precluded on theory that school officials had not been prejudiced, since back pay and retirement claim of nearly $9,000 would no doubt require elimination of some educational services offered in school system's presently committed budget. Id.

§ 31-1501a. Annual comparability study of teachers salaries—Recommendations.

Beginning with the calendar year 1975, the District of Columbia Board of Education shall, by March 1 of each year, submit to the Mayor of the District of Columbia the—

(a) percentage rate of the cost-of-living change since the effective date of the last increase of the compensation schedule for educational personnel in the District of Columbia; and

(b) results of a study comparing compensation of teachers in the District of Columbia with (1) teachers in cities of comparable size, and (2) teachers within other jurisdictions of the Washington metropolitan area.

The Mayor shall submit the information submitted to him by the Board under this section to the Council of the District of Columbia along with his recommendations with respect to compensation (and other related matters) of educational personnel of the Board. (Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407, title II, § 203, 88 Stat. 1049.)

CODIFICATION

Section was not enacted as a part of the District of Columbia Teachers' Salary Act of 1955, as amended, which comprises this chapter.

SUBCHAPTER II.—CLASSIFICATION AND ASSIGNMENT OF EMPLOYEES

§ 31-1511. Board of Education to establish eligibility requirements—Methods of appointment, promotion and salary classification—Definitions.

(a) The Board of Education on written recommendation of the Superintendent of Schools is authorized to establish the eligibility requirements and prescribe methods of appointment and promotion for teachers, school officers, and other employees. The Board of Education is authorized and directed on written recommendation of the Superintendent of Schools, to classify and assign all teachers, school officers, and other employees to the salary classes and groups in section 31-1501. Teachers, school officers, and other employees on probationary or permanent status shall not be required to take any examinations, either mental or physical, to be continued in the positions in which they are employed on December 31, 1962, or to which they may be transferred and assigned under the provisions of section 31-1521 and section 31-1522. No teacher, school officer, or other employee shall be appointed or promoted to any position covered by section 31-1501 on probationary or permanent status unless he possesses a master's degree, except that (1) a person possessing a bachelor's degree may be appointed on probationary or permanent status as a teacher in the elementary or secondary schools or as a coordinator of practical nursing; (2) a person possessing a bachelor's degree may be promoted to the position of census supervisor or coordinator of practical nursing; (3) a person not possessing a bachelor's degree may be appointed on probationary or permanent status as a—

(A) shop teacher in the vocational education program,

(B) teacher of military science and tactics, or

(C) teacher of driver training, if he submits acceptable evidence of equivalent training and experience in accordance with the rules of the Board; and (4) a person not possessing a bachelor's degree may be appointed on a probationary or permanent status as a census supervisor, or promoted to that position, if he submits acceptable evidence of equivalent training and experience in accordance with the rules of the Board.

(As amended Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407, title II, § 205(a), 88 Stat. 1050.)

AMENDMENT

1974—Section 205(a) of Act Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407, amended subsec. (a) by striking out "(D) attendance officer, or (E) child labor inspector," and inserting "or" after "tactics," in paragraph (B).

EFFECTIVE DATE OF 1974 AMENDMENT

Section 205(c) of Act Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407, provided: "The amendment made by subsection (a) shall be effective on and after the date of enactment of this Act."

APPOINTMENT AND PROMOTION REQUIREMENTS OF ATTENDANCE OFFICERS AND CHILD LABOR INSPECTORS

Section 205(b) of Act Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407, provided: "The employees in the category repealed by the amendment made by subsection (a) shall meet the general requirements of such section 2(a) [section 31-1511 (a)]."

§ 31-1513. Teaching certificates—Renewals—Rules and regulations.

(a) Each person receiving basic compensation under class 15 of the salary schedule in section 31-1501 shall be issued a five-year teaching certificate. Renewals shall be dependent upon application and six or more hours of appropriate credit earned during the preceding five-year period. The District of Columbia Board of Education shall establish appropriate rules, regulations, and requirements to carry out the purposes of this section.

(b) For the purposes of this section, class 15, group B, shall include persons possessing a master's degree or thirty appropriate semester hours beyond the bachelor's degree.

(c) For purposes of implementing this section the Board shall determine the appropriateness of the course work obtained in lieu of the degree. (Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407, title II, § 204, 88 Stat. 1049.)

CODIFICATION

Section was not enacted as a part of the District of Columbia Teachers' Salary Act of 1955, as amended, which comprises this chapter.

SUBCHAPTER III.—METHOD OF ASSIGNMENT OF EMPLOYEES TO SALARY SCHEDULES

§ 31-1522. Types of positions to which chapter applies—Authority of Board to determine which positions meet established criteria and other matters—Teacher-aide positions—Initial assignment of school principal positions and periodic evaluation of duties and responsibilities.

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

SUBCHAPTER V.—ACCOMPANYING LEGISLATION

§ 31-1542. Evening, summer, and Americanization schools—Salaries—Extra-duty pay.

(a) The Board is authorized to conduct as part of its public school system the following: summer school programs, extended school year programs, adult education programs, and Americanization schools. The pay for teachers, officers, and other education employees in the summer school programs, adult education school programs, and veterans' summer high school centers shall be as follows:

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Jurisdiction of court

Complaint in which nontenured teacher at Washington Technical Institute of higher learning asserted that nonrenewal of her teaching contract without statement of reasons or opportunity for pretermination hearing violated her right of procedural due process was sufficient to invoke jurisdiction of federal district court under statute endowing district court with jurisdiction of civil actions arising under the Constitution, even though resolution of the due process issue required examination of legitimacy of her assertion of an expectancy of continued employment and that matter appeared to turn on questions of local law. *L. SUBCHAPTER I.—GENERAL PROVISIONS

§ 31-1701. Declaration of purpose.

It is the intent of Congress to authorize a public land-grant university through the reorganization of the existing local institutions of public postsecondary education in the District of Columbia. It is the clear and specific intent to the Congress that vocational and technological education, as well as liberal arts, sciences, teacher education, and graduate and postgraduate studies, within the University be given at all times its proper priority in terms of funding with other units within the University, and that the land-grant funds be utilized by the University in accordance with the provisions of the Act of July 2, 1862 (7 U.S.C. 301-305, 307, 308) (known as the First Morrill Act). (Oct. 26, 1974, Pub. L. 93-471, title I, § 102, 88 Stat. 1423.)

INTENT OF COUNCIL

Section 2 of Act Sept. 9, 1975, D.C. Law 1-12, provided: "It is the intent of the Council of the District of Columbia to approve the Congressional intent (expressed in section 102 of the District of Columbia Public Postsecondary Education Reorganization Act [D.C. Code, § 31-1701 et seq.]) to authorize a public land grant university through the reorganization of the existing institutions of public postsecondary education in the District of Columbia. It is the clear and specific intent of the Council that the University provide a range of programs and studies designed to reach the widest possible number of citizens and residents of the District of Columbia including career and technological education, liberal arts, sciences, teacher education, and graduate and postgraduate studies.

Section 2 of Act Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-36, provided: "It is the intent of the Council of the District of Columbia to approve the Congressional intent expressed in section 102 of the District of Columbia Public Postsecondary Education Reorganization Act (D.C. Code, secs. 31-1701 et seq.) (hereinafter referred to as the 'Act') to authorize a public land-grant University through the reorganization of the existing local institutions of public post secondary education in the District of Columbia, and that the land-grant funds shall be utilized by the University in accordance with the provisions of the Act of July 2, 1862 (7 U.S.C. 301-305, 307, 308) (known as the First Morrill Act). Additionally it is the clear and specific intent of the Council of the District of Columbia that the University provide a range of programs, studies and degrees designed to reach the widest possible number of citizens and residents of the District of Columbia including career and technological education, liberal arts, sciences, teacher education; and associate, graduate, post graduate and professional degrees and studies. Central to this is a governing board with the authority to provide a policy framework and such administration as are necessary to carry out such policies under the law. The function of the board is to build a University to serve the residents of the District of Columbia consisting of, but not limited to, strong programs of liberal arts studies and vocational-technical education in accordance with the provisions of this Act."

EFFECTIVE DATE

Section 407 of Act Oct. 26, 1974, Pub. L. 93-471, title IV, 88 Stat. 1430, provided: "This Act [enacting this chapter] shall take effect July 1, 1975, unless the Council, after January 2, 1975, adopts legislation, in accordance with the District of Columbia Self-Government and Governmental Reorganization Act [Pub. L. 93-198], repealing this Act prior to July 1, 1975. In any case in which the Council adopts any such legislation amending or otherwise modifying this Act (other than its repeal), the foregoing provisions of this Act as so amended or modified shall take effect on July 1, 1975, unless the Council provides, by such legislation, for an effective date other than that provided by this section, in which case this Act, as so amended or modified take effect on the date prescribed by such legislation of the Council."

Section 407 of Act Oct. 26, 1974, was amended by section 3(d) of Act Sept. 9, 1975, D.C. Law 1-12, 22 DCR 1807, by striking out "July 1, 1975" each place it appeared and inserting in lieu thereof "July 1, 1976".

Section 407 of Act Oct. 26, 1974, was amended by Act Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-36, 22 DCR 2934, to read as follows: "Title I [subchapter I of this chapter] and section 202 of this act [§ 31-1712] shall be effective immediately. All other provisions of this Act [this chapter] shall be effective on January 2, 1976."

EFFECTIVE DATE OF 1975 ACTS

Section 4 of Act Sept. 9, 1975, D.C. Law 1-12, 22 DCR 1807, provided: "This act, including the amendments [to § 31-1711 and 31-1717, and to sec. 407 of Pub. L. 93-471, set out as a note under this section] made by this act, shall be effective at the end of the 30 day period provided for Congressional review of acts of the Council of the District of Columbia in section 602(c) of the District of Columbia Self-Government and Governmental Reorganization Act [§ 1-147(c)]."

Section 6 of Act Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-36, 22 DCR 2935, provided: "This act [amending §§ 31-1702, 31-1711 to 31-1721, 31-1731 to 31-1736, and provisions set out in notes under this section] shall become effective on the day following the 30-day Congressional review period required of Council legislation under section 602 of the Self-Government and Governmental Reorganization Act [§ 1-147]."

SHORT TITLE

Section 101 of Act Oct. 26, 1974, Pub. L. 93-471, title I, 88 Stat. 1423, provided: "This Act [enacting this chapter and provisions set out in notes under this section] may be cited as the 'District of Columbia Public Postsecondary Education Reorganization Act'."

The first section of Act Sept. 9, 1975, D.C. Law 1-12, provided: "That this act [amending §§ 31-1711 and 31-1717, and provisions set out in a note under this section] may be cited as the 'University of the District of Columbia Effective Date Act'."

The first section of Act Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-36, provided: "That this act [amending §§ 31-1702, 31-1711 to 31-1721, 31-1731 to 31-1736, and provisions set out in notes under this section] may be cited as 'The District of Columbia Public Postsecondary Education Reorganization Act Amendments'."

§ 31-1702. Definitions.

For the purpose of this chapter—

(a) The term "Trustees" means the Board of Trustees established under subchapter II of this chapter.

SUBCHAPTER II.—UNIVERSITY OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

SUBCHAPTER REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This subchapter is referred to in section 31-1702.

§ 31-1711. Establishment of Board of Trustees and University.

(a) There is hereby established a body corporate by name of the Board of Trustees of the University of the District of Columbia and by that name and style shall have perpetual succession. It shall be charged with the responsibility of governing the University of the District of Columbia and shall possess all the powers necessary or convenient to accomplish the objects and perform the duties prescribed by this section. Pursuant to this section and sections 31-1716 and 31-1733, it shall have the power to adopt, alter, and use a corporate seal which shall be judicially noticed; and to make contracts; to sue and be sued, to complain and defend in its own name in any court of competent jurisdiction; to make, delive, and receive deeds, leases and other instruments and to take title to real and other property in its own name; and to adopt, prescribe, amend, repeal, and enforce such by-laws, rules, and regulations as it may deem necessary for the governance and administration of the University.

(b) There is hereby authorized to be established an independent agency of the government of the District of Columbia known as the University of the District of Columbia which shall be governed by the Board of Trustees as established in subsection (a) of this section.

(c) Except as provided in subsection (d) of this section, such Board of Trustees shall consist of fifteen voting members selected in the following manner:

(1) eleven members shall be appointed by the Mayor by and with the advice and consent of the Council;

(2) one member shall be appointed by the student community of the University and shall be a full time student at the University; and

(3) three members shall be appointed by the alumni associations in the following manners:

(A) one member of the Trustees appointed by the Alumni Association of the District of Columbia Teachers College, with notice thereof to the Mayor within forty-five days after the effective date of this section;

(B) one member of the Trustees appointed by the Alumni Association of Federal City College, with notice thereof to the Mayor within forty-five days after the effective date of this section; and

(C) one member of the Trustees appointed by the Alumni Association of the Washington Technical Institute, with notice thereof to the Mayor within forty-five days after the effective date of this section.

(d) Prior to consolidation as authorized in section 31-1715, the Board of Trustees shall consist of seventeen voting members selected in the following manner:

(1) eleven members shall be selected in the same manner as in paragraph (1), subsection (c) of this section;

(2) three members shall be selected in the same manner as in paragraph (3), subsection (c) of this section; and

(3) three members shall be appointed by the Mayor Provided that one of such members shall be a full time student at Washington Technical Institute, one of such members shall be a full time student at Federal City College and one of such members shall be a full time student at the District of Columbia Teachers College.

(e) In the event that the appointments referred to in paragraphs (2) and (3) of subsection (c) of this section are not made within the time specified, the Mayor shall make the appointments.

(f) As the initial terms of the alumni members expire, the three alumni trustees shall be appointed by the Alumni Association of the University or the Mayor if no alumni association of such University exists.

(g) The Trustees shall hold the first meeting no later than thirty days after the confirmation and or appointment of eleven of its members. The first meeting of the Trustees shall be convened by a member of the Trustees designated by the Mayor.

(h) The student member of the Trustees shall serve a one-year term of office; all Trustees may be selected to serve one successive term.

(i) The terms of non-student Trustees shall be for 5 years; except that the terms of office of the non-student members first taking office shall be determined by lots to provide:

- (1) Three shall serve terms of two years.
- (2) Three shall serve terms of three years.
- (3) Three shall serve terms of four years.
- (4) Five shall serve terms of five years.

(j) Any Trustee selected to fill a vacancy shall be selected only for the remainder of the term for which his or her predecessor was selected and in the same manner as the original selection. A Trustee may serve after the expiration of his term until his successor has qualified to take office.

(k) A Chairperson and Vice Chairperson (1) shall be selected by the Trustees from among the District of Columbia resident members (2) shall serve a one-year term as Chairperson or Vice Chairperson (3) may be reselected, and (4) cannot serve in such capacity beyond their term as member.

(l) Members of the Trustees may be employees of the United States or of the District of Columbia Government, unless they hold positions in clear conflict of interest.

(m) The chief executive officer of the University shall be a non-voting ex-officio member of the Trustees.

(n) All appointments under this section shall be made not later than forty-five days after the effective date of this section. (Oct. 26, 1974, Pub. L. 93-471, title II, § 201, 88 Stat. 1424; Sept. 9, 1975, D.C. Law 1-12, § 3 (a), (b), 22 DCR 1806; Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-36, § 4, 22 DCR 2911.)

Act Sept. 9, 1975, D.C. Law 1-12, amended subsecs. (b) and (c) by striking out "August 2, 1975", "June 30, 1976", and "September 2, 1975" and inserting in lieu thereof "August 2, 1976", "June 30, 1977", and "September 2, 1976", respectively.

EFFECTIVE DATE OF 1975 AMENDMENTS

See notes under § 31-1701.

§ 31-1712. Board of Trustees Nominating Committee.

(a) There is established within the Government of the District of Columbia a committee to be known as the University of the District of Columbia Board of Trustees Nominating Committee (hereinafter in this chapter referred to as the "Committee").

(b) The Committee shall consist of five members to be appointed as follows:

(1) Two members shall be appointed by the Mayor within thirty days after the effective date of this section.

(2) Three members shall be appointed by the Chairman of the Council of the District of Columbia, with the approval of the Council, within thirty days after the effective date of this section.

(c) No individual may be appointed as a member of the Committee unless he or she—

(1) is a citizen of the United States;

(2) is a resident of the District of Columbia and has maintained his or her domicile within the District of Columbia for the twelve months immediately preceding the effective date of this section; and

(3) is not a member of the Council of the District of Columbia or an officer or an employee of the Government of the District of Columbia (including the judicial branch).

(d) Members of the Committee shall serve for terms of five years, except that of the members first appointed pursuant to paragraph (b) (1) of this section, one shall serve for one year and one for five years, as designated at the time of appointment; and of the members appointed pursuant to paragraph (b) (2) of this section, one shall serve for two years, one for three years and one for four years, as designated at the time of appointment.

(e) Whenever a vacancy on the Committee occurs, such vacancy shall be filled in the same manner in which the original appointment was made. Any individual appointed to fill a vacancy, occurring other than upon the expiration of a term shall serve only for the remainder of the term of such individual's predecessor.

(f) Within ten days following the date on which a majority of the members are first appointed pursuant to this section, such members so appointed shall hold their first meeting as members of the Committee.

(g) Except as otherwise provided in this section, the Committee shall act only at meetings called by the Chairperson of the Committee or a majority of the members thereof and only after notice has been given of such meeting to all members of the Committee.

(h) The Committee shall choose annually from among its members a Chairperson and such other officers as it deems necessary. The Committee may adopt such rules of procedure as may be necessary to govern the business of the Committee.

(i) Each agency of the Government of the District of Columbia shall furnish to the Committee, upon request, such records, information, services and such other assistance and facilities as may be necessary to enable the Committee to perform its function properly. Any information furnished to the Committee designated "confidential" by the person furnishing it to the Committee shall be treated by the Committee as privileged and confidential.

(j) The Committee shall have the function of nominating individuals to the Mayor for appointment as members of the Board of Trustees of the University of the District of Columbia other than the members of the Trustees appointed by the alumni associations and the student community and the three student Trustees appointed prior to consolidation. Additionally, the Committee shall fill any and all vacancies other than the alumni and student members occurring on such Board after the date on which a majority of the members first appointed pursuant to this section hold their first meeting as members of the Board of Trustees.

(k) The Committee shall develop a list of names of not less than twenty-five persons, who must be residents of the District of Columbia and have maintained their domicile within the District of Columbia for one year immediately preceding the effective date of this section and who, in the opinion of the Committee, are qualified and available to be appointed to the Board of Trustees. The Committee is to transmit the list of names to the Mayor within thirty days from the date of the last appointment to the Committee.

(l) In the event of any vacancy on the Board of Trustees of the University of the District of Columbia, the Committee shall, within thirty days after such vacancy occurs, submit a list of three persons as nominees for appointment by the Mayor to fill the vacancy. If more than one such vacancy exists at the same time, the Committee shall submit a separate list of nominees for appointment to fill each such vacancy, and no individual's name shall appear on more than one such list. In filling such vacancy, the Mayor may appoint more than one individual from any list currently before the Mayor.

(m) Whenever a vacancy on the Board of Trustees is to occur as a result of the expiration of a term of a member, the Committee shall transmit a list of names to the Mayor of three nominees for appointment to fill such vacancy, at least thirty days prior to the expiration of such member's term.

(n) All Mayoral appointments which are subject to the provisions of this section shall be drawn from among the names of the persons transmitted to the Mayor by the Committee. (Oct. 26, 1974, Pub. L. 93-471, title II, § 202, 88 Stat. 1425; Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-36, § 4, 22 DCR 2916.)

AMENDMENT

1975—Act Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-36, amended section generally. Prior to amendment, section related to suspension and removal of Trustees which is now covered by § 31-1713.

EFFECTIVE DATE OF 1975 AMENDMENT

See note under § 31-1701.

§ 31-1713. Suspension, removal, and termination of Trustees.

(a) Any Trustee shall be automatically suspended from serving as such member after he has been found guilty of a felony by a court of competent jurisdiction. Upon a final determination of his guilt or innocence, the term of such member shall automatically terminate or be reinstated.

(b) The Board of Trustees shall have the power to remove any member, after fair notice and an opportunity to be heard, at any time for adequate cause which relates to such members' character or efficiency as a Trustee.

(c) The tenure of the student member shall automatically terminate if the status of such member ceases to be that of a full time student at the University. (Oct. 26, 1974, Pub. L. 93-471, title II, § 203, 88 Stat. 1425; Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-36, § 4, 22 DCR 2921.)

AMENDMENT

1975—Act Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-36, amended section generally. Prior to amendment, section related to compensation of Trustees which is now covered by § 31-1714.

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in section 31-1735.

§ 31-1715. Consolidation of existing public institutions of postsecondary education.

The Trustees shall by September 1, 1976, consolidate the existing public institutions of postsecondary education in the District of Columbia under a single management system to be called the University of the District of Columbia, with several programs, schools, colleges, institutes, campuses and other components that offer a comprehensive program of public postsecondary education. The institutions of public postsecondary education in the District of Columbia existing immediately prior to such consolidation shall be deemed abolished on the effective date of the consolidation. Thereafter, any reference in any law, rule, regulation, or other document of the United States or of the District of Columbia to such institutions shall be deemed to be a reference to the University of the District of Columbia. (Oct. 26, 1974, Pub. L. 93-471, title II, § 205, 88 Stat. 1426; Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-36, § 4, 22 DCR 2922.)

AMENDMENT

1975—Act Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-36, amended section generally. Prior to amendment, section related to duties of Trustees which is now covered by § 31-1716.

EFFECTIVE DATE OF 1975 AMENDMENT

See note under § 31-1701.

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in section 31-1711.

§ 31-1716. Duties of Trustees.

It shall be the duty of the Trustees to—

(a) Review the existing public institutions of postsecondary education with respect to (1) accreditation, (2) present programs and functions, and (3) actual and potential capabilities, and (4) educational policies and procedures.

(b) (1) Establish the University of the District of Columbia consisting of, but not limited to, two major components, liberal and fine arts and vocational and technical education.

(2) Prepare and, from time to time, revise a long-range plan for the development of the University which shall include the type and scope of programs offered and envisioned. Such plan shall also include the development, expansion, integration, coordination and efficient use of the facilities, physical plant, curricula, and standards of public postsecondary education. Such initial plan and any revisions thereof shall be made available to the public, the Council of the District of Columbia and the Mayor for a period of not less than sixty days prior to its implementation and the Trustees shall hold such hearings and public forums as may be necessary to receive public response and comment on such plans.

(c) Establish or approve policies and procedures governing admissions, curricula, programs, graduation, the awarding of degrees, and general policy making for the components of the University.

(d) Prepare and submit to the Mayor, on a date fixed by the Mayor, an annual budget for the fiscal year beginning October 1, 1977. Such budget shall include a proposed financial operating plan for such fiscal year, and a capital and educational improvements plan for such fiscal year and the succeeding four fiscal years for the University. The Mayor and the Council shall, after review and consideration of the budget submitted by the Trustees, establish the maximum amount of funds for each of the major components of the University and the total University budget which will be allocated to the Trustees.

(e) The Trustees may transfer, during the fiscal year, any appropriation balance available for one item of appropriation to another item of appropriations or to a new program in an amount not to exceed $50,000.

(f) Enter into negotiations and binding contracts pursuant to Council regulations regarding contracting with the governments of the United States and District of Columbia and other public and private agencies.

(g) Enter into negotiations and binding contracts pursuant to Council regulations to perform organized research, training and demonstrations on a reimbursable basis for the United States and the government of the District of Columbia and other public and private agencies.

(h) Fix tuition for students attending the University.

(i) Fix fees, in addition to tuition, to be paid by resident and nonresident students attending the University. Receipts from these fees shall be deposited in a revolving fund in one or more financial institutions in the District of Columbia, and shall be available for such purposes as the Trustees shall approve, without fiscal year limitation.

(j) Select, appoint, and fix the compensation for a chief executive officer of the University and of such staff for the Board of Trustees as it deems necessary and approve the appointment and compensation of the academic and administrative heads of each of the components of the University and of such other officers as it deems necessary, including legal counsel. In no case shall any such compensation be fixed in an amount in excess of that provided for the Mayor unless specifically authorized by legislative act of the Council. The chief executive officer shall serve at the pleasure of the Trustees.

(k) Procure temporary and intermittent services to the same extent as is authorized by section 3109 of title 5, United States Code, but at daily rates for individuals not in excess of the maximum daily rate for GS-18 of the General Schedule under section 5332 of such title.

(l) Submit recommendations to the Mayor and the Council of the District of Columbia from time to time relating to legislation affecting the administration and programs of the University.

(m) Develop and define, in conjunction with the faculty, a policy governing academic freedom for the University and establish mechanisms to ensure its protection and enforcement.

(n) Perform such duties and make such rules and regulations as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of this chapter.

(o) Seek to establish with the Board a Coordination Committee to determine areas of cooperation, coordination and assistance.

(p) Utilize the services and seek the counsel and advice of the District of Columbia Commission on Postsecondary Education in planning the development of a program for public postsecondary education in the District of Columbia.

(q) Generally determine, control, supervise, manage, and govern all affairs of the University of the District of Columbia. Toward this end the Trustees are authorized to adopt such policies and regulations as it may deem wise. (Oct. 26, 1974, Pub. L. 93-471, title II, § 206, 88 Stat. 1427; Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-36, § 4, 22 DCR 2923.)

AMENDMENT

1975—Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-36, amended section generally. Prior to amendment, section related to the personnel system which is now covered by § 31-1717.

EFFECTIVE DATE OF 1975 AMENDMENT

See note under § 31-1701.

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in section 31-1711.

§ 31-1717. Personnel system.

(a) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Trustees are hereby authorized to establish, not earlier than one year and not later than five years after the effective date of this chapter, a personnel system (setting forth minimum standards) for all employees of components, facilities, and programs of the University, including but not limited to pay, contract terms, vacations, and sabbaticals, leave, residence, retirement, health and life insurance, employee disability, and death benefits, all at least equal to those provided by legislation enacted by Congress, or regulations adopted pursuant thereto, and applicable to such officers and employees immediately prior to the effective date of the system established pursuant to this section. Any provision in the personnel system established by the Trustees under this section requiring employees to be residents of the District of Columbia shall apply only to employees hired after the effective date of such system.

(b) The personnel policies of the Trustees shall incorporate policies developed by the Trustees to guarantee collective bargaining rights of employees subject to this section.

(c) The personnel system which the Board of Trustees is authorized to establish under this section shall be submitted to the Mayor. Upon approval of the personnel system by the Mayor, it shall be transmitted to the Chairman of the Council and shall take effect at the end of the sixty day period beginning on the day that the personnel system is transmitted to the Chairman of the Council unless the Council during such sixty day period adopts a resolution disapproving, in whole or in part, such personnel system.

(d) Personnel legislation and policies in effect including without limitation, legislation and policies relating to tenure, appointments, promotions, discipline, separation pay, unemployment compensation, health disability and death benefits, leave, retirement, insurance and veterans preference applicable to such employees, shall continue to be applicable until such time as the Trustees shall, pursuant to this section, provide for coverage under a new personnel system.

(e) All actions affecting such personnel and such members shall, until such time as a personnel system is established by the Trustees superseding such laws and establishing a permanent personnel system for all employees of the University, continue to be subject to the provisions of Acts of Congress relating to the appointment, promotion, discipline, separation, and other conditions of employment applicable to officers and employees of the District government, and where applicable, to the provisions of the joint agreement between the Commissioners and the Civil Service Commission authorized by Executive Order Numbered 5491 of November 18, 1930, relating to the appointment of District personnel. (Oct. 26, 1974, Pub. L. 93-471, title II, § 207, 88 Stat. 1428; Sept. 9, 1975, D.C. Law 1-12, § 3(c), 22 DCR 1807; Nov 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-36, § 4, 22 DCR 2927.)

§ 31-1718. Transfer of functions, personnel, property, assets, and liabilities.

The Board of Higher Education and the Vocational Board shall be abolished on the day that the Board of Trustees convenes its first meeting. Except as provided by this chapter all functions, powers, and duties of the Board of Higher Education and the Vocational Board under chapter 16 of this title shall be vested in and exercised by the Trustees. All employees, property (real and personal), and unexpended balances (available or to be made available) of appropriations, allocations, and all other funds and assets and liabilities of the Board of Higher Education and Vocational Board are authorized to be transferred to the Trustees, except the functions of licensing institutions to confer degrees as authorized by section 29-415. All rules, orders, obligations, determinations and any other understandings of the Board of Higher Education and the Board of Vocational Education shall remain in effect until such time as they may be lawfully amended, modified or repealed by the Trustees. (Oct. 26, 1974, Pub. L. 93-471, title II, § 208, 88 Stat. 1428; Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-36, § 4, 22 DCR 2929.)

AMENDMENT

1975—Act Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-36, amended section generally. Prior to amendment, section related to establishment as land-grant university which is now covered by § 31-1719.

EFFECTIVE DATE OF 1975 AMENDMENT

§ 31-1719. Establishment as land-grant university.

(a) In the administration of—

(1) the Act of August 30, 1890 (7 U.S.C. 321-326, 328) (known as the Second Morrill Act),

(2) the tenth paragraph under the heading "Emergency Appropriations" in the Act of March 4, 1907 (7 U.S.C. 322) (known as the Nelsen amendment),

(3) section 22 of the Act of June 29, 1935 (7 U.S.C. 329) (known as the Bankhead-Jones Act),

(4) the Act of March 4, 1940 (7 U.S.C. 331), and

(5) the Agricultural Marketing Act of 1946 (7 U.S.C. 1621-1627),

the University shall be considered to be a university established for the benefit of agriculture and the mechanic arts in accordance with the provisions of the Act of July 2, 1862 (7 U.S.C. 301-305, 307, 308) (known as the First Morrill Act); and the term "State" as used in the laws and provisions of law listed in the preceding paragraphs of this section shall include the District of Columbia.

(b) In the administration of the Act of May 8, 1914 (7 U.S.C. 341-346, 347a-349) (known as the Smith-Lever Act)—

(1) the University shall be considered to be a university established for the benefit of agriculture and the mechanic arts in accordance with the provisions of the Act of July 2, 1862 (7 U.S.C. 301-305, 307, 308); and

(2) the term "State" as used in such Act of May 8, 1914,¹ shall include the District of Columbia, except that the District of Columbia shall not be eligible to receive any sums appropriated under section 3 of such Act [7 U.S.C. 343].

(c) In lieu of an authorization of appropriations for the District of Columbia under section 3 of such ¹ So in original. Probably should be "1914".

Act of May 8, 1914 [7 U.S.C. 343], there is authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to provide cooperative agricultural extension work in the District of Columbia under such Act. Such sums may be used to pay no more than one-half of the total cost of providing such extension work. Any reference in such Act (other than section 3 thereof) to funds appropriated under such Act shall in the case of the District of Columbia be considered a reference to funds appropriated under this subsection.

(d) Four per centum of the sums appropriated under subsection (c) for each fiscal year shall be allotted to the Federal Extension Service of the Department of Agriculture for administrative, technical, and other services provided by the Service in carrying out the purposes of this section. (Oct. 26, 1974, Pub. L. 93-471, title II, § 209(a)-(d), formerly § 208(a)-(d), 88 Stat. 1428; renumbered Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-36, § 4, 22 DCR 2911.)

CODIFICATION

Section is comprised of subssecs. (a)-(d) of sec. 209 (formerly sec. 208) of Act Oct. 26, 1974. Subsection (e) of that section amended section 361a of title 7, United States Code.

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in section 31-1720.

§ 31-1720. Same; State consent.

The enactment of this chapter shall, as respects the District of Columbia, be deemed to satisfy any requirement of State consent contained in any of the laws or provisions of law referred to in section 31-1719. (Oct. 26, 1974, Pub. L. 93-471, title II, § 210, formerly § 209, 88 Stat. 1429; renumbered Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-36, § 4, 22 DCR 2911.)

SUBCHAPTER III.—AUTHORIZATIONS

§ 31-1721. Appropriations.

(a) There are authorized to be appropriated out of any money in the Treasury to the credit of the District of Columbia such sums as may be necessary for carrying out the purposes of this chapter.

(b) The chief executive officer is authorized to provide for the expenditure of funds, in amounts not to exceed a total of $5,000, for such purposes as may be deemed necessary within limits that may be specified in annual appropriations. The chief executive officer shall be personally responsible for the expenditure of appropriations made pursuant to this section, and such expenditures shall be supported by vouchers and shall be audited by the District of Columbia Auditor. (Oct. 26, 1974, Pub. L. 93-471, title III, § 301, 88 Stat. 1429; Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-36, § 4, 22 DCR 2930.)

AMENDMENT

1975—Act Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-36, substituted "chief executive officer" for "President" in subsec. (b), and increased the authorization from $2,000 to $5,000.

SUBCHAPTER IV.—MISCELLANEOUS

§ 31-1731. Meetings of Trustees.

Meetings may be called by the Chairperson or a majority of the members of the Trustees. No official action may be taken by the Trustees except at a meeting of the Trustees at which a quorum is present. Eleven members shall constitute a quorum but a lesser number may hold hearings. Each meeting of the Trustees shall be open to the public and held in the District of Columbia with appropriate notice of each such meeting given to the general public, except a majority of the Trustees may elect to go into executive session to take action on personnel matters. The Trustees shall meet at stated times established by the Board of Trustees, but not less frequently than four times a year. (Oct. 26, 1974, Pub. L. 93-471, title IV, § 401, 88 Stat. 1429; Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-36, § 5, 22 DCR 2931.)

AMENDMENT

1975—Act Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-36, amended section generally, to increase from eight to eleven the members constituting a quorum and to add the last sentence relating to meetings at stated times at least four times a year.

See note under § 31-1701.

§ 31-1732. Advisory committees.

The Trustees shall appoint such advisory committees as are necessary to advise on educational policy. Such advisory committees may consist of members of the Trustees, students, faculty members, parents, governmental, education, business, industrial, labor, and community representatives. (Oct. 26, 1974, Pub. L. 93-471, title IV, § 402, 88 Stat. 1429; Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-36, § 5, 22 DCR 2931.)

AMENDMENT

1975—Act Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-36, amended section generally without making change.

EFFECTIVE DATE OF 1975 AMENDMENT

See note under § 31-1701.

§ 31-1733. Gifts and contributions.

(a) The Trustees may accept services, moneys, gifts, endowments, donations, and bequests. The Trustees may in their discretion retain or not retain such in the form in which they are made.

(b) The Trustees shall establish in one or more financial institutions in the District of Columbia the District of Columbia Postsecondary Education Fund. There shall be deposited in such fund all gifts and contributions in whatever form, funds in receipt of services rendered, other than tuition, and all moneys not included in the annual operating and capital and educational improvements funds appropriated by Congress. Moneys deposited therein shall be available for investment and shall be distributed in such amounts and in such manner as the Trustees may determine. The Trustees are authorized to administer such fund in whatever manner the Trustees may deem wise and prudent, provided that such administration is lawful and does not impose any fiscal burden on the District of Columbia.

(c) It is not the intent that any income derived as a result of such fund shall take the place of any

District or Federal appropriations or any part thereof but that it shall supplement such appropriations to the end that the University may improve and increase its functions, may enlarge its areas of service and may become more useful to a greater number of people. Nothing in this section shall be construed to prevent the Trustees from receiving gifts, donations, and bequests from any source and from using the same for such lawful purposes as the donor or donors designate. (Oct. 26, 1974, Pub. L. 93-471, title IV, § 403, 88 Stat. 1429; Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-36, § 5, 22 DCR 2932.)

AMENDMENT

1975—Act Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-36, amended section generally.

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in section 31-1711.

§ 31-1734. Annual report.

The Trustees shall make an annual report to the general public, Mayor, Council, and the Congress on December 31 of each year on the operation of programs and the expenditure of all funds for public postsecondary education in the District of Columbia. Such annual report shall include but not be limited to the source, amount, distribution and expenditure of all funds whatever the source; and general student enrollment data, including but not limited to race, sex, age, major area of study, previous and current residency and upon graduation or termination of study, employment placement data (consistent with existing statutes and Department of Health, Education and Welfare regulations). AMENDMENT 1975—Act Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-36, amended section generally. The date of the annual report was changed from November 1 to December 31 of each year, and the second sentence relating to matters to be covered in the report was added.

EFFECTIVE DATE OF 1975 AMENDMENT

See note under § 31-1701.

§ 31-1735. Authority of Board of Education.

(a) The Board may transfer, during the fiscal year, any appropriation balance available for one item of appropriation to another item of appropriation or to a new program in an amount not to exceed $50,000.

(b) The Board may enter into negotiations and binding contracts pursuant to Council regulations regarding contracting with the governments of the United States and District of Columbia and other public and private agencies to render and receive services.

(c) The provisions in section 31-1714, relating to compensation of the Trustees, shall apply to the members of the Board of Education. (Oct. 26, 1974, Pub. L. 93-471, title IV, § 405, 88 Stat. 1430; Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-36, § 5, 22 DCR 2934.)

Chapter 18.—INTERSTATE AGREEMENT ON QUALIFICATION OF EDUCATIONAL PERSONNEL

Sec.

- 31-1801. Authority to enter into agreement.
- 31-1802. Designated State official.
- 31-1803. Filing and publication of contracts.
- 31-1804. Definition.

§ 31-1801. Authority to enter into agreement.

The Mayor of the District of Columbia is authorized to enter into and execute on behalf of the District of Columbia an agreement with any State or States legally joining therein in the form substantially as follows. (Dec. 7, 1974, Pub. L. 93-515, title I, § 101, 88 Stat. 1612.)

"THE INTERSTATE AGREEMENT ON QUALIFICATION OF EDUCATIONAL PERSONNEL

"Article I—Purpose, Findings, and Policy

"1. The States party to this Agreement, desiring by common action to improve their respective school systems by utilizing the teacher or other professional educational person wherever educated, declare that it is the policy of each of them, on the basis of cooperation with one another, to take advantage of the preparation and experience of such persons wherever gained, thereby serving the best interests of society, of education, and of the teaching profession. It is the purpose of this Agreement to provide for the development and execution of such programs of cooperation as will facilitate the movement of teachers and other professional educational personnel among the States party to it, and to authorize specific interstate educational personnel contracts to achieve that end.

"2. The party States find that included in the large movement of population among all sections of the Nation are many qualified educational personnel who move for family and other personal reasons but who are hindered in using their professional skill and experience in their new locations. Variations from State to State in requirements for qualifying educational personnel discourage such personnel from taking the steps necessary to qualify in other States. As a consequence, a significant number of professionally prepared and experienced educators is lost to our school systems. Facilitating the employment of qualified educational personnel, without reference to their States of origin, can increase the available educational resources. Participation in this Agreement can increase the availability of educational manpower.

"Article II—Definitions

"As used in this Agreement and contracts made pursuant to it, unless the context clearly requires otherwise:

"1. 'Educational personnel' means persons who must meet requirements pursuant to State law as a condition of employment in educational programs.

"2. 'Designated State official' means the education official of a State selected by that State to negotiate and enter into, on behalf of his State, contracts pursuant to this Agreement.

"3. 'Accept', or any variant thereof, means to recognize and give effect to one or more determinations of another State relating to the qualifications of educational personnel in lieu of making or requiring a like determination that would otherwise be required by or pursuant to the laws of a receiving State.

"4. 'State' means a State, territory, or possession of the United States; the District of Columbia; or the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico.

"5. 'Originating State' means a State (and the subdivision thereof, if any) whose determination that certain educational personnel are qualified to be employed for specific duties in schools is acceptable in accordance with the terms of a contract made pursuant to Article III.

"6. 'Receiving State' means a State (and the subdivisions thereof) which accept educational personnel in accordance with the terms of a contract made pursuant to Article III.

"Article III—Interstate Educational Personnel Contracts

"1. The designated State official of a party State may make one or more contracts on behalf of his State with one or more other party States providing for the acceptance of educational personnel. Any such contract for the period of its duration shall be applicable to and binding on the States whose designated State officials enter into it, and the subdivisions of those States, with the same force and effect as if incorporated in this Agreement. A designated State official may enter into a contract pursuant to this Article only with States in which he finds that there are programs of education, certification standards or other acceptable qualifications that assure preparation or qualification of educational personnel on basis sufficiently comparable, even though not identical to that prevailing in his own State.

"2. Any such contract shall provide for:

"(a) Its duration.

"(b) The criteria to be applied by an originating State in qualifying educational personnel for acceptance by a receiving State.

"(c) Such waivers, substitutions, and conditional acceptances as shall aid the practical effectuation of the contract without sacrifice of basic educational standards.

"(d) Any other necessary matters.

"3. No contract made pursuant to this Agreement shall be for a term longer than five years by any such contract may be renewed for like or lesser periods.

"4. Any contract dealing with acceptance of educational personnel on the basis of their having completed an educational program shall specify the earliest date or dates on which originating State approval of the program or programs involved can have occurred. No contract made pursuant to this Agreement shall require acceptance by a receiving State of any person qualified because of successful completion of a program prior to January 1, 1954.

"5. The certification or other acceptance of a person who has been accepted pursuant to the terms of a contract shall not be revoked or otherwise impaired because the contract has expired or been terminated. However, any certificate or other qualifying document may be revoked or suspended on any ground which would be sufficient for revocation or suspension of a certificate or other qualifying document initially granted or approved in the receiving State.

"6. A contract committee composed of the designated State officials of the contracting States or their representatives shall keep the contract under continuous review, study means of improving its administration, and report no less frequently than once a year to the heads of the appropriate education agencies of the contracting States.

"Article IV—Approved and Accepted Programs

"1. Nothing in this Agreement shall be construed to repeal or otherwise modify any law or regulation of a party State relating to the approval of programs of educational preparation having effect solely on the qualification of educational personnel within that State.

"2. To the extent that contracts made pursuant to this Agreement deal with the educational requirements for the proper qualification of educational personnel, acceptance of a program of educational preparation shall be in accordance with such procedures and requirements as may be provided in the applicable contract.

"Article V—Interstate Cooperation

"The party States agree that:

"1. They will, so far as practicable, prefer the making of multilateral contracts pursuant to Article III of this Agreement.

"2. They will facilitate and strengthen cooperation in interstate certification and other elements of educational personnel qualification and for this purpose shall cooperate with agencies, organizations, and associations interested in certification and other elements of educational personnel qualification.

"Article VI—Agreement Evaluation

"The designated State officials of any party States may meet from time to time as a group to evaluate progress under the Agreement, and to formulate recommendations for changes.

"Article VII—Other Arrangements

"Nothing in this Agreement shall be construed to prevent or inhibit other arrangements or practices of any party State or States to facilitate the interchange of educational personnel.

"Article VIII—Effect and Withdrawal

"1. This Agreement shall become effective when enacted into law by two States. Thereafter it shall become effective as to any State upon its enactment of this Agreement.

"2. Any party State may withdraw from this Agreement by enacting a statute repealing the same, but no such withdrawal shall take effect until one year after the Governor of the withdrawing State has given notice in writing of the withdrawal to the Governors of all other party States.

"3. No withdrawal shall relieve the withdrawing State of any obligation imposed upon it by a contract to which it is a party. The duration of contracts and the methods and conditions of withdrawal therefrom shall be those specified in their terms.

"Article IX—Construction and Severability

"This Agreement shall be liberally construed so as to effectuate the purposes thereof. The provisions of this Agreement shall be severable and if any phrase, clause, sentence, or provision of this Agreement is declared to be contrary to the constitution of any State or of the United States, or the application thereof to any Government, agency, person, or circumstance is held invalid, the validity of the remainder of this Agreement and the applicability thereof to any Government, agency, person, or circumstance shall not be affected thereby. If this Agreement shall be held contrary to the constitution of any State participating therein, the Agreement shall remain in full force and effect as to the State affected as to all severable matters."

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

§ 31-1802. Designated State official.

The "designated State official" for the District of Columbia shall be the Superintendent of Schools of the District of Columbia. The Superintendent shall enter into contracts pursuant to Article III of the Agreement only with the approval of the specific text thereof by the Board of Education of the District of Columbia. (Dec. 7, 1974, Pub. L. 93-515, title I, § 102, 88 Stat. 1615.)

§ 31-1803. Filing and publication of contracts.

True copies of all contracts made on behalf of the District of Columbia pursuant to the Agreement shall be kept on file in the office of the Board of Education of the District of Columbia and in the office of the Mayor of the District of Columbia. The Superintendent of Schools shall publish all such contracts in convenient form. (Dec. 7, 1974, Pub. L. 93-515, title I, § 103, 88 Stat. 1615.)

§ 31-1901. Authority of Council.

The enactment of this act by the Council is done pursuant to the authority vested in the Council under section 1-144(b). (Oct. 21, 1975, D.C. Law 1-22, § 2, 22 DCR 2083.)

SHORT TITLE

The first section of Act Oct. 21, 1975, D.C. Law 1-22, provided "That this act [enacting this chapter] may be cited as the 'Commission on the Arts and Humanities Act.'"

REPEALERS; TRANSFER OF PROPERTY ETC.

Section 8 of Act Oct. 21, 1975, D.C. Law 1-22, provided: "The order of the Commission[er] of the District of Columbia, numbered 74-4, issued January 7, 1974, is hereby repealed and the Commission on the Arts and Humanities established by that order is abolished. All property, records, and unexpended balances of appropriations and other money available to that Commission on the Arts and Humanities is transferred to the Commission established by this act."

§ 31-1902. Definitions.

As used in this chapter—

(1) The term "Mayor" means the Mayor of the District of Columbia established under section 1-161.

(2) The term "Council" means the Council of the District of Columbia established under section 1-141.

(3) The term "Commission" means the Commission on the Arts and Humanities established by section 31-1903.

(4) The term "arts" includes but is not limited to music (instrumental and vocal), dance, drama, folk art, creative writing, architecture and allied fields, painting, sculpture, photography, graphic and craft arts, industrial design, costume and fashion design, motion pictures, television, radio, tape and sound recording, and the arts related to the presentation, performance, execution, exhibition of those major art forms, and the study and application of the arts to the human environment.

(5) The term "humanities" includes, but is not limited to, the study of the following: language, both modern and classical; linguistics; literature; history; jurisprudence; philosophy; archeology; comparative religion; ethics; the history, criticism, theory, and practice of the arts; those aspects of the social sciences which have humanistic content and employ humanistic methods; and the study and application of the humanities to the human environment with particular attention to the relevance of the humanities to the current conditions of national life. (Oct. 21, 1975, D.C. Law 1-22, § 3, 22 DCR 2083.)

§ 31-1903. Establishment of Commission.

(a) In order to evaluate and initiate action on matters relating to the arts, to encourage programs and the development of programs which promote progress in the arts, there is established, in the Office of the Mayor, in the District of Columbia, a commission to be known as the Commission on the Arts and Humanities. The Commission shall consist of eighteen members appointed by the Mayor, with the advice and consent of the Council. Each member appointed to the Commission shall be a person who has displayed an interest or an ability in one of the various fields of the arts or humanities and/or has been active in the furtherance of the arts or humanities in the District of Columbia. Members shall be appointed to ensure that they are representative of all the various geographic areas and neighborhoods within the District of Columbia.

(b) Members of the Commission shall serve terms of three years; except, of the members first appointed, six members shall be appointed for one year, six members shall be appointed for two years, and six shall be appointed for three years, as determined by the Mayor. Members of the Commission may be reappointed, but cannot serve more than two consecutive terms. Terms shall regularly begin on 1 July and end on 30 June of the respective calendar years, including the members first appointed.

(c) Should a vacancy occur, a successor shall be appointed by the Mayor within 30 days, with the advice and consent of the Council to serve until the end of the term of the member whom that successor succeeds. Failing to receive the nomination within the 30 days, the Council shall appoint a person to fill the vacancy. Members of the Commission on the Arts and Humanities established under Organization Order number 74-4 of January 7, 1974, issued by the Commissioner of the District of Columbia, shall continue to serve until the members of the Commission established under this chapter are appointed and qualify. The Mayor shall nominate members to the new commission within thirty days of October 21, 1975.

(d) The Mayor shall nominate the chairperson for the Commission.

(e) Members of the Commission shall serve without compensation, but shall be entitled to receive, in accordance with applicable District of Columbia regulations, reimbursement for expenses incurred while actually performing duties vested in the Commission. (Oct. 21, 1975, D.C. Law 1-22, § 4, 22 DCR 2084.)

CODIFICATION

In subsec. (c), "October 21, 1975" has been substituted for "enactment of this act".

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in section 31-1902.

§ 31-1904. Powers.

The Commission shall—

(a) take action concerning the needs of the residents of the District of Columbia for activities in the arts and humanities, and concerning the development and improvement of activities in the arts and humanities in the District of Columbia;

(b) prepare an annual plan of artistic projects and productions in the District of Columbia meeting the requirements of sections 5(c) and 5(g) of the National Foundation on the Arts and Humanities Act of 1973, and act as the designated State agency for the District of Columbia, as referred to in Section 5(g)(2)(A) of the Foundation on Arts and Humanities Act of 1965, as amended;

(c) make grants to individuals and groups of individuals for projects and productions in the arts and humanities;

(d) cooperate with governmental departments and agencies, private organizations, and residents of the District of Columbia to develop and undertake programs which will encourage maximum participation in activities in the arts and humanities and promote greater appreciation and enjoyment of the arts and humanities;

(e) accept gifts, contributions and bequests of money and property to carry out the purposes of this chapter, which gifts shall be deposited in any depository in compliance with the laws of the District of Columbia;

(f) be empowered to appoint advisory panels in the various fields of the arts and humanities, as the Commission may deem necessary, the members of which shall serve without compensation;

(g) adopt and modify by-laws and be empowered to adopt regulations as authorized by law. (Oct. 21, 1975, D.C. Law 1-22, § 5, 22 DCR 2086.)

§ 31-1905. Administration.

(a) There shall be an executive director for the Commission who shall be appointed by the Commission. The executive director shall be the chief administrative officer of the Commission and shall be responsible for supervising the remainder of the staff of the Commission. He shall report regularly to the Commission on his activities. The executive director shall receive annual compensation fixed in accordance with chapter 51 of Title 5, U.S. Code.

(b) The Commission shall meet monthly, except when a meeting is cancelled by the chairperson and a majority of the Commission. Special meetings of the Commission may be called by the Mayor, Council, chairperson of the Commission, or upon the request of five members of the Commission.

(c) The Commission shall prepare and submit to the Mayor an annual budget to be included in the regular budget process of the District of Columbia developed in accordance with subchapter I of chapter 2A of title 47.

(d) The Chairperson shall submit to the Mayor and the Council the annual reports of the Commission's activities, and its plans, recommendations, and projections for the following year. These reports shall accompany the budget request in subsection (c). (Oct. 21, 1975, D.C. Law 1-22, § 6, 22 DCR 2087.)

§ 31-1906. Miscellaneous.

(a) The Mayor shall instruct the Office of Management and Budget Systems to coordinate with the Commission the establishment of a bookkeeping and accounting system to allow for swift transference of grants monies from the District Government to a recipient, and shall instruct that Office, in concert with the Commission, to establish a voucher system which would also allow for the swift transference of funds from the District Government to grant recipients.

(b) Nominees for the Commission shall be residents of the District of Columbia.

(c) The Commission shall establish procedures in its by-laws to handle conflicts of interest in the awarding of grants, when any commissioner has either a structural or fiduciary relationship with a grantee. (Oct. 21, 1975, D.C. Law 1-22, § 7, 22 DCR 2088.)

Chapter 4.—NARCOTIC DRUGS

§ 33-401. Definitions.

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Cannabis

Evidence sustained defendant's conviction for unlawful distribution of marijuana even though the marijuana which he concededly sold to undercover officer was not necessarily of the species Cannabis sativa L., the only species of marijuana which is specifically named in federal statutes and local statutes of the District of Columbia. United States v. S. A. Walton (1975, 514 F. 2d 201, 168 U.S. App. D.C. 305).

Congress in enacting provision proscribing possession of narcotic drug, which was defined as including "cannabis" which was in turn defined as including all parts of the plant Cannabis sativa L., did not intend to declare contraband only one particular species of cannabis and legalize the possession in the District of Columbia of all other species, if any, of cannabis; Congress intended to ban the manufacture, use and possession of all of chemical THC contained in and extractable from cannabis plants. United States v. V. H. Johnson (D.C. App. 1975, 333 A. 2d 393).

§ 33-402. Acts declared unlawful.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Appeal and error

Where, although defendants in joint drug prosecution failed in trial court to raise contention that joinder of both federal and District of Columbia charges deprived them of equal protection of laws, such issue presented sole question of law which would not be materially illuminated by development of further record in trial court, Court of Appeals would consider such issue despite its being raised for first time on appeal. United States v. G. E. Jones (1975, 527 F. 2d 817, — U.S. App. D.C. —).

Even though government presented strong case against defendant, error in permitting reference to statement made by defendant at the time he was arrested to the effect that he was addicted, which statement had not been disclosed to defendant despite requests, could not be held harmless as the statement not only impeached defendant's credibility but undermined a significant element in his defense, i.e., that he had not been addicted at the time of his arrest. United States v. S. J. Lewis (1975, 511 F. 2d 798, 167 U.S. App. D.C. 232).

Constitutionality

Trial court, which dismissed prosecutions for unlawful possession of marijuana on ground that statutory scheme of criminal prohibitions and penalties for mere possession is unconstitutional under the Eighth Amendment, misconceived its function in its approach to the constitutionality of the statute when it weighed evidence as to harmful effects of use of marijuana and resolved the conflict to its own satisfaction; since matter was at least debatable, court should have deferred to congressional judgments and, in any event, since subject matter was under consideration by Congress judicial action constituted unwarranted intrusion into the legislative province. United States v. I. D. Thorne et ano. (D.C. App. 1974, 325 A.2d 764).

Construction

Congress in enacting provision proscribing possession of narcotic drug, which was defined as including "cannabis" which was in turn defined as including all parts of the plant Cannabis sativa L., did not intend to declare contraband only one particular species of cannabis and legalize the possession in the District of Columbia of all other species, if any, of cannabis; Congress intended to ban the manufacture, use and possession of all of chemical THC contained in and extractable from cannabis plant. United States v. V. H. Johnson (D.C. App. 1975, 333 A. 2d 393).

Defense of addiction

Even if Court of Appeals is not statutorily precluded from permitting criminal defendant charged with possession of heroin for personal use or possession of narcotics paraphernalia to raise affirmative defense of lack of common-law criminal responsibility due to heroin addiction, Court would not upset balance of multipronged effort to reduce heroin addiction through law enforcement and treatment. L. F. Gorham v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 339 A. 2d 401).

Congress' avowed intent to prosecute and convict drug users where indicated for all crime nullifies authority of Court of Appeals to formulate a new common-law rule of criminal responsibility which would insulate those same drug users from criminal punishment. Id.

Decision permitting a defendant charged with possession of narcotics and narcotics paraphernalia to raise affirmative defense that he lacked capacity to refrain from using narcotics by reason of drug addiction can not be rested on trial court record which does not disclose basis for expert witness' conclusion that defendant had an overwhelming compulsion psychologically to use heroin and there was no showing whether finding of addiction related to criminal responsibility or only to habitual use. W. R. Franklin v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 339 A. 2d 398).

Dismissal

Motions judge erred in dismissing prosecutions for possession of narcotics with prejudice for want of prosecution after arresting officer failed to appear at hearing on accused's motion to suppress following dismissal of prior prosecution for want of prosecution because of officer's failure to appear at trial where accused made no proffer of evidence that he had been prejudiced by delay and advanced no claim that he had been denied a speedy trial and less than one year had elapsed between date of arrest and hearing on motion to suppress. United States v. R. W. Mack (D.C. App. 1972, 298 A. 2d 509).

Double jeopardy

Where trial court was informed when defendant failed to appear for trial that defendant was in jail, was suffering from heroin withdrawal symptoms and was quite ill and defendant might have been unable to attend trial for several days, grant of mistrial was not unreasonable and retrial was not barred by the double jeopardy clause. M. R. Glover v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 301 A. 2d 219).

Entrapment

Evidence including statement of person to police that defendant could probably get some marijuana or probably had some, that when officers entered defendant's apartment they observed a "roach slip" such as used in smoking marijuana cigarettes and that defendant responded favorably to officers' statement that they wished marijuana was sufficient to defeat defense of entrapment to charge of unlawful possession of marijuana by defendant who claimed he was a mere conduit in the delivery of marijuana to officers who had been introduced to defendant by person who claimed to be a friend of defendant. United States v. J. L. Tyson (1972, 470 F.2d 381, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 233; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 1512, 410 U.S. 985).

Evidence—Admissibility

In narcotics prosecution, trial court committed reversible error in admitting into evidence hearsay rent and utility receipts bearing defendant's name for purpose of showing who was living in apartment where drugs were found. United States v. S. E. Watkins (1975, 519 F. 2d 294, 171 U.S. App. D.C. 158).

Where government had stated, in response to motion to suppress written statements made by defendant at the time of his arrest, that defendant did not make any statements at the time of his arrest which government intended to use against him and where neither police report given to defendant nor grand jury and preliminary hearing testimony indicated that defendant made any statements to arresting officers, trial court should have excluded any reference to oral statement made at time of arrest by defendant, that he used narcotics and that he "shot" in his ankle. United States v. S. J. Lewis (1975, 511 F. 2d 798, 167 U.S. App. D.C. 232).

Where police officer approached automobile stopped in left lane of road on driver's side to inform driver that she could not make left turn, observed driver smoking colored cigarette, smelled strange odor of cigarette, observed furtive motions, ordered occupants from automobile, and looked in automobile to assure that no weapons were present, vial of marijuana in plain view on floor of automobile was admissible. United States v. J. A. Burton and J. L. Burton (D.C. App. 1974, 327 A. 2d 308).

Evidence of defendant's 11-month-old conviction for possession of heroin was admissible in prosecution for possession of marijuana as substantive evidence of defendant's predisposition to commit the offense thereby rebutting his entrapment defense. United States v. J. L. Tyson (1972, 470 F. 2d 381, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 233; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 1512, 410 U.S. 985).

Where issue of defendant's prior involvement with narcotics was raised by him in his direct testimony in prosecution for possession of marijuana, and he attempted to convey to jury an impression of innocence of prior narcotics trafficking, evidence of recent conviction for possession of heroin was admissible to challenge the inference defendant sought to suggest. Id.

Where officers, when they arrived to execute search warrant, expected another person to be residing at address, and instead discovered that premises were occupied by defendant, who was not then there, and when defendant arrived he was asked to accompany officers to a bedroom, and there he was confronted with narcotics and paraphernalia and asked if he recognized the items and if they were his, there was no custodial interrogation of kind limited in Miranda decision, and inculpatory statements made by defendant were admissible. J. B. N. Tyler v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 298 A. 2d 224).

— Sufficiency

Evidence in prosecution for possession of narcotics was insufficient to show that defendant had constructive possession thereof where such evidence consisted only of showing that defendant was present in apartment where narcotics were found. United States v. S. E. Watkins (1975, 519 F. 2d 294, 171 U.S. App. D.C. 158).

Conviction of defendant of unlawful possession of narcotic drugs was supported by evidence that, while one police officer was momentarily distracted while questioning defendant in her apartment, second officer waiting outside saw packet of heroin being thrown from defendant's window. United States v. M. J. Belt (1975, 514 F. 2d 837, 169 U.S. App. D.C. 1).

Evidence sustained defendant's conviction for unlawful distribution of marijuana even though the marijuana which he concededly sold to undercover officer was not necessarily of the species Cannabis sativa L., the only species of marijuana which is specifically named in federal statutes and local statutes of the District of Columbia. United States v. S. A. Walton (1975, 514 F. 2d 201, 168 U.S. App. D.C. 305).

Evidence that defendant when arrested had bottle "filled to the brim" with greenish weed and that he had twice attempted to scatter and contaminate contents by spilling them on floor sustained conviction for possession of marijuana, although only 16 milligrams remained for use at trial. C. C. Jones v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 318 A. 2d 888).

Record sustained finding that minor defendant, who produced witness who recalled events of day in question and exculpated defendant, was not prejudiced, in offering defense, by delay between sale and arrest, though last two months of delay between sale and arrest was questionably unreasonable. In the Matter of G. T. (D.C. App. 1973, 304 A. 2d 865).

— Suppression

Upon motion to suppress evidence obtained without search warrant, although trial court improperly ruled that defendant had burden of establishing that his rights were violated, such error was harmless, where prosecutor made the arresting officer, whom he was apparently about to call for the State, available for examination by defense counsel, who was permitted to treat him as adverse witness, and where prosecutor also turned over for inspection and possible use for impeachment by the defense the arrest reports which would ordinarily not be given to the defense until after direct examination. R. D. Malcolm v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 332 A. 2d 917).

At suppression hearing, defendant was not entitled to search warrant affidavits in which informant provided a "tip" which triggered police action, which affidavits were filed in previous cases. Id.

The decision authorizing warrantless search of hotel room in which sawed-off shotgun had been observed did not require court to reverse decision which had suppressed narcotics seized in warrantless search of hotel room in which narcotics had been observed. United States v. A. J. Costa and V. J. Barnes (1973, 356 F. Supp. 606; aff'd 479 F. 2d 922, 156 U.S. App. D.C. 200).

Officer who observed defendant, a high school student outside school building, trying to stuff some money into envelope similar to those used in other narcotics transactions at the school and who saw a known narcotics addict approach defendant who started to run when officer reached for the envelope and tore a portion of the envelope from defendant's hand did not have probable cause to arrest defendant at the moment the envelope was seized, and heroin found in the envelope should have been suppressed. F. L. Waters v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 311 A. 2d 835).

Failure of trial court to consider tardy oral motion to suppress evidence did not vitiate conviction where court permitted counsel to develop point respecting validity of seizure and there was no showing that seizure was invalid. G. F. Thompson v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 307 A. 2d 764).

Harmless error

Any error in marijuana possession prosecution in failure to give proffered instruction relating to burden of proving possession of usable quantity of narcotics was harmless where instruction was in some respect lacking factual predicate, counsel vigorously argued theory, and instructions given were marginally adequate. C. C. Jones v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 318 A. 2d 888).

Joinder

Where, although defendants were prosecuted in single proceeding in federal district court both for possession of heroin with intent to distribute in violation of Comprehensive Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Act of 1970 and for possession of heroin in violation of this section, they were convicted and sentenced only under this section, there was no impermissible joinder of judgments. United States v. G. E. Jones (1975, 527 F. 2d 817, — U.S. App. D.C. —).

Mistrial

Where defendant's incarceration on other charge, hospitalization and illness due to heroin withdrawal symptoms had prevented his attendance at trial, there was manifest necessity which permitted retrial even though trial court failed to consult defense counsel regarding feasibility of a continuance before mistrial was granted in prosecution for unlawful possession of heroin. M. R. Glover v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 301 A. 2d 219).

Defendant was not entitled to claim for first time on appeal that the information concerning defendant's health on which trial court declared mistrial was erroneous and that double jeopardy barred the reprosecution of defendant on possession of heroin charge. Id.

Plain error

In prosecution for carrying a dangerous weapon, assaulting a police officer, and unlawful possession of narcotic drug, sustaining as valid Fifth Amendment privilege claimed by defense witness called to corroborate testimony of defendant, who did not claim infringement of his own Fifth Amendment privilege against self-incrimination, was not plain error, on theory that he was denied a fair trial, where there was no pretense the record would support an inference of prosecutorial misconduct or that Government's case was buttressed by the witness' exercise of the privilege against self-incrimination, and where witness was called by defense counsel with full prior knowledge that privilege would be invoked. R. W. Mack v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 310 A. 2d 234).

Possession

Position of dominion or control over narcotics should not be lightly imputed to one found in another's apartment or home; if inference of constructive possession must be made, jury must have before it information about regularity with which person in question occupied place and about his special relationship with owner or renter. United States v. S. E. Watkins (1975, 519 F. 2d 294, 171 U.S. App. D.C. 158).

Probable cause

Where informant supplied police officer with detailed information relating to possession of marijuana by defendant and every aspect of such information, including place, time, and physical appearance, was checked and verified by police officer, police officer had probable cause for arrest. United States v. R. D. Malcolm (D.C. App. 1975, 331 A. 2d 329).

Actions of marijuana-sniffing dog regularly used at port of entry and found to be consistently reliable furnished probable cause for issuance of warrant for search of footlockers at bus terminal. United States v. S. M. Fulero (1974, 498 F. 2d 748, 162 U.S. App. D.C. 206).

Where a concededly reliable informer gave tip based on personal knowledge which described defendant in great detail, and he gave defendant's alias and his present location and before arrest officers were able to corroborate the informant's tip in every detail with the exception of actual possession of narcotics, probable cause was established and narcotic and implement seized from defendant at time of arrest did not need to be suppressed. R. Banks v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 305 A. 2d 256).

Where police officer trained in field of narcotics viewed photographs taken by another officer and was of firm belief that plants depicted in photographs were marijuana plants and on personally observing the yard such officer saw one plant growing and that plants growing in flowerpots in yard as depicted in photographs had been removed to rear of porch and several plants were missing altogether, there was probable cause for issuance of warrant to search both yard and premises. United States v. M. E. McMillon (1972, 350 F. Supp. 593).

Officer's observations of defendant, who was standing beside sink in his employer's restroom and appeared startled upon seeing policeman, who had entered in order to use the restroom, of defendant's freezing against the wall and of coin purse located on sink and similar to those in which officer had found narcotics in the past did not constitute probable cause for officer, who admitted that he had no reason to believe a crime was being committed when he looked into coin purse, to arrest defendant prior to the search, and search, which revealed narcotics paraphernalia and heroin, was therefore invalid. L. D. McWilliams v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 298 A. 2d 38).

Prosecution

Factors to be considered on contention of unreasonable delay in prosecution of narcotics charge are: (1) reasonableness of delay, (2) plausibility of prejudice to defendant, and (3) reliability of government's techniques and proof of defendant's identity. In the Matter of G. T. (D.C. App. 1973, 304 A. 2d 865).

Right to privacy

Where yard was enclosed by stake fence approximately six feet in height and overgrown with vines and bushes, and police officers who took pictures of marijuana plants growing in yard and on porch of dwelling while standing on porch of adjacent home with owner's permission did not physically intrude into the defendant's premises, there was no violation of defendant's right to privacy. United States v. M. E. McMillon (1972, 350 F. Supp. 593).

Fact that officers who, with permission of owner, used adjacent porch to see into yard surrounded by stake fence approximately six feet in height had to stand on their toes, or lean around side of partition, or stand on box did not preclude their observations from being within scope of "plain view" doctrine. Id.

Right to remain silent

Unacceptable burden upon defendant's Fifth Amendment privilege to remain silent was imposed by trial court in narcotics prosecution when, after admitting hearsay rent receipts, court stated that defendant would have opportunity to rebut probative value of receipts when she testified. United States v. S. E. Watkins (1975, 519 F.2d 294, 171 U.S. App. D.C. 158).

Search and seizure

Fact that accused was accompanied by woman when he walked up alley at night in high crime area of city and moved his right arm to left side of his coat upon hearing unidentified person yell "police officers" did not constitute reasonable grounds for initial seizure of accused by police officers, and thus any subsequent search of accused flowing from unreasonable seizure cannot be sustained. A. E. Curtis v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 349 A. 2d 469).

Where police acted upon information received from an informant, whose reliability had been established by prior contacts with the police and since information furnished by him proved accurate, describing in detail the activities of the defendant, his physical description, his present location, and that narcotics were contained in a cigarette package in his possession, the information supplied by the informant was sufficient to establish probable cause to apprehend the defendant and seize the contraband heroin and fact that defendant was not formally placed under arrest until contraband heroin was seized from his pocket is not material. E. Smith v. United States (D.C. App. 1975, 348 A. 2d 891).

Police who came to defendant's house with arrest warrant for defendant's brother, who was charged with a violent crime, were not required to accept as true defendant's statement that brother was not home and were entitled to search the home for the suspect and to seize marijuana which was in plain view within the home. V. S. Hawkins v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 319 A. 2d 328; cert. denied 95 S. Ct. 233, 419 U.S. 969).

Where hotel registration slip showed registration at 1:55 a.m., April 30th, at daily rate of $23 plus tax, receipt dated April 30th, showed occupant of room was being charged for two days, hotel had not removed occupant's belongings at time search was made after normal check-out time, possession of room had not reverted to hotel and was still vested in registered occupant and hotel manager could not validly consent to warrantless search of room. United States v. A. J. Costa and V. J. Barnes (1973, 356 F. Supp. 606; aff'd 479 F. 2d 922, 156 U.S. App. D.C. 200).

Following arrest of defendant under warrant for operating motor vehicle after revocation of operator's permit, police officer was authorized to conduct "full field search" of defendant, remove envelope from pocket inside coat and open it to determine if it contained narcotics. United States v. K. C. Simmons (D.C. App. 1973, 302 A. 2d 728).

Where police officer who had heard radio broadcast stating that three subjects were using narcotics in automobile parked at rear of warehouse went to the location and saw three persons seated in automobile matching description which had been broadcast, officer had justification for further affirmative action and his determination to identify himself as police officer and open the car's door simultaneously, while directing the occupants to get out, was permissible, and upon observing bottle-top cooker and full syringe on floor of the car, seizure of the evidence and arrest of the subjects became appropriate and there was no violation of constitutional right to be protected against unreasonable search and seizure. United States v. E. Mitchell (D.C. App. 1973, 299 A. 2d 540).

Police officer who, while walking his beat in an area considered high in narcotic traffic, noticed defendant and two other young men standing in the shadows of a building, who observed that their hands were "passing and changing" among them, who crossed the street to investigate whereupon defendant began to walk away rapidly, who called out "I would like to talk with you a minute," in response to which defendant, within the earshot of pedestrians, shouted a four-letter expletive and ran, had probable cause to arrest defendant for disorderly conduct; thus, the ensuing search for weapons incident to the arrest, which search yielded a bag of heroin, was likewise lawful. W. Von Sleichter v. United States (1972, 472 F. 2d 1244, 153 U.S. App. D.C. 169; aff'g 267 A. 2d 336; cert. denied 93 S.Ct. 555, 409 U.S. 1063).

Where on executing warrant authorizing search of after-hours club or bar for a "gaming table and other related gambling paraphernalia," police officers knocked twice and announced they were police officers with a search warrant, after hearing someone run away from the door, officers waited approximately 30 seconds and then forced door open and from previous observations police had probable cause to believe that extensive gambling was being carried on, police had sufficient grounds to search the individuals present and tinfoil packet found on in-depth search of an occupant was properly seized and would be admissible in prosecution for possession of heroin; officers had reasonable cause to believe that occupants possessed, concealed and were about to remove or destroy evidence for which they had a search warrant. United States v. W. Miller (D.C. App. 1972, 298 A. 2d 34).

Where person who gave consent to search apartment was lawful cotenant who had right to be present in at least the jointly shared areas of the apartment, defendant by sharing his apartment ran risk that cotenant would consent to search of common areas of that abode and marijuana found in the apartment was admissible. B. F. Villine v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 297 A. 2d 785).

Where police officer was told by another that defendant, whom officer had questioned, had a syringe under wig, officer's momentary stopping of defendant, inquiry about wig, and request to defendant to remove her hat were reasonable, and defendant's denial of wearing a wig and its obvious presence furnished independent observation and corroboration which gave rise to a reasonable basis to arrest defendant and seize contents of her hand, which she had removed from beneath wig and which contained syringe and a bag of methadone, and to seize tinfoil pack, which apparently contained heroin, from starch box from which defendant began to eat at police station. United States v. S. P. Oliver (D.C. App. 1972, 297 A. 2d 778).

Sentence

Imposition of concurrent five-year sentences on conviction of receiving, concealing and facilitating concealment of narcotic drugs, in violation of federal law, and of knowingly possessing narcotic drugs, in violation of local law, did not constitute cruel and unusual punishment; however, sentence was to be vacated and case, which grew out of indictment filed in September of 1970, was to be remanded to permit full consideration of disposition under Narcotic Addict Rehabilitation Act. United States v. M. A. Hunter (1973, 485 F. 2d 1035, 158 U.S. App. D.C. 256).

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Standing

Challenge to punishment provision for unlawful possession of marijuana as constituting cruel and unusual punishment was premature where no defendant had been convicted or sentenced for possession; defendants, who had not been tried on the information, had no standing to argue that the maximum penalties constituted cruel and unusual punishment. United States v. I. D. Thorne et ano. (D.C. App. 1974, 325 A.2d 764).

§ 33-424. Effect of acquittal or conviction under Federal narcotic laws.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Appeal and error

Where, although defendants in joint drug prosecution failed in trial court to raise contention that joinder of both federal and District of Columbia charges deprived them of equal protection of laws, such issue presented sole question of law which would not be materially illuminated by development of further record in trial court, Court of Appeals would consider such issue despite its being raised for first time on appeal. United States v. G. E. Jones (1975, 527 F. 2d 817, — U.S. App. D.C. —).

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Abuse of discretion

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in failing to request presentence report, in prosecution for possession of narcotics paraphernalia and possession of dangerous drug, where information developed concerning defendant was sufficient so that judge could impose appropriate sentence without use of such report. C. E. Rosser v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 313 A. 2d 876).

Evidence—Sufficiency

In prosecution for possession of narcotics paraphernalia and possession of dangerous drug, desoxyn, government established unbroken chain of custody as matter of reasonable probability, in view of testimony showing that envelopes had not been tampered with and sufficiently explaining any reason for delay in delivery. C. E. Rosser v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 313 A. 2d 876).

— Suppression

Where although trial court observed that evidence, i.e., cigarette package-sized item wrapped in white handkerchief, was "handed" to officer and that defendant succeeded in divesting himself of possession by giving item to female, trial court did not rule on issue of consent to search, remand for that purpose was required in view of fact that officers did not otherwise have probable cause to arrest defendant and seize item. R. L. Vicks v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 310 A. 2d 247).

Instructions

Where defendant was charged with possession of dangerous drug, based upon finding in his jacket a lady's change purse containing a pill, defendant contended that just prior to his apprehension, he had met an old girl friend who had given him purse and explained that she was going out with new boyfriend who always took money from her, so that if she were to testify, her testimony would be self-incriminating and defendant had been unable to subpoena her or otherwise secure her voluntary appearance in case, she was not peculiarly within defendant's power to produce and adverse missing witness instruction should not have been given. P. A. Carver v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 312 A. 2d 773.)

Probable cause

Where police officers proceeding in unmarked police car in high narcotics area observed one of several men hand defendant some money, on observing officers defendant began to walk away and then attempted to hand female a white handkerchief containing item similar in size to package of cigarettes, there was no probable cause to arrest defendant and seize handkerchief; there was no two-way exchange of money for an item and desoxyn, which was found in handkerchief, was not in plain view. R. L. Vicks v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 310 A. 2d 247).

Search and seizure

Where occupants of automobile had not been arrested, officers had no probable cause or belief that automobile contained contraband, contents of medicine vial on front seat of car were not in plain view, and officer had no probable cause to believe that vial, which bore an old prescription label, contained contraband or in any way endangered the officer's safety, officer had no authority to seize the vial and examine its contents, though the vial was in plain view. R. G. Christmas v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 314 A. 2d 473).

TITLE 35.—INSURANCE

Chap.	Sec.
18. Insurance Guaranty Association.....	35-1801
19. Holding Company System.....	35-1901

Chapter 1.—INSURANCE DEPARTMENT—GENERAL PROVISIONS

§ 35-101. Department of Insurance created—Superintendent of Insurance—Subject to supervision of Commissioner.

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

§ 35-102. Duties of Superintendent—Copy of charters to be filed—Foreign companies to file power of attorney—Service of process—Superintendent to make rules and regulations.

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Authority of District Council

Fact that no previous cases upheld the municipality's exercise of police power to regulate insurance did not compel conclusion that the District Council was without such power. Firemen's Insurance Company of Washington, D.C. v. W. E. Washington et al. (1973, 483 F. 2d 1323, 157 U.S. App. D.C. 320).

District of Columbia regulation generally precluding the insurance company from considering geographic location in determining whether to insure or continue to insure auto, fire and casualty risks in district and prohibiting cancellation of those policies for other than specified conditions do not conflict with specific provisions of the District of Columbia Insurance Code or the Automobile Insurance Plan and were not preempted thereby; with respect to basic property insurance regulation prohibiting geographic discrimination did conflict with and was preempted by the District of Columbia Insurance Placement Act. Id.

§ 35-106. Superintendent to make annual report.

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

Chapter 2.—PROVISIONS APPLICABLE TO MORE THAN ONE KIND OF INSURANCE

SUBCHAPTER I.—GENERAL PROVISIONS

§ 35-201. Life and fire insurance companies to maintain reinsurance reserves—Suspension of license upon impairment of capital stock—Penalty for acting for unlicensed company—Superintendent may make examination to determine impairment in capital, or insolvency.

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

§ 35-202. Health, accident, and life insurance companies defined—Assets and capital stock required—Amount of policies—Taxation—Reports to Superintendent of Insurance—Examination by Superintendent of Insurance—Appeal to Commissioner—Fraternal beneficial and certain other organizations exempt.

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

§ 35-203. Copy of application to be delivered with policy—Statements in application as defense.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Medical authorization

In light of fact that medical authorization form signed by insured did not contain or call for any information, failure to attach the form to life policy was immaterial and did not bring into play bar of statute requiring an insurance company to include with issued policy a copy of application made by insured, or preclude insurer from defending on ground of insured's failure to disclose his medical history. L. Blair v. The Prudential Insurance Co. of America (1972, 472 F. 2d 1356, 153 U.S. App. D.C. 281).

Purpose

This section requiring an insurance company to include with issued policy a copy of application made by insured was enacted for protection of insured, not the insurance company. L. Blair v. The Prudential Insurance Co. of America (1972, 472 F. 2d 1356, 153 U.S. App. D.C. 281).

Recovery

Even though application for life insurance did not accurately reveal decedent's medical history, and even though there was no showing of fraud and false recording by insurer's agent, named beneficiary was entitled to recover on policy, in view of facts that application was filled out by agent in accordance with standard company practice, not by insured, that application form was highly technical and difficult to understand, that deceased did not study responses with any care but relied on agent before he signed, that deceased revealed name and address of his doctor and insurer made no inquiry of the doctor, and that application form attached to policy when delivered was so reduced in size as to be practically illegible. L. Blair v. Prudential Insurance Company (1973, 366 F. Supp. 859; rev'd and rem'd 506 F. 2d 1321, 165 U.S. App. D.C. 282).

§ 35-407. Annual statement—Verification—Failure to make.

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

§ 35-414. False statements in application for insurance.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Construction

Provision of this section stating that falsity of a statement in application for any policy shall not bar right to recovery thereunder unless such false statement was made with intent to deceive or unless it materially affected either acceptance of risk or hazard assumed by insurer is without ambiguity, and did not require life insurer to prove that applicant's false statement, which was conceded to materially affect the risk assumed, was made with intent to deceive. M. W. Hill, Administratrix etc. v. The Prudential Insurance Company of America (D.C. App. 1974, 315 A.2d 146).

Misrepresentation—Intent to deceive

Life policy, which provided that statements made in an application for insurance "shall be deemed representations and not warranties," did not require insurer to show that applicant's false statement, which was conceded to materially affect the risk assumed, was made with intent to deceive. M. W. Hill, Administratrix etc. v. The Prudential Insurance Company of America (D.C. App. 1974, 315 A.2d 146).

— Material

Proof that an application for insurance contains a false statement which materially affects acceptance of risk or hazard assumed is sufficient to defeat a claim under the policy. M. W. Hill, Administratrix etc. v. The Prudential Insurance Company of America (D.C. App. 1974, 315 A.2d 146).

Notice to insurer

Under District of Columbia law, insurer could not successfully interpose defense of misstatement of, or omission to state, material medical facts in application form, where applicant, at request of insurer's agent, signed application form in blank, applicant and his wife orally gave truthful and full answers to questions on application form as they were propounded by the agent, the agent himself recorded one or more material misstatements of fact on the application form or omitted to record material information, and neither the applicant nor his wife knew of the agent's entry on the application form of any such misstatement or of the agent's omission of any material information, or read the application form either before its submission to insurer, or after policy was issued and returned to insured with application form in reduced form attached to and made part of the issued policy. L. Blair v. The Prudential Insurance Co. of America (1972, 472 F. 2d 1356, 153 U.S. App. D.C. 281).

Recovery

Even though application for life insurance did not accurately reveal decedent's medical history, and even though there was no showing of fraud and false recording by insurer's agent, named beneficiary was entitled to recover on policy, in view of facts that application was filled out by agent in accordance with standard company practice, not by insured, that application form was highly technical and difficult to understand, that deceased did not study responses with any care but relied on agent before he signed, that deceased revealed name and address of his doctor and insurer made no inquiry of the doctor, and that application form attached to policy when delivered was so reduced in size as to be practically illegible. *L. Chapter 5.—DOMESTIC LIFE COMPANIES

§ 35-508. Capital-stock requirements.

(a) A domestic capital-stock company organized under chapters 3-8 of this title shall have a paid-up capital stock of not less than $1,000,000. Each domestic capital-stock company organized under chapters 3-8 of this title, in addition to the paid-up capital stock shall have a surplus paid up equal to at least 50 per centum of such capital stock. Each domestic mutual company organized or doing business under chapters 3-8 of this title shall at all times have a surplus as defined by chapters 3-8 of this title of not less than $1,500,000.

(b) No company shall be exempt from the provisions of this section by reason of its having been incorporated in the District or elsewhere prior to the effective date of this subsection or subsequent amendment, except that in the case of companies authorized in the District of Columbia on (date of passage) and continuously authorized thereafter without any increase or broadening of authority, the minimum capital required of a stock company, or the minimum surplus required of a mutual company shall not be increased by this section. (June 19, 1934, 48 Stat. 1145, ch. 672, Ch. III, § 8; May 4, 1950, 64 Stat. 104, ch. 157, § 4; Aug. 31, 1964, 78 Stat. 764, Pub. L. 88-556, § 1; Aug. 14, 1973, Pub. § 35-535. Investment of funds of domestic companies.

A domestic company shall invest its funds only in—

* * * *

(10) (a) Common stocks of any solvent corporation (other than its own) created under the laws of the United States, or of any State thereof, or the District of Columbia, or the Dominion of Canada, or any Province thereof, which shall have paid common dividends in cash for not less than five years next preceding the purchase of such stocks, and where the bonds and other evidences of indebtedness, if any, and the preferred stock, if any, of such corporation are eligible as investments under the provisions of subsections (7) and (9), respectively, of this section, and where the total investment in the common stock of any one corporation does not exceed 1 per centum of the investing company's admitted assets.

(b) In addition to the investments authorized in paragraph (10)(a), common stocks of any insurance company (other than as prohibited in section 35-540) created under the laws of the United States, or by any State thereof, or the District of Columbia: Provided, however, That stocks may be acquired under this paragraph (10) (b) only (i) with the intention of ultimately acquiring ownership or control of the issuing corporation as an affiliate or a subsidiary, (ii) if such acquisition will not cause the acquiring company's aggregate cost of investments under this paragraph to exceed, in the case of a capital stock company, the amount of capital, surplus, and contingency reserves in excess of $1,500,000, or, in the case of a mutual company, the amount of surplus and contingency reserves in excess of $1,500,000 and (iii) after the Superintendent of Insurance of the District of Columbia has been furnished with such information as he may require and has given to the acquiring company his written approval of the proposed acquisition stating his opinion that it will not substantially lessen competition, will not tend to create a monopoly in any line of insurance, and will not impair the financial stability of the acquiring company.

* * * *

(15) Any domestic life insurance company may also lend or invest its funds, to an extent that the cost of such investments shall not exceed in the aggregate the lesser of (i) 5 per centum of its total admitted assets, or (ii) in the case of a capital stock company, the amount of capital, surplus, and contingency reserves in excess of $1,500,000 or, in the case of a mutual company, the amount of surplus and contingency reserves in excess of $1,500,000, in loans or investments (other than common stocks of insurance companies) not otherwise permitted under this section: Provided, however, That no company shall invest in excess of 1 per centum of its admitted assets in any one such loan or investment. The company shall keep a separate record of all loans and investments made under this subsection. In the event that, subsequently to being made under the provisions of this subsection, a loan or investment is determined to have become qualified under some other part of this section, the company may consider such loan or investment as being held under the applicable provision and such loan or investment shall no longer be considered as having been made under this subsection.

§ 35-710. Group life insurance.

No policy of group life insurance shall be delivered in the District unless it conforms to one of the following descriptions:

- (1) A policy issued to an employer, or to the trustees of a fund established by an employer, which employer or trustee shall be deemed the policyholder, to insure employees of the employer for the benefit of persons other than the employer, subject to the following requirements:

* * * *

(d) The amounts of insurance under the policy must be based upon some plan precluding individual selection either by the employees or by the employer or trustees. No policy may be issued which provides term insurance on any employee which together with any other term insurance under any group life-insurance policy or policies issued to the employers or any of them or to the trustees of a fund established in whole or in part by the employers or any of them exceeds $30,000 unless 300 per centum of the annual compensation of a covered employee, exceeds $30,000, in which event all such insurance shall not exceed $100,000, or 300 per centum of such annual compensation, whichever is less.

(3) A policy issued to a labor union, which shall be deemed the policyholder, to insure members of such union for the benefit of persons other than the union or any of its officials, representatives or agents, subject to the following requirements:

(d) The amounts of insurance under the policy must be based upon some plan precluding individual selection either by the members or by the union. No policy may be issued which provides term insurance on any union member which together with any other term insurance under any group life insurance policies exceeds $30,000 unless 300 per centum of the annual compensation of a covered union member exceeds $30,000, in which event all such insurance shall not exceed $100,000, or 300 per centum of such annual compensation, whichever is less.

(4) A policy issued to the trustees of a fund established by two or more employers in the same industry or by one or more labor unions, or by one or more employers and one or more labor unions, which trustees shall be deemed the policyholder, to insure employees of the employers or members of the unions for the benefit of persons other than the employers or the unions, subject to the following requirements:

(d) The amounts of insurance under the policy must be based upon some plan precluding individual selection either by the insured persons or by the policyholder, employers, or unions. No policy may be issued which provides term insurance on any person which together with any other term insurance under any group life-insurance policy or policies issued to the employers, or any of them, or to the trustees of a fund established in whole or in part by the employers, or any of them, exceeds $30,000 unless 300 per centum of the annual compensation of a covered person exceeds $30,000, in which event all such insurance shall not exceed $100,000, or 300 per centum of such annual compensation, whichever is less.

(6) A policy issued to an association whose eligible members have the same profession, trade, or occupation which has been organized and is maintained for purposes other than that of obtaining insurance, which shall be deemed the policyholder, to insure members, or employees of members, of such association for the benefit of persons other than the association, or any of its officials, representatives, or agents, subject to the following requirements:

(d) The amounts of insurance under the policy must be based on some plan precluding individual selection either by the members or employees, or by the association. No policy may be issued which provides term insurance on any association member or employee which, together with any other term insurance under any group life insurance policy or policies, exceeds $30,000, unless 300 per centum of the annual compensation of such person exceeds $30,000, in which event all such term insurance shall not exceed $100,000, or 300 per centum of such annual compensation, whichever is less.

(9) A policy issued to a duly organized national veterans' organization which has been organized and is maintained for purposes other than that of obtaining insurance, which shall be deemed the policyholder, to insure members of such organization for the benefit of persons other than the organization, or any of its officials, representatives, or agents, subject to the following requirements:

(d) The amounts of insurance under the policy must be based on some plan precluding individual selection either by the members, or by the organization. No policy may be issued which provides term insurance on any organization member which, together with any other term insurance under any group life insurance policy or policies, exceeds $30,000, unless 300 per centum of the annual compensation of such person exceeds $30,000, in which event all such term insurance shall not exceed $100,000, or 300 per centum of such annual compensation, whichever is less.

(As amended Aug. 14, 1973, Pub. L. 93-89, title III, § 301, 87 Stat. 304.)

AMENDMENT

1973—Section 301 of Act Aug. 14, 1973, Pub. L. 93-89, amended subsecs. (1)(d), (3)(d), (4)(d), (6)(d), and (9)(d) as follows: (1) by striking out "$20,000" each place it appeared and inserting in lieu thereof "$30,000"; (2) by striking out "$40,000" each place it appeared and inserting in lieu thereof "$100,000"; and (3) by striking out "150" each place it appeared and inserting in lieu thereof "300".

§ 35-711. Standard provisions for policies of group life insurance.

No policy of group life insurance shall be delivered in the District unless it contains in substance the following provisions, or provisions which in the opinion of the superintendent are more favorable to the persons insured, or at least as favorable to the persons insured and more favorable to the policyholder:

Provided, however, (a) That provisions (6) to (10), inclusive, shall not apply to policies issued to a creditor to insure debtors of such creditor, or to policies issued pursuant to section 35-710(8); (b) that the standard provisions required for individual life-insurance policies shall not apply to group life-insurance policies; (c) that if the group life-insurance policy is on a plan of insurance other than the term plan, it shall contain a nonforfeiture provision or provisions which in the opinion of the superintendent is or are equitable to the insured persons and to the policyholder, but nothing herein shall be construed to require that group life-insurance policies contain the same nonforfeiture provisions as are required for individual life-insurance policies; and (d) that subject to the terms of the policy any person insured under a group life insurance contract, whether issued before or after August 14, 1973, may make to any person, other than his employer, an absolute or collateral assignment of any or all the rights and benefits conferred on him by any provision of such policy or by law, including specifically, but not by way of limitation, any right to designate a beneficiary or beneficiaries thereunder and any right to have an individual policy issued upon termination either of employment or of said policy of group life insurance, but nothing herein shall be construed to have prohibited an insured from making an assignment of all or any part of his rights and privileges under the policy before August 14, 1973, and, subject to the terms of the policy, an assignment by an insured before or after August 14, 1973, is valid for the purposes of vesting in the assignee all rights and privileges so assigned, but without prejudice to the insurer on account of any payment it may make or individual policy it may issue prior to receipt of notice of the assignment:

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Agency relationship

Where property owner did not respond to insurance broker's communications offering to place fire insurance, or otherwise give any indication of intention to accept offer or to again employ broker as owner's agent for such purpose, there was, at time of subsequent telephone conversation, no agency relationship between owner and broker. J. Gallun et al. v. The McLaughlin Company et ano. (D.C. App. 1974, 321 A.2d 216).

When broker procured insurance, agency relationship was terminated and broker owed owner no further duty in respect to such insurance until another agency relationship was created. Id.

§ 35-1801. Declaration of purpose.

The purpose of this chapter is to provide a mechanism for the payment of covered claims under certain insurance policies to avoid excessive delay in payment and to avoid financial loss to claimants or policyholders because of the insolvency of an insurer, to assist in the detection and prevention of insurer insolvencies, and to provide an association to assess the cost of such protection among insurers. (Aug. 14, 1973, Pub. L. 93-89, title I, § 102, 87 Stat. 297.)

SHORT TITLE

The first section of Act Aug. 14, 1973, Pub. L. 93-89, provided: "That this Act [enacting this chapter and amending §§ 1-804a, 1-805, 35-508, 35-535, 35-710, 35-711, 35-1316, 35-1317, 35-1329] may be cited as the 'District of Columbia Insurance Act'."

Section 101 of title I of the same Act provided: "This title [enacting this chapter] shall be known and may be cited as the 'District of Columbia Insurance Guaranty Association Act'."

§ 35-1802. Scope of chapter.

This chapter shall apply to all kinds of direct insurance, except life, title, disability, and mortgage guaranty insurance. (Aug. 14, 1973, Pub. L. 93-89, title I, § 103, 87 Stat. 297.)

§ 35-1803. Definitions.

As used in this chapter—

(1) The term "Mayor" means the Mayor of the District of Columbia or his designated agent.

(2) The term "covered claim" means an unpaid claim, including one for unearned premiums, which arises out of and is within the coverage and not in excess of the applicable limits of an insurance policy to which this chapter applies issued by an insurer, if such insurer becomes an insolvent insurer after August 14, 1973, and (a) the claimant or insured is a resident of the District of Columbia at the time of the insured event; or (b) the property from which the claim arises is permanently located in the District of Columbia. Such term shall not include any amount due any reinsurer, insurer, insurance pool, or underwriting association, as subrogation recoveries or otherwise.

(3) The term "insolvent insurer" means (a) an insurer authorized to transact insurance in the District of Columbia, either at the time the policy was issued or when the insured event occurred, who has been determined to be insolvent by a court of competent jurisdiction.

(4) The term "member insurer" means any person who (a) writes any kind of insurance to which this chapter applies, including the exchange of reciprocal or interinsurance contracts, and (b) is licensed to transact insurance in the District of Columbia.

(5) The term "net direct written premiums" means direct gross premiums written in the District on insurance policies to which this chapter applies, less return premiums thereon and dividends paid or credited to policyholders on such direct business. Such term does not include premiums on contracts between insurers or reinsurers.

(6) The term "person" includes individuals, corporations, associations, exchanges, and partnerships. (Aug. 14, 1973, Pub. L. 93-89, title I, § 104, 87 Stat. 297.)

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

CODIFICATION

In par. (2), "August 14, 1973" has been substituted for "the effective date of this title".

CROSS REFERENCE

Definition of "Association" and "Board", see § 35-1804.

DELEGATION OF FUNCTIONS

Reorg. Ord. No. 43, as amended Oct. 15, 1973, set out in the appendix to title 1, delegated to the Superintendent of Insurance the duties and functions vested in the Commissioner by this chapter.

§ 35-1804. Creation of the Association.

There is created a nonprofit unincorporated legal entity to be known as the District of Columbia Insurance Guaranty Association (hereafter in this chapter referred to as the "Association"). All member insurers shall be and remain members of the Association as a condition of their authority to transact insurance in the District of Columbia. The Association shall perform its functions under a plan of operation established and approved by the Mayor and shall exercise its powers through a Board of Directors (hereafter in this chapter referred to as the "Board"). For purposes of administration and assessment, the Association shall be divided into three separate accounts: (a) the workmen's compensation insurance account; (b) the automobile insurance account; and (c) the account for all other insurance to which this chapter applies. (Aug. 14, 1973, Pub. L. 93-89, title I, § 105, 87 Stat. 297.)

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in section 35-1817.

§ 35-1805. Board of directors.

(a) The Board shall consist of not less than five nor more than nine persons serving terms as established in the plan of operation. The members of the Board shall be selected by member insurers subject to the approval of the Mayor. Vacancies on the Board shall be filled for the remaining period of the term in the same manner as initial appointments. If no members are selected within sixty days after August 14, 1973, the Mayor may appoint the initial members of the Board.

(b) In approving selections to the Board, the Mayor shall consider among other things whether all member insurers are fairly represented.

(c) Members of the Board may be reimbursed from the assets of the Association for expenses incurred by them as members of the Board. (Aug. 14, 1973, Pub. L. 93-89, title I, § 106, 87 Stat. 298.)

§ 35-1806. Powers and duties of the Association.

(a) The Association shall—

(1) be obligated to the extent of the covered claims existing prior to the determination of insolvency and arising within thirty days after the determination of insolvency, or before the policy expiration date if less than thirty days after the determination, or before the insured replaces the policy or causes its cancellation, if he does so within thirty days of the determination, but such obligation shall include only that amount of each covered claim which is in excess of $100 and is less than $300,000, except that the Association shall pay the full amount of any covered claim arising out of a workmen's compensation policy; except in no event shall the Association be obligated to a policyholder or claimant in an amount in excess of the obligation of the insolvent insurer under the policy from which the claim arises;

(2) be deemed the insurer to the extent of its obligation on the covered claims and to such extent shall have all rights, duties, and obligations of the insolvent insurer as if the insurer had not become insolvent;

(3) allocate claims paid and expenses incurred among the three accounts separately, and assess member insurers separately, according to subsection (b) of this section, for each account amounts necessary to pay the obligations of the Association under paragraph (1) of this subsection subsequent to an insolvency, the expenses of handling covered claims subsequent to an insolvency, the cost of examinations under section 35-1811 and other expenses authorized by this title;

(4) investigate claims brought against the Association and adjust, compromise, settle, and pay covered claims to the extent of the Association's obligation and deny all other claims and may review settlements, releases and judgments to which the insolvent insurer or its insureds were parties to determine the extent to which such settlements, releases and judgments may be properly contested;

(5) notify such persons as the Mayor directs under section 35-1808(b)(1);

(6) handle claims through its employees or through one or more insurers or other persons designated, subject to the approval of the Mayor, as servicing facilities, except such designation may be declined by a member insurer; and

(7) reimburse each servicing facility for obligations of the Association paid by the facility and for expenses incurred by the facility while handling claims on behalf of the Association, and pay the other expenses of the Association authorized by this chapter.

(b) The assessments of each member insurer under paragraph (3) of subsection (a) of this section shall be in the proportion that the net direct written premiums of the member insurer for the preceding calendar year on the kinds of insurance in the account bears to the net direct written premiums of all member insurers for the preceding calendar year on the kinds of insurance in the account. Each member insurer shall be notified of the assessment not later than thirty days before it is due. No member insurer may be assessed in any year on any account an amount greater than 2 per centum of that member insurer's net direct written premiums for the preceding calendar year on the kinds of insurance in the account. If the maximum assessment, together with the other assets of the Association in any account, does not provide in any one year in any account an amount sufficient to make all necessary payments from that account, the funds available shall be prorated and the unpaid portion shall be paid as soon thereafter as funds become available. The Association may exempt or defer, in whole or in part, the assessment of any member insurer, if the assessment would cause the member insurer's financial statement to reflect amounts of capital or surplus less than the minimum amounts required for a certificate of authority by any jurisdiction in which the member insurer is authorized to transact insurance. Each member insurer may set off against any assessment, authorized payments made on covered claims and expenses incurred in the payment of such claims by the member insurer if they are chargeable to the account for which the assessment is made.

(c) The Association may—

(1) employ or retain such persons as are necessary to handle claims and perform other duties of the Association;

(2) borrow funds necessary to effect the purposes of this chapter in accord with the plan of operation;

(3) sue or be sued;

(4) negotiate and become a party to such contracts as are necessary to carry out the purpose of this chapter;

(5) perform such other acts as are necessary or proper to effectuate the purpose of this chapter; and

(6) refund to the member insurers in proportion to the contribution of each member insurer to that account that amount by which the assets of the account exceed the liabilities, if, at the end of any calendar year, the Board finds that the assets of the Association in any account exceed the liabilities of that account as estimated by the Board for the coming year.

(Aug. 14, 1973, Pub. L. 93-89, title I, § 107, 87 Stat. 298.)

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in section 35-1807.

§ 35-1807. Plan of operation—Notice of claims.

(a) (1) The Board shall submit to the Mayor a plan of operation and any amendments thereto necessary or suitable to assure the fair, reasonable, and equitable administration of the Association. The plan of operation and any amendments thereto shall become effective upon approval in writing by the Mayor.

(2) If the Board fails to submit a suitable plan of operation within ninety days following August 14, 1973, or if at any time thereafter the Board fails to submit suitable amendments to the plan, the Mayor shall, after notice and hearing, adopt and promulgate such reasonable rules as are necessary or advisable to effectuate the provisions of this chapter. Such rules shall continue in force until modified by the Mayor or superseded by a plan submitted by the Board and approved by the Mayor.

(b) All member insurers shall comply with the plan of operation.

(c) The plan of operation shall—

(1) establish the procedures whereby all the powers and duties of the Association under section 35-1806 will be performed;

(2) establish procedures for handling assets of the Association;

(3) establish the amount and method of reimbursing members of the Board under section 35-1805;

(4) establish procedures by which claims may be filed with the Association and establish acceptable forms of proof of covered claims;

(5) establish regular places and times for meetings of the Board;

(6) establish procedures for records to be kept of all financial transactions of the Association, its agents, and the Board;

(7) provide that any member insurer aggrieved by a final action or decision of the Association may appeal to the Mayor within thirty days after the action or decision;

(8) establish the procedures whereby selections for the Board will be submitted to the Mayor; and

(9) contain additional provisions necessary or proper for the execution of the powers and duties of the Association.

(d) The plan of operation may provide that any or all powers and duties of the Association, except those under section 35-1806 (a) (3) and (c) (2), are delegated to a corporation, association, or other organization which performs or will perform functions similar to those of this Association, or its equivalent, in two or more States. Such a corporation, association, or organization shall be reimbursed as a servicing facility would be reimbursed and shall be paid for its performance of any other functions of the Association. A delegation under this subsection shall take effect only with the approval of both the Board and the Mayor, and may be made only to a corporation, association, or organization which extends protection in a manner substantially similar to that provided by this chapter.

(e) Notice of claims to the receiver or liquidator of the insolvent insurer shall be deemed notice to the Association or its agent and a list of such claims shall be periodically submitted to the Association or similar organization in another State by the receiver or liquidator. (Aug. 14, 1973, Pub. L. 93-89, title I, § 108, 87 Stat. 299.)

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

CODIFICATION

In subsec. (a) (2), "August 14, 1973" has been substituted for "the effective date of this title".

§ 35-1808. Powers and duties of the Mayor.

(a) The Mayor shall—

(1) notify the Association of the existence of an insolvent insurer not later than three days after he receives notice of the determination of the insolvency; and

(2) upon request of the Board provide the Association with a statement of the net direct written premiums of each member insurer.

(b) The Mayor may—

(1) require that the Association notify the insureds of the involvement¹ insurer and any other interested parties of the determination of insolvency and of their rights under this chapter by mail at their last known address, where available, or by publication in a newspaper of general circulation, if sufficient information for notification by mail is not available;

(2) suspend or revoke, after notice and hearing, the certificate of authority to transact insurance in the District of Columbia of any member insurer which fails to pay an assessment when due or fails to comply with the plan of operation, or levy a fine on any member insurer which fails to pay an assessment when due, except such fine shall not exceed 5 per centum of the unpaid assessment per month, except that no fine shall be less than $100 per month; and

(3) revoke the designation of any servicing facility if he finds claims are being handled unsatisfactorily.

(c) All final orders or decisions of the Mayor made under this chapter shall be subject to review in accordance with section 1-1510. (Aug. 14, 1973, Pub. L. 93-89, title I, § 109, 87 Stat. 300.)

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in section 35-1806.

§ 35-1809. Effect of paid claims.

(a) Any person recovering under this chapter shall be deemed to have assigned his rights under the policy to the Association to the extent of his recovery from the Association. Every insured or claimant seeking the protection of this chapter shall cooperate with the Association to the same extent as such person would have been required to cooperate with the insolvent insurer. The Association shall have no cause of action against the insured of the insolvent insurer for any sums it has paid out except such causes of action as the insolvent insurer would have had if such sums had been paid by the insolvent insurer. In the case of an insolvent insurer operating on a plan with assessment liability, payments of claims of the Association shall not operate to reduce the insured's liability to the receiver, liquidator, or statutory successor for unpaid assessments.

(b) The receiver, liquidator, or statutory successor of an insolvent insurer shall be bound by settlements of covered claims by the Association or a similar organization in another State. The court having jurisdiction shall grant such claims priority equal to that which the claimant would have been entitled in the absence of this chapter against the assets of the insolvent insurer.

(c) The Association shall periodically file with the receiver or liquidator of the insolvent insurer statements of the covered claims paid by the Association which shall preserve the rights of the Association against the assets of the insolvent insurer. (Aug. 14, 1973, Pub. L. 93-89, title I, § 110, 87 Stat. 301.)

§ 35-1810. Nonduplication of recovery.

(a) Any person having a claim against an insurer under any provision in an insurance policy, other than a policy of an insolvent insurer which is also a covered claim, shall be required to exhaust first his right under such policy. Any amount payable on a covered claim under this chapter shall be reduced by the amount of any recovery under such insurance policy.

(b) Any person having a claim which may be recovered under more than one insurance guaranty association or its equivalent shall seek recovery first from the association of the place of residence of the insured except that if it is a first party claim for damage to property with a permanent location, he shall seek recovery first from the association of the location of the property, and if it is a workmen's compensation claim, he shall seek recovery first from the association of the residence of the claimant. Any recovery under this chapter shall be reduced by the amount of recovery from any other insurance guaranty association or its equivalent. (Aug. 14, 1973, Pub. L. 93-89, title I, § 111, 87 Stat. 301.)

§ 35-1811. Prevention of insolvencies.

(a) To aid in the detection and prevention of insurer insolvencies—

(1) it shall be the duty of the Board, upon majority vote, to notify the Mayor of any information indicating any member insurer may be insolvent or in a financial condition hazardous to the policyholders or the public; and

(2) the Board may, upon majority vote, request that the Mayor order an examination of any member insurer which the Board in good faith believes may be in a financial condition hazardous to the policyholders or the public.

(b) An examination may be conducted, under this section, as a National Association of Insurance Commissioner examination or may be conducted by such person as the Mayor designates. The cost of such examination shall be paid by the Association and the examination report shall be treated as are other examination reports. In no event shall such examination report be released to the Board prior to its release to the public, but this shall not preclude the Mayor from complying with subsection (c) of this section. The Mayor shall notify the Board when the examination is completed. The request for an examination shall be kept on file by the Mayor but it shall not be open to public inspection prior to the release of the examination report to the public.

(c) It shall be the duty of the Mayor to report to the Board when he has reasonable cause to believe that any member insurer examined or being examined at the request of the Board may be insolvent or in a financial condition hazardous to the policyholders or the public.

(d) The Board may, upon majority vote, make reports and recommendations to the Mayor upon any matter germane to the solvency, liquidation, rehabilitation, or conservation of any member insurer. Such reports and recommendations shall not be considered public documents.

(e) The Board may, upon majority vote, make recommendations to the Mayor for the detection and prevention of insurer insolvencies.

(f) The Board shall, at the conclusion of any insurer insolvency in which the Association was obligated to pay covered claims, prepare a report on the history and causes of such insolvency, based on the information available to the Association, and submit such report to the Mayor. (Aug. 14, 1973, Pub. L. 93-89, title I, § 112, 87 Stat. 301.)

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in section 35-1806.

§ 35-1812. Examination of the Association.

The Association shall be subject to examination and regulation by the Mayor. The Board shall submit, not later than March 30 of each year, a financial report for the preceding calendar year on a form approved by the Commissioner. (Aug. 14, 1973, Pub. L. 93-89, title I, § 113, 87 Stat. 302.)

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

§ 35-1813. Tax exemption.

The Association shall be exempt from payment of all fees and taxes levied or collected by the District of Columbia, except taxes levied on real or personal property. (Aug. 14, 1973, Pub. L. 93-89, title I, § 114, 87 Stat. 302.)

§ 35-1814. Recognition of assessments in rates.

The rates and premiums charged for insurance policies to which this chapter applies shall include amounts sufficient to recoup a sum equal to the amounts paid to the Association by the member insurer less any amounts returned to the member insurer by the Association and such rates shall not be deemed excessive because they contain an amount reasonably calculated to recoup assessments paid by the member insurer. (Aug. 14, 1973, Pub. L. 93-89, title I, § 115, 87 Stat. 302.)

§ 35-1815. Immunity.

There shall be no liability on the part of and no cause of action of any nature shall rise against any member insurer, the Association or its agents or employees, the Board, or the Mayor or his representatives for any action taken by them in the performance of their powers and duties under this chapter. (Aug. 14, 1973, Pub. L. 93-89, title I, § 116, 87 Stat. 302.)

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

§ 35-1816. Stay of proceedings—Reopening of default judgments.

All proceedings in which the insolvent insurer is a party or is obligated to defend a party in any court in the District of Columbia shall be stayed for sixty days from the date the insolvency is determined to permit proper defense by the Association of all pending causes of action. As to any covered claims arising from a judgment under any decision, verdict, or finding based on the default of the insolvent insurer or its failure to defend an insured, the Association either on its own behalf or on behalf of such insured may apply to have such judgment, order, decision, verdict, or finding set aside by the same court or administrator that made such judgment, order, decision, verdict, or finding and shall be permitted to defend against such claim on the merits. (Aug. 14, 1973, Pub. L. 93-89, title I, § 117, 87 Stat. 302.)

§ 35-1817. Termination—Distribution of account funds.

(a) The Mayor shall by order terminate the operation of the District of Columbia Insurance Guaranty Association as to any kind of insurance afforded by property or casualty insurance policies with respect to which he has found, after hearing, that there is in effect a statutory or voluntary plan which—

(1) is a permanent plan which is adequately funded or for which adequate funding is provided; and

(2) extends or will extend to District of Columbia policyholders and residents protection and benefits with respect to insolvent insurers not substantially less favorable and effective to such policyholders and residents and the protection and benefits provided with respect to such kind of insurance under this chapter.

(b) The Mayor shall by the same such order authorize discontinuance of future payments by insurers to the District of Columbia Insurance Guaranty Association with respect to the same kinds of insurance, except assessments and payments shall continue, as necessary, to liquidate covered claims of insurers adjudged insolvent prior to said order and the related expenses not covered by such other plan.

(c) In the event the operation of any account of the District of Columbia Insurance Guaranty Association shall be so terminated as to all kinds of insurance otherwise within its scope, the Association as soon as possible thereafter shall distribute the balance of moneys and assets remaining in said account (after discharge of the functions of the Association with respect to prior insurer insolvencies not covered by such other plan, together with related expenses) to the insurers which are then writing in the District of Columbia policies of the kinds of insurance covered by such account, and which had made payments into such account, pro rata upon the basis of the aggregate of such payments made by the respective insurers to such account during the period of five years next preceding the date of such order. Upon completion of such distribution with respect to all of the accounts specified in section 35-1804, this chapter shall be deemed to have expired. (Aug. 14, 1973, Pub. L. 93-89, title I, § 118, 87 Stat. 302.)

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

§ 35-1901. Definitions.

As used in this chapter, unless the context otherwise requires—

(a) "affiliate" (an "affiliate" of, or person "affiliated" with a specific person), means a person that directly, or indirectly through one or more intermediaries, controls, or is controlled by or is under common control with, the person specified;

(b) "Mayor" means the Mayor of the District of Columbia or his designated agent;

(c) "control" (including the terms "controlling", "controlled by" and "under common control with") means the possession, direct or indirect, of the power to direct or cause the direction of the management and policies of a person, whether through the ownership of voting securities, by contract other than a commercial contract for goods or nonmanagement services, or otherwise, unless the power is the result of an official position with or corporate office held by the person. Control shall be presumed to exist if any person, directly or indirectly, owns, controls, holds with the power to vote, or holds proxies representing 10 per centum or more of the voting securities of any other person;

(d) "District" means the District of Columbia;

(e) "insurance holding company system" consists of two or more affiliated persons, one or more of which is an insurer;

(f) "insurer" includes any company defined by sections 35-302 and 35-1303, authorized to do the business of insurance in the District, except that it shall not include agencies, authorities, or instrumentalities of the United States, its possessions and territories, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the District of Columbia, or a State or political subdivision of a State;

(g) "person" is an individual, a corporation, a partnership, an association, a joint stock company, a trust, an unincorporated organization, any similar entity, or any combination of the foregoing acting in concert, but shall not include any securities broker performing no more than the usual and customary broker's function;

(h) "securityholder" of a specified person is one who owns any security of such person, including common stock, preferred stock, debt obligations, and any other security convertible into or evidencing the right to acquire any of the foregoing;

(i) "subsidiary" of a specified person is an affiliate controlled by such person directly, or indirectly through one or more intermediaries; and

(j) "voting security" includes any security convertible into or evidencing a right to acquire a voting security.

(Aug. 24, 1974, Pub. L. 93-388, § 2, 88 Stat. 752.)

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

SHORT TITLE

The first section of Act Aug. 24, 1974, Pub. L. 93-388, 88 Stat. 752, provided: "That this Act [enacting this chapter] may be cited as the 'Holding Company System Regulatory Act'."

EFFECTIVE DATE

Section 17, Act Aug. 24, 1974, Pub. L. 93-388, 88 Stat. 763 provided: "This Act [enacting this chapter] shall take effect thirty days after the date of its enactment."

DELEGATION OF FUNCTIONS

Reorg. Ord. No. 43, as amended Nov. 6, 1974, set out in the appendix to title 1, delegated to the Superintendent of Insurance the duties and functions vested in the Commissioner by this chapter.

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in section 35-1904.

§ 35-1902. Subsidiaries of insurers.

(a) Authorization.—Any domestic insurer, either by itself or in cooperation with one or more persons, may, subject to the limitation stated in subsection

(b) of this section, organize or acquire one or more subsidiaries. Such subsidiaries may conduct any kind of business or businesses and their authority to do so shall not be limited by reason of the fact that they are subsidiaries of a domestic insurer.

(b) Limited additional investment authority.—

(1) The total amount which a domestic insurer may invest in the common stock, preferred stock, debt obligations, and other securities of the subsidiaries referred to in subsection (a) of this section shall not exceed the lesser of (A) 5 per centum of such insurer's assets, or (B) in the case of a capital stock company, 50 per centum of the excess of its capital, surplus, and contingency reserves over the then required statutory minimum capital and surplus, or, in the case of a mutual company, 50 per centum of the excess of its surplus and contingency reserves over the then required statutory minimum surplus.

(2) In calculating the amount of such investments, there shall be included (A) total net moneys or other consideration expended and obligations assumed in the acquisition or formation of a subsidiary, including all organizational expenses and contributions to capital and surplus of such subsidiary, whether or not represented by the purchase of capital stock or issuance of other securities, and (B) all amounts expended in acquiring additional common stock, preferred stock, debt obligations, and other securities, and all contributions to the capital or surplus of a subsidiary subsequent to its acquisition or formation.

(c) Exemptions from investment restrictions.—The investments permitted under this section shall be in addition to the investments in common stock, preferred stock, debt obligations, and other securities permitted under sections 35-535, 35-541, and 35-1321, and the investments under this section shall not be subject to any of the otherwise applicable restrictions or prohibitions contained in the aforesaid sections of law applicable to such investments of insurers.

(d) Qualifications of investment: when determined.—Whether any investment pursuant to this section meets the applicable requirements thereof is to be determined immediately after such investment is made, taking into account the then outstanding principal balance of all previous investments and debt obligations and the value of all previous investments in equity securities as of the date of the new investment.

(e) Cessation of control.—If an insurer ceases to control a subsidiary, it shall dispose of any investment therein made pursuant to this section within three years from the time of the cessation of control or within such further time as the Mayor may prescribe, unless at any time after such investment was made, such investment meets the requirements for investment under sections 35-535, 35-541, and 35-1321, and the insurer has notified the Mayor thereof. (Aug. 24, 1974, Pub. L. 93-388, § 3, 88 Stat. 753.)

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967 were abolished as of noon Jan. 2 1975 by § 1-131 and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in section 35-1905.

§ 35-1903. Acquisition of control of or merger with domestic insurer.

(a) Filing requirements.—No person other than the issuer shall make a tender offer for or a request or invitation for tenders of, or enter into any agreement to exchange securities for, seek to acquire, or acquire, in the open market or otherwise, any voting security of a domestic insurer if, after the consummation thereof, such person would directly or indirectly (or by conversion or by exercise of any right to acquire) be in control of such insurer, and no person shall enter into an agreement to merge with or otherwise to acquire control of a domestic insurer, unless, at the time any such offer, request, or invitation is made or any such agreement is entered into, or prior to the acquisition of such securities if no offer or agreement is involved, such person has filed with the Mayor and has sent to such insurer, and such insurer has sent to its shareholders, a statement containing the information required by this section and such offer, request, invitation, agreement, or acquisition has been approved by the Mayor in the manner hereinafter prescribed. For purposes of this section a domestic insurer shall include any other person controlling a domestic insurer unless such other person is either directly or through its affiliates primarily engaged in business other than the business of insurance.

(b) Content of statement.—The statement to be filed with the Mayor hereunder shall be made under oath or affirmation and shall contain the following information:

(1) The name and address of each person by whom or on whose behalf the merger or other acquisition of control referred to in subsection (a) is to be effected (hereinafter called "acquiring party"), and

(A) If such person is an individual, his principal occupation and all offices and positions held during the past five years, and any conviction of crimes other than minor traffic violations during the past ten years;

(B) If such person is not an individual, a report of the nature of its business operations during the past five years or for such lesser period as such person and any predecessors thereof shall have been in existence; an informative description of the business intended to be done by such person and such person's subsidiaries; and a list of all individuals who are or who have been selected to become directors or executive officers of such person, or who perform or will perform functions appropriate to such positions. Such list shall include for each such individual the information required by subparagraph (A) of this subsection.

(2) The source, nature, and amount of the consideration used or to be used in effecting the merger or other acquisition of control, a description of any transaction wherein funds were or are to be obtained for any such purpose, and the identity of persons furnishing such consideration: Provided, That where a source of such consideration is a loan made in the lender's ordinary course of business, the identity of the lender shall remain confidential, if the person filing such statement so requests.

(3) Fully audited financial information as to the earnings and financial condition of each acquiring party for the preceding five fiscal years of each such acquiring party (or for such lesser period as such acquiring party and any predecessors thereof shall have been in existence), and similar unaudited information as of a date not earlier than ninety days prior to the filing of the statement.

(4) Any plans or proposals which each acquiring party may have to liquidate such insurer, to sell its assets or merge or consolidate it with any person, or to make any other material change in its business or corporate structure or management.

(5) The number of shares of any security referred to in subsection (a) which each acquiring party proposes to acquire, and the terms of the offer, request, invitation, agreement, or acquisition referred to in subsection (a), and a statement as to the method by which the fairness of the proposal was arrived at.

(6) The amount of each class of any security referred to in subsection (a) which is beneficially owned or concerning which there is a right to acquire beneficial ownership by each acquiring party.

(7) A full description of any contracts, arrangements, or understandings with respect to any security referred to in subsection (a) in which any acquiring party is involved, including but not limited to transfer of any of the securities, joint ventures, loan or option arrangements, puts or calls, guarantees of loans, guarantees against loss or guarantees of profits, division of losses or profits, or the giving or withholding of proxies. Such description shall identify the persons with whom such contracts, arrangements, or understandings have been entered into.

(8) A description of the purchase of any security referred to in subsection (a) during the twelve calendar months preceding the filing of the statement, by any acquiring party, including the dates of purchase, names of the purchasers, and consideration paid or agreed to be paid therefor.

(9) A description of all recommendations to purchase any security referred to in subsection (a) made during the twelve calendar months preceding the filing of the statement, by any acquiring party, or by anyone based upon interviews or at the suggestion of such acquiring party.

(10) Copies of all tender offers for, requests or invitations for tenders of exchange offers for, and agreements to acquire or exchange any securities referred to in subsection (a), and (if distributed) of additional soliciting material relating thereto.

(11) The terms of any agreement, contract, or understanding made with any broker-dealer as to solicitation of securities referred to in subsection (a) for tender, and the amount of any fees, commissions, or other compensation to be paid to broker-dealers with regard thereto.

(12) Such additional information as the Mayor may by rule or regulation prescribe as necessary or appropriate for the protection of policyholders and securityholders of the insurer or in the public interest. If the person required to file the statement referred to in subsection (a) is a partnership, limited partnership, syndicate, or other group, the Mayor may require that the information called for by paragraphs (1) through (12) shall be given with respect to each partner of such partnership or limited partnership, each member of such syndicate or group, and each person who controls such partner or member. If any such partner, member, or person is a corporation or the person required to file the statement referred to in subsection (a) is a corporation, the Mayor may require that the information called for by paragraphs (1) through (12) shall be given with respect to such corporation, each officer and director of such corporation, and each person who is directly or indirectly the beneficial owner of more than 10 per centum of the outstanding voting securities of such corporation. If any material change occurs in the facts set forth in the statement filed with the Mayor and sent to such insurer pursuant to this section, an amendment setting forth such change, together with copies of all documents and other material relevant to such change, shall be filed with the Mayor and sent to such insurer within two business days after the person learns of such change. Such insurer shall send such amendment to its shareholders.

(c) Alternative filing materials.—If any offer, request, invitation, agreement, or acquisition referred to in subsection (a) is proposed to be made by means of a registration statement under the Securities Act of 1933 (15 U.S.C. 77a et seq.) or in circumstances requiring the disclosure of similar information under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (15 U.S.C. 78a et seq.), or under a State law requiring similar registration or disclosure, the person required to file the statement referred to in subsection (a) may utilize such documents in furnishing the information called for by that statement.

(d) Approval by Mayor; hearings.—

(1) The Mayor shall approve any merger or other acquisition of control referred to in subsection (a) unless, after a public hearing thereon, he finds that:

(A) After the change of control the domestic insurer referred to in subsection (a) would not be able to satisfy the requirements for the issuance of a license to write the line or lines of insurance for which it is presently licensed;

(B) The effect of the merger or other acquisition of control would be substantially to lessen competition in insurance in the District or tend to create a monopoly therein;

(C) The financial condition of any acquiring party is such as might jeopardize the financial stability of the insurer, or prejudice the interest of its policyholders or the interests of any remaining security holders who are unaffiliated with such acquiring party;

(D) The terms of the offer, request, invitation, agreement, or acquisition referred to in subsection (a) are unfair and unreasonable to the securityholders of the insurer;

(E) The plans or proposals which the acquiring party has to liquidate the insurer, sell its assets or consolidate or merge it with any person, or to make any other material change in its business or corporate structure or management, are unfair and unreasonable to policyholders of the insurer and not in the public interest; or

(F) The competence, experience, and integrity of those persons who would control the operation of the insurer are such that it would not be in the interest of policyholders of the insurer or of the public to permit the merger or other acquisition of control.

(2) The public hearing referred to in paragraph (1) shall be held within thirty days after the statement required by subsection (a) is filed, and at least twenty days' notice thereof shall be given by the Mayor to the person filing the statement. Not less than seven days' notice of such public hearing shall be given by the person filing the statement to the insurer and to such other person as may be designated by the Mayor. The insurer shall give such notice to its securityholders. The Mayor shall make a determination within thirty days after the conclusion of such hearing. At such hearing, the person filing the statement, the insurer, any person to whom notice of hearing was sent, and any other person whose interests may be affected thereby shall have the right to present evidence, examine and cross-examine witnesses, and offer oral and written arguments, and in connection therewith shall be entitled to conduct discovery proceedings in the same manner as is presently allowed in the Superior Court of the District of Columbia. All discovery proceedings shall be concluded not later than three days prior to the commencement of the public hearing.

(e) Mailings to shareholders; payment of expenses.—All statements, amendments, or other material filed pursuant to subsection (a) or (b), and all notices of public hearings held pursuant to subsection (d), shall be mailed by the insurer to its shareholders within five business days after the insurer has received such statements, amendments, other material, or notices. The expenses of mailing shall be borne by the person making the filing. As security for the payment of such expenses, such person shall file with the Mayor an acceptable bond or other deposit in an amount to be determined by the Mayor.

(f) Exemptions.—The provisions of this section shall not apply to—

(1) any offers, requests, invitations, agreements, or acquisitions by the person referred to in subsection (a) of any voting security referred to in subsection (a) which, immediately prior to the consummation of such offer, request, invitation, agreement, or acquisition, was not issued and outstanding;

(2) any offer, request, invitation, agreement, or acquisition if, under the terms thereof, the consummation of the transaction contemplated thereunder would result in the ownership by securityholders of the domestic insurer of stock processing¹ at least 80 per centum of the total combined voting power of all classes of stock of the acquiring party entitled to vote, or at least 80 per centum of the total combined voting power of all classes of stock of the person in control of the acquiring party entitled to vote; and

(3) any offer, request, invitation, agreement, or acquisition which the Mayor by order shall exempt therefrom as (A) not having been made or entered into for the purpose and not having the effect of changing or influencing the control of a domestic insurer, or (B) as otherwise not comprehended within the purposes of this section.

(g) Violations.—The following shall be violations of this section:

(1) The failure to file any statement, amendment, or other material required to be filed pursuant to subsection (a) or (b); or

(2) The effectuation or any attempt to effectuate an acquisition of control of, or merger with, a domestic insurer unless the Mayor has given his approval thereto.

(h) Jurisdiction; consent to service of process.—The Superior Court of the District of Columbia is hereby vested with jurisdiction over every person not resident, domiciled, or authorized to do business in the District who files a statement with the Mayor under this section, and over all actions involving such person arising out of violations of this section, and each such person shall be deemed to have performed acts equivalent to and constituting an appointment by such a person of the Mayor to be his true and lawful attorney upon whom may be served all lawful process in any action, suit, or proceeding arising out of violations of this section. Copies of all such lawful process shall be served on the Mayor and transmitted by registered or certified mail by the Mayor to such person at his last known address. (Aug. 24, 1974, Pub. L. 93-388, § 4, 88 Stat. 753.)

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in section 35-1909.

§ 35-1904. Registration of insurers.

(a) Registration.—Every insurer which is authorized to do business in the District and which is a member of an insurance holding company system shall register with the Mayor, except a foreign insurer subject to disclosure requirements and standards adopted by statute or regulation in the jurisdiction of its domicile which are substantially similar to those contained in this chapter. Any insurer which is subject to registration under this section shall register within sixty days after the effective date of this chapter or fifteen days after it becomes subject to registration, whichever is later, unless the Mayor for good cause shown extends the time for registration, and then within such extended time. The Mayor may require any authorized insurer which is a member of a holding company system which is not subject to registration under this section to furnish a copy of the registration statement or other information filed by such insurance company with the insurance regulatory authority of its domiciliary jurisdiction.

(b) Information and form required.—Every insurer subject to registration shall file a registration statement on a form provided by the Mayor, which shall contain current information about—

(1) the capital structure, general financial condition, ownership, and management of the insurer and any person controlling the insurer;

(2) the identity of every member of the insurance holding company system;

(3) the following agreements in force, relationships subsisting, and transactions currently outstanding between such insurer and its affiliates;

(A) loans, other investments, or purchases, sales or exchanges or securities of the affiliates by the insurer or of the insurer by its affiliates;

(B) purchases, sales, or exchanges of assets;

(C) transactions not in the ordinary course of business;

(D) guarantees or undertakings for the benefit of an affiliate which result in an actual contingent exposure of the insurer's assets to liability, other than insurance contracts entered into in the ordinary course of the insurer's business;

(E) all management and service contracts and all cost-sharing arrangements, other than cost allocation arrangements based upon generally accepted accounting principles; and

(F) reinsurance agreements covering all or substantially all of one or more lines of insurance of the ceding company.

(4) other matters concerning transactions between registered insurers and any affiliates as may be included from time to time in any registration forms adopted or approved by the Mayor.

(c) Materiality.—No information need be disclosed on the registration statement filed pursuant to subsection (b) if such information is not material for the purposes of this section. Unless the Mayor by rule, regulation, or order provides otherwise, sales, purchases, exchanges, loans, or extensions of credit, or investments, involving one-half of 1 per centum or less of an insurer's admitted assets as of the thirty-first day of December next preceding shall not be deemed material for purposes of this section.

(d) Amendments to registration statements.—Each registered insurer shall keep current the information required to be disclosed in its registration statement by reporting all material changes or additions on amendment forms provided by the Mayor within fifteen days after the end of the month in which it learns of each such change or addition: Provided, That subject to subsection (c) of section 35-1905, each registered insurer shall so report all dividends and other distributions to shareholders within two business days following the declaration thereof.

(e) Termination of registration.—The Mayor shall terminate the registration of any insurer which demonstrates that it no longer is a member of an insurance holding company system.

(f) Consolidated filing.—The Mayor may require or allow two or more affiliated insurers subject to registration hereunder to file a consolidated registration statement or consolidated reports amending their consolidated registration statement or their individual registration statements.

(g) Alternative registration.—The Mayor may allow an insurer which is authorized to do business in the District and which is part of an insurance holding company system to register on behalf of any affiliated insurer which is required to register under subsection (a) and to file all information and material required to be filed under this section.

(h) Exemptions.—The provisions of this section shall not apply to any insurer, information, or transaction if and to the extent that the Mayor by rule, regulation, or order shall exempt the same from the provisions of this section.

(i) Disclaimer.—The presumption of control as defined by section 35-1901(c), may be rebutted by a showing made in the manner herein provided that control does not exist in fact. The Mayor may determine, after furnishing all persons in interest notice and an opportunity to be heard and making specific findings of fact to support such determination, that control exists in fact, notwithstanding the absence of a presumption to that effect. Any person may file with the Mayor a disclaimer of affiliation with any authorized insurer or such a disclaimer may be filed by such insurer or any member of an insurance holding company system. The disclaimer shall fully disclose all material relationships and bases for affiliation between such person and such insurer as well as the basis for disclaiming such affiliation. After a disclaimer has been filed, the insurer shall be relieved of any duty to register or report under this section which may arise out of the insurer's relationship with such person unless and until the Mayor disallows the disclaimer. The Mayor shall disallow such a disclaimer only after furnishing all parties in interest with notice and opportunity to be heard and after making specific findings of fact to support such disallowance.

(j) Violations.—The failure to file a registration statement or any amendment thereto required by this section within the time specified for such filing shall be a violation of this section. (Aug. 24, 1974, Pub. L. 93-388, § 5, 88 Stat. 757.)

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in sections 35-1905, 35-1906, 35-1907.

§ 35-1905. Standards.

(a) Transactions with affiliates.—Material transactions by registered insurers with their affiliates shall be subject to the following standards:

(1) the terms shall be fair and reasonable;

(2) the books, accounts, and records of each party shall be so maintained as to clearly and accurately disclose the precise nature and details of the transactions; and

(3) the insurer's surplus as regards policyholders following any dividends or distributions to shareholder affiliates shall be reasonable in relation to the insurer's outstanding liabilities and adequate to its financial needs.

(b) Adequacy of surplus.—For the purposes of this section in determining whether an insurer's surplus as regards policyholders is reasonable in relation to the insurer's outstanding liabilities and adequate to its financial needs, the following factors, among others, shall be considered:

(1) the size of the insurer as measured by its assets, capital and surplus, reserves, premium writings, insurance in force, and other appropriate criteria;

(2) the extent to which the insurer's business is diversified among the several lines of insurance;

(3) the number and size of risks insured in each line of business;

(4) the extent of the geographical dispersion of the insurer's insured risks;

(5) the nature and extent of the insurer's reinsurance program;

(6) the quality, diversification, and liquidity of the insurer's investment portfolio;

(7) the recent past and projected future trend in the size of the insurer's surplus as regards policyholders;

(8) the surplus as regards policyholders maintained by other comparable insurers;

(9) the adequacy of the insurer's reserves; and

(10) the quality and liquidity of investments in subsidiaries made pursuant to section 35-1902. The Mayor may treat any such investment as a disallowed asset for purposes of determining the adequacy of surplus as regards policyholders whenever in his judgment such investment so warrants.

(c) Dividends and other distributions.—(1) No insurer subject to registration under section 35-1904 shall pay any extraordinary dividend or make any other extraordinary distribution to its shareholders until (A) thirty days after the Mayor has received notice of the declaration thereof and has not within such period disapproved such payment, or (B) the Mayor shall have approved such payment within such thirty-day period.

(2) For purposes of this section, an extraordinary dividend or distribution includes any dividend or distribution of cash or other property, whose fair market value together with that of other dividends or distributions made within the preceding twelve months exceeds the greater of (A) 10 per centum of such insurer's surplus as regards policyholders as of the thirty-first day of December next preceding or (B) the net gain from operations of such insurer, if such insurer is a life insurer, or the net investment income, if such insurer is not a life insurer, for the twelve-month period ending the thirty-first day of December next preceding, but shall not include pro rata distributions of any class of the insurer's own securities.

(3) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, an insurer may declare an extraordinary dividend or distribution which is conditional upon the Mayor's approval thereof, and such a declaration shall confer no rights upon shareholders until (A) the Mayor has approved the payment of such dividend or distribution or (B) the Mayor has not disapproved such payment within the thirty-day period referred to above. (Aug. 24, 1974, Pub. L. 93-388, § 6, 88 Stat. 759.)

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in section 35-1904.

§ 35-1906. Examination.

(a) Power of Mayor.—Subject to the limitation contained in this section and in addition to the powers which the Mayor has under the insurance laws of the District relating to the examination of insurers, the Mayor shall also have the power to order any insurer registered under section 35-1904 to produce such records, books, papers or other information in the possession of the insurer or its affiliates as shall be necessary to ascertain the financial condition or legality of conduct of such insurer. In the event such insurer fails to comply with such order, the Mayor shall have the power to examine such affiliates to obtain such information.

(b) Purpose and limitation of examination.—The Mayor shall exercise his power under subsection (a) only if the examination of the insurer under and as is provided for by the insurance laws of the District is inadequate or the interests of the policyholders of such insurer may be adversely affected.

(c) Use of consultants.—The Mayor may retain at the registered insurer's expense such attorneys, actuaries, accountants, and other experts not otherwise a part of the Mayor's staff as shall be reasonably necessary to assist in the conduct of the examination under subsection (a). Any persons so retained shall be under the direction and control of the Mayor and shall act in a purely advisory capacity.

(d) Expenses.—Each registered insurer producing for examination records, books, and papers pursuant to subsection (a) shall be liable for and shall pay the expense of such examination in accordance with the provisions of sections 35-418 and 35-1313, pertaining to examination expense. (Aug. 24, 1974, Pub. L. 93-388, § 7, 88 Stat. 760.)

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in section 35-1907.

§ 35-1907. Confidential treatment.

All information, documents, and copies thereof obtained by or disclosed to the Mayor or any other person in the course of an examination or investigation made pursuant to section 35-1906 and all information reported pursuant to section 35-1904, shall be given confidential treatment and shall not be subject to subpoena and shall not be made public by the Mayor or any other person, except to insurance departments of other States, without the prior written consent of the insurer to which it pertains unless the Mayor, after giving the insurer and its affiliates who would be affected thereby, notice and opportunity to be heard, determines that the interests of policyholders, shareholders, or the public will be served by the publication thereof, in which event he may publish all or any part thereof in such manner as he may deem appropriate. (Aug. 24, 1974, Pub. L. 93-388, § 8, 88 Stat. 761.)

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

§ 35-1908. Rules and regulations.

The Mayor may, upon notice and opportunity of all interested persons to be heard, issue such rules, regulations, and orders as shall be necessary to carry out the provisions of this chapter. (Aug. 24, 1974, Pub. L. 93-388, § 9, 88 Stat. 761.)

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

§ 35-1909. Injunctions—Prohibitions against voting securities—Sequestration of voting securities.

(a) Whenever it appears to the Mayor that any insurer or any director, officer, employee or agent thereof has committed or is about to commit a violation of this chapter or of any rule, regulation, or order issued by the Mayor hereunder, the Mayor may apply to the Superior Court of the District of Columbia for an order enjoining such insurer of such director, officer, employee, or agent thereof from violating or continuing to violate this chapter or any such rule, regulation, or order, and for such other equitable relief as the failure of the case and the interests of the insurer's policyholders, creditors, shareholders, or the public may require.

(b) No security which is the subject of any agreement or arrangement regarding acquisition, or which is acquired or to be acquired, in contravention of the provisions of this chapter or of any rule, regulation, or order issued by the Mayor hereunder may be voted at any shareholders' meeting, or may be counted for quorum purposes, and any action of shareholders requiring the affirmative vote of a percentage of shares may be taken as though such securities were not issued and outstanding; but no action taken at any such meeting shall be invalidated by the voting of such securities, unless the action would materially affect control of the insurer or unless the Superior Court of the District of Columbia has so ordered. If an insurer or the Mayor has reason to believe that any security of the insurer has been or is about to be acquired in contravention of the provisions of this chapter or of any rule, regulation, or order issued by the Mayor hereunder the insurer or the Mayor may apply to the Superior Court of the District of Columbia to enjoin any offer, request, invitation, agreement, or acquisition made in contravention of section 35-1903 of any rule, regulation, or order issued by the Mayor thereunder to enjoin the voting of any security so acquired, to void any vote of such security already cast at any meeting of shareholders, and for such other equitable relief as the nature of the case and the interests of the insurer's policyholders, creditors, shareholders, or the public may require.

(c) In any case where a person has or is proposing to acquire any voting securities in violation of this chapter or any rule, regulation, or order issued by the Mayor hereunder, the Superior Court of the District of Columbia may, on such notice as the court deems appropriate, upon the application of the insurer or the Mayor seize or sequester any voting securities of the insurer owned directly or indirectly by such person, and issue such orders with respect thereto as may be appropriate to effectuate the provisions of this chapter. Notwithstanding any other provisions of law, for the purposes of this chapter the situs of the ownership of the securities of domestic insurers shall be deemed to be in the District. (Aug. 24, 1974, Pub. L. 93-388, § 10, 88 Stat. 761.)

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

§ 35-1910. Criminal proceedings.

Whenever it appears to the Mayor that any insurer or any director, officer, employee, or agent thereof has committed a willful violation of this chapter, the Mayor may cause criminal proceedings to be instituted in the District against such insurer or the responsible director, officer, employee, or agent thereof. Any insurer which willfully violates this chapter may be fined not more than $1,000. Any individual who willfully violates this chapter may be fined not more than $1,000 or, if such willful violation involves the deliberate perpetration of a fraud upon the Mayor, imprisoned not more than two years or both. (Aug. 24, 1974, Pub. L. 93-388, § 11, 88 Stat. 762.)

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

§ 35-1911. Receivership.

Whenever it appears to the Mayor that any person has committed a violation of this chapter which so impairs the financial condition of a domestic insurer as to threaten insolvency or make the further transaction of business by it hazardous to its policyholders, creditors, shareholders, or the public, the Mayor may proceed as provided under the insurance laws of the District to take possession of the property of such domestic insurer and to conduct the business thereof. (Aug. 24, 1974, Pub. L. 93-388, § 12, 88 Stat. 762.)

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

§ 35-1912. Revocation, suspension, or non-renewal of insurer's license.

Whenever it appears to the Mayor that any person has committed a violation of this chapter which makes the continued operation of an insurer contrary to the interests of policyholders or the public, the Mayor may, after giving notice and an opportunity to be heard, suspend, revoke, or refuse to renew such insurer's license or authority to do business in the District for such period as he finds is required for the protection of policyholders or the public. Any such determination shall be accompanied by specific findings of fact and conclusions of law. (Aug. 24, 1974, Pub. L. 93-388, § 13, 88 Stat. 762.)

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

§ 35-1913. Judicial review—Mandamus.

(a) Any person aggrieved by any act, determination, rule, regulation, or order or any other action of the Mayor pursuant to this chapter may appeal therefrom to the District of Columbia Court of Appeals, in accordance with the District of Columbia Administrative Procedure Act (D.C. Code, secs. 1-1501 to 1-1510).

(b) Any person aggrieved by any failure of the Mayor to act or make a determination required by this chapter may petition the Superior Court of the District of Columbia for a writ in the nature of a mandamus or a peremptory mandamus directing the Mayor to act or make such determination forthwith. (Aug. 24, 1974, Pub. L. 93-388, § 14, 88 Stat. 762.)

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

§ 35-1914. Conflict with other laws.

All laws and parts of laws of the District inconsistent with this chapter are hereby superseded with respect to matters covered by this chapter. (Aug. 24, 1974, Pub. L. 93-388, § 15, 88 Stat. 763.)

§ 35-1915. Separability.

If any provision of this chapter or the application thereof to any person or circumstance is held invalid, the invalidity shall not affect other provisions or applications of this chapter which can be given effect without the invalid provision or application, and for this purpose the provisions of this chapter are separable. (Aug. 24, 1974, Pub. L. 93-388, § 16, 88 Stat. 763.)

§ 36-125a. Transfer of functions—Abolition of office of Director of Apprenticeship.

All functions of the Secretary of Labor and of the Director of Apprenticeship under this chapter are transferred to and shall be exercised by the Mayor. The office of Director of Apprenticeship provided for in section 36-123 is abolished. (Dec. 24, 1973, Pub. L. 93-198, title II, § 204(d), 87 Stat. 783.)

CODIFICATION

Section was enacted as part of the District of Columbia Self-Government and Governmental Reorganization Act, and not as a part of the Act of May 21, 1946, which comprises this chapter.

EFFECTIVE DATE

Section effective July 1, 1974, see sec. 771(b) of Act Dec. 24, 1973, Pub. L. 93-198, as amended, set out as a note under § 1-121.

DEFINITIONS

The definitions in § 1-122 apply to terms appearing in this section.

TRANSFER OF EXISTING PERSONNEL, PROPERTY, RECORDS, AND FUNDS

See note under § 36-701.

§ 36-130. Violations of agreements—Hearings—Determinations—Appeals.

(a) Upon the complaint of any interested person or upon his own initiative, the Director may investigate to determine if there has been a violation of the terms of an apprenticeship agreement made under this chapter, and he may hold hearings, inquiries, and other proceedings necessary to such investigation and determination. The parties to such an agreement shall be given a fair and impartial hearing after reasonable notice thereof. All such hearings, investigations, and determinations shall be made under authority of reasonable rules and procedures prescribed by the Apprenticeship Council, subject to the approval of the Secretary of Labor.

(b) The determination of the Director shall be filed with the council. If no appeal therefrom is filed with the council within ten days after the date thereof, as herein provided, such determination shall become the order of the council. Any person aggrieved by any determination or action of the Director may appeal therefrom to the council, which shall hold a hearing thereon after due notice to the interested parties. Any person aggrieved by the action of the Council may appeal as provided in the District of Columbia Administrative Procedure Act (D.C. Code, secs. 1-1501 to 1-1510). (May 21, 1946, 60 Stat. 206, ch. 267, § 10; June 25, 1948, 62 Stat. 991, ch. 646, § 32(b); May 24, 1949, 63 Stat. 107, ch. 139, § 127; July 29, 1970, Pub. § 36-402. Definitions.

As used in this subchapter—

(1) the term "Mayor" means the Mayor of the District of Columbia or his designated agent or representative including the Minimum Wage and Industrial Safety Board.

(5) The term "employee" includes any individual employed by an employer, except that such term shall not include—

(A) any individual who, without payment and without expectation of any gain, directly or indirectly, volunteers to engage in the activities of an educational, charitable, religious, or nonprofit organization;

(B) any lay member elected or appointed to office within the discipline of any religious organization and engaged in religious functions; or

(C) any individual employed casual babysitters,¹ in or about the residence of the employer.

(As amended Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-32, § 2 (b), (c), 22 DCR 2549.)

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

AMENDMENT

1975—Act Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-32, amended par. (1) generally, and amended par. (5)(C) by substituting "casual babysitters" for "in domestic service or otherwise employed".

EFFECTIVE DATE OF 1975 AMENDMENT

Section 4 of Act Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-32, provided that "This act [partially repealing § 36-408(d) and amending §§ 36-402 and 36-403] shall become effective at the end of the thirty day period provided for congressional review of acts of the Council of the District of Columbia in section 602(c) of the District of Columbia Self-Government and Governmental Reorganization Act [§ 1-147(c)]."

§ 36-403. Minimum wage and overtime compensation—Workweek—Wage orders.

(a) (1) * * *

(3) Every employer of a private household worker shall pay to each of his employees (A) the wage established for each such employee in a wage order issued under this subchapter, or (B) not less than a wage of $2.50 an hour, whichever is higher.

(g) The Mayor shall issue a wage order, effective not more than 120 days after November 1, 1975, providing for the payment of the minimum wage and overtime compensation prescribed in subsections (a) (3) and (b) (1) (B) of this section to persons employed as private household workers. Such wage order shall include such definitions and regulations as the Mayor may prescribe to prevent the circumvention or evasion of such wage order and to safeguard the minimum wage rate and overtime compensation provision. The Mayor shall publish a notice once a week, for four successive weeks, in a newspaper of general circulation, stating that he will, on a date and at a place named in the notice, hold a public hearing for the purpose of allowing interested persons to comment on such proposed wage order. Such notice shall contain a copy of such proposed wage order or a summary thereof. Within thirty days after such hearing, the Mayor shall issue such a wage order as may be proper or necessary to effectuate the purposes of this subchapter. Notice of

Hotel and restaurant employees

Minimum Wage and Industrial Safety Board had authority to promulgate order providing for a $2.25-minimum hourly wage for persons employed in hotel, restaurant and allied occupations, notwithstanding contention that provisions of Minimum Wage Act were intended to place a freeze on minimum wage rights for such employees or contention that Congress had intended that such employees were only to be permitted to obtain increase in minimum wage rates by a special act of Congress. Hotel Association of Washington, D.C. et al. v. District of Columbia Minimum Wage and Industrial Safety Board (D.C. App. 1974, 318 A. 2d 294).

Overtime

Employee who is covered by D.C. Minimum Wage Act and who works more than 40 hours a week inside the District for the same employer is entitled to statutory overtime pay regardless of whether he is subject to hours of service regulation by the Department of Transportation. District of Columbia et al. v. Schwerman Trucking Company (D.C. App. 1974, 327 A. 2d 818).

Hours worked in places outside borders of District of Columbia by employees covered by D.C. Minimum Wage Act need not be credited to employees for purposes of computing overtime pay under the Act. Id.

§ 36-404. Exemptions of certain employees from minimum wage and overtime provisions of section 36-403.

* * * * *

(b) The overtime provisions of section 36-403(b)

(1) shall not apply with respect to—

(1) any employee employed as a seaman;

(2) any employee employed by a railroad;

(3) any salesman, partsman, or mechanic primarily engaged in selling or servicing automobiles, trailers, or trucks, if employed by a non-manufacturing establishment primarily engaged in the business of selling such vehicles to ultimate purchasers;

(4) any employee employed primarily to wash automobiles by an employer, more than 50 percent of whose annual dollar volume of sales is derived from washing automobiles, if for such employee's employment in excess of one hundred and sixty hours in a period of four consecutive workweeks, such employees receives compensation at a rate not less than one and one-half times the regular rate at which he is employed;

(5) any employee employed as an attendant at a parking lot or parking garage; or

(6) any employee employed by a carrier by air who voluntarily exchanges workdays with another employee for the primary purpose of utilizing air travel benefits available to such employees.

(As amended Dec. 29, 1973, Pub. L. 93-223, § 1, 87 Stat. 936.)

AMENDMENT

1973—Act Dec. 29, 1973, Pub. L. 93-223, amended subsec. (b) by:

(1) striking the word "or" following the semicolon in subparagraph (4);

(2) striking the period at the end of subparagraph (5) and inserting in lieu thereof "; or";

(3) inserting after subparagraph (5) new subparagraph (6) to read as above set out.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Ad hoc committee

That ad hoc committee, which made recommendations to Minimum Wage and Industrial Safety Board with regard to appropriate minimum wage for persons employed in hotel, restaurant and allied occupations and which was composed of three employer representatives, three employee representatives and three representatives of public, had no member who was an employer representative of "allied occupations" did not invalidate Board's minimum wage order, absent indication that interests of employers in "allied occupations" were not adequately represented, advanced and fully protected. Hotel Association of Washington, D.C. et al. v. District of Columbia Minimum Wage and Industrial Safety Board (D.C. App. 1974, 318 A. 2d 294).

Discretion of Board

Minimum Wage and Industrial Safety Board acted properly and within its discretion when, in revising minimum wage order with regard to persons employed in hotel, restaurant and allied occupations, Board gave greater weight to amount of wages sufficient to provide adequate maintenance and to protect health than was given to fair and reasonable value of work performed and wages paid in metropolitan region by fair employers for work of like or comparable character. Hotel Association of Washington, D.C., et al. v. District of Columbia Minimum Wage and Industrial Safety Board (D.C. App. 1974, 318 A. 2d 294).

In determining appropriate minimum wage, Minimum Wage and Industrial Safety Board has discretion with regard to relative weight to be given to the three statutory criteria consisting of amount of wages sufficient to provide adequate maintenance and to protect health, fair and reasonable value of work performed and wages paid in metropolitan region by fair employers for work of like or comparable character. Id.

Fair and reasonable value of work

In determining fair and reasonable value of work performed by persons employed in hotel, restaurant and allied occupations, for purposes of revising minimum wage order, Minimum Wage and Industrial Safety Board could consider wages paid in metropolitan region by fair employers for work of like or comparable character. Hotel Association of Washington, D.C. et al. v. District of Columbia Minimum Wage and Industrial Safety Board (D.C. App. 1974, 318 A. 2d 294).

Findings of fact—Substantial evidence

Finding by Minimum Wage and Industrial Safety Board, which promulgated order providing for $2.25-minimum hourly wage rate for persons employed in hotel, restaurant and allied occupations, that an employed person would require a wage of at least $2.40 an hour to provide adequate maintenance and to protect health was supported by substantial evidence. *Hotel Association of Washington, D.C. et al. v. NOTES TO DECISIONS

Authority of Board

Minimum Wage and Industrial Safety Board had authority, with regard to its order increasing minimum wage for persons employed in hotel, restaurant and allied occupations, to adopt definitions and detailed delineation of minimum wage standards, which were statements of terms and conditions calculated to assist Board to carry out purposes of order, to prevent circumvention or evasion of it and to safeguard wage rates and overtime compensation established in order. Hotel Association of Washington, D.C. et al. v. District of Columbia Minimum Wage and Industrial Safety Board (D.C. App. 1974, 318 A. 2d 294).

Conflict of interest

That employee representative on Minimum Wage and Industrial Safety Board was business agent for a union and was member of joint executive board of international union of hotel and restaurant employees and bartenders did not preclude him from participating in revision of minimum wage order with regard to persons employed in hotel, restaurant and allied occupations on theory that such representative possessed a disqualifying conflict of interests, in that employee representative and employer representative on such tripartite Board were expected to be partisan. Hotel Association of Washington, D.C. et al. v. District of Columbia Minimum Wage and Industrial Safety Board (D.C. App. 1974, 318 A. 2d 294).

Notice

Even if notice requirements of the D.C. Administrative Procedure Act were applicable with regard to proposed revised minimum wage order of Minimum Wage and Industrial Safety Board, such requirements were met where notice of proposed order was published and such notice set forth time and place of public hearing, contained summary of major provisions of proposed order and stated that such order, recommendations of ad hoc committee, wage data, cost of living budgets and related materials would be available at hearing and prior thereto at office of Board. *Hotel Association of Washington, D.C. et al. v. Public hearing preliminary to revision of Minimum Wage and Industrial Safety Board's order with regard to persons employed in hotel, restaurant and allied occupations was not a "contested case" within purview of notice provisions of the D.C. Administrative Procedure Act. Id.

Validity of wage order

Minimum Wage and Industrial Safety Board order providing for a $2.25-minimum hourly wage for persons employed in hotel, restaurant and allied occupations was not arbitrary and capricious. *Hotel Association of Washington, D.C. et al. v. NOTES TO DECISIONS

Damages

Trial court lacked authority, under the District of Columbia Minimum Wage Act amendment of 1966, to award liquidated damages in an action brought by the District as assignee of employee's claims that employer had failed to pay wages to which they were entitled under the Act. Johnson & Jenkins Funeral Home, Inc. v. District of Columbia, Assignee etc. (D.C. App. 1974, 318 A. 2d 596).

Evidence—Sufficiency

Findings of Superior Court, in action by District of Columbia against employer to recover wage claims assigned to District by two employees claiming that employer failed to pay wages to which they were entitled under Minimum Wage Act, wherein court entered judgment for plaintiff for compensatory and liquidated damages, were supported by the evidence. Johnson & Jenkins Funeral Home, Inc. v. District of Columbia, Assignee etc. (D.C. App. 1974, 318 A. 2d 596).

Liquidated damages

Wage payment law (§ 36-601 et seq.) rather than minimum wage law was applicable to former employee's claims against former employer for allegedly unpaid wages and, therefore denial of former employee's claim for liquidated damages, attorneys' fees and costs in reliance on the minimum wage law was improper, where former employee did not quarrel with hourly rate but sued on basis of wages allegedly due for certain hours of work. D. E. Klingaman v. Holiday Tours, Inc. (D.C. App. 1973, 309 A. 2d 54).

Sec.

36-503. Administrative expenses.

36-504. District employees—Transfer of functions with respect to processing claims.

§ 36-501. Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act made applicable to District of Columbia.

EFFECTIVE DATE

Section 4 (formerly section 3) of act May 17, 1928, renumbered Oct. 26, 1973, Pub. L. 93-140, § 19, 87 Stat. 507, provided: "This Act [enacting this chapter] shall take effect July 1, 1928."

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in section 36-438.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Award—Attorney's fee

Requirement of time sheet would procure information to enhance basis for deciding what was reasonable attorney's fee, and where board, in violation of its own regulations, awarded attorney's fees without benefit of statement of extent and character of necessary work done, case would be remanded for further proceedings. C. G. Matthews et al. v. N. C. A. Walter, Deputy Commissioner, etc. et al. (1975, 512 F. 2d 941, 168 U.S. App. D.C. 27).

It was congressional intent that amendment authorizing award of attorney's fees apply in pending proceedings to services performed after its effective date, and board did not act unconstitutionally in awarding attorney's fees to workmen's compensation claimant's counsel for services rendered after effective date of authorizing amendment in case concerning death occurring prior to that date. Id.

Commissioner's finding of fact

Finding by deputy commissioner that employer and insurance carrier, which retained claim letter which asserted benefits on behalf of widow and son of deceased employee and which was sent prior to the expiration of one-year statute of limitations and which did not forward letter to the deputy commissioner for filing, were estopped to assert defense of statute of limitations under the Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act was supported by substantial evidence on whole record. Blackwell Construction Co. v. J. Garrell, Deputy Commissioner etc. (1972, 352 F. Supp. 193).

Construction

"Modification of Awards" section of Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Act incorporated by reference in District of Columbia Compensation Act was intended to apply only to cases in which deputy commissioner had "finally acted" by issuing or denying compensation order, and amendment was not intended to impose additional time barrier to recovery by claimants who filed application within time otherwise permitted and were still awaiting order thereon. Intercounty Construction Corporation et ano. v. N. C. A. Walter, Deputy Commissioner, etc. (1974, 500 F. 2d 815, 163 U.S. App. D.C. 147; aff'd 95 S. Ct. 2016, 422 U.S. 1).

Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act is to be liberally construed in the light of its remedial and humanitarian purposes and court will not construe act to enable plaintiffs to escape liability to persons entitled to recover for admittedly compensable death by reading into it technical restrictions on tolling of filing period which are inconsistent with purpose of Act. Blackwell Constructon Co. v. J. Garrell, Deputy Commissioner, etc. (1972, 352 F. Supp. 193).

Dependency

At least in cases such as that in which workman's drinking and its adverse potential impact on his minor children constituted justifiable cause for his widow's living apart from workman, effect of original justification persists and inheres in relationship of parties despite change in circumstances since initial separation. C. G. Matthews et al. v. N. C. A. Walter, Deputy Commissioner, etc. et al. (1975, 512 F. 2d 941, 168 U.S. App. D.C. 27).

Requisite conjugal nexus existed between claimant and workman at time of his death where decedent knowingly accepted claimant's relationship with another man, neither attempted to remarry, decedent contributed to her support and continued to have sexual relations with her, she continued to hold herself out as decedent's wife and she helped care for decedent when he was ill. Id.

Employment relationship

Though real estate broker worked on commission basis he was not independent contractor but was "employee", within workmen's compensation recovery limitations, of corporation which required him to attend sales meetings and, as directed, to check out possible listings and "sit" on specific property, to report on all sales transactions before they were "finalized," to comply with requirements, standards and methods of doing business established by corporation and to clear with corporation all prospective listings of property and all potential sales and who was furnished office, secretarial help, business card and car and advance on expenses and hospitalization and life insurance. R. W. McGinniss v. Frederick W. Berens Sales, Inc., et ano. (D.C. App. 1973, 308 A. 2d 765).

Enforcement of orders

If employee seeks to enforce default entered for non-payment of award by employer, employer does not have to make payment under supplementary order until court finds that order was in accordance with law. L. Leonard v. N. C. A. Walter, Deputy Commissioner, etc. (1973, 356 F. Supp. 56).

Final order enforceable by claimant or deputy commissioner can be either deputy commissioner's original order or his supplemental order, if one was entered. Id.

Before enforcement of final order of deputy commissioner, court must determine whether order was made in accordance with law, and employer does not have to pay award until determination is made. Id.

Estoppel

Estoppel may be asserted in cases brought under the Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act to prevent party from relying on defense of statute of limitations. Blackwell Construction Co. v. J. Garrell, Deputy Commissioner, etc. (1972, 352 F. Supp. 193).

Finality of award

Ordinarily, compensation order under Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Act becomes final unless employer institutes judicial proceedings to set it aside within 30 days of entry of order. L. Leonard v. N. C. A. Walter, Deputy Commissioner, etc. (1973, 356 F. Supp. 56).

Parties

Benefits Review Board was not a proper party and could not be compelled to participate in litigation over the propriety of its decision vacating order setting aside denial of claim for workmen's compensation death benefits under Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act which had been adopted as District of Columbia's Workmen's Compensation Act. E. McCord v. Benefits Review Board et al. (1975, 514 F. 2d 198, 168 U.S. App. D.C. 302).

Review

Under Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Act, employer must make payment of award before he can obtain ruling on his claim before district court to set aside award, unless he obtains interlocutory injunction. L. Leonard v. N. C. A. Walter, Deputy Commissioner, etc. (1973, 356 F. Supp. 56).

Third party, injury by

District of Columbia workmen's compensation statute, i.e., the Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act, did not bar suit against the District by employees of Districts independent contractor, which had contracted to install water main, to recover, on theory of inherently dangerous activity necessitating special precautions, for injuries sustained when flames erupted at open end of 66-inch diameter water main, which had been completely closed off for some 41 days and which employees were in process of cleaning when flames erupted and engulfed their caecal environment. R. Lindler et ano. v. District of Columbia (1974, 502 F. 2d 495, 164 U.S. App. D.C. 35).

Time for filing claim

Under District of Columbia Compensation Act, timely filed claim remains pending until compensation order is entered by deputy commissioner, and claimant, to preserve his claim, is not required to refile timely filed but unadjudicated claim after carrier stops paying compensation. Intercounty Construction Corporation et ano. v. N. C. A. Walter, Deputy Commissioner, etc. (1974, 500 F. 2d 815, 163 U.S. App. D.C. 147; aff'd 95 S. Ct. 2016, 422 U.S. 1).

Making of a voluntary payment of compensation on account of compensable death under Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act permits the filing of a claim within one year of the date of the last payment and it is not required that such claim be filed by the same person to whom voluntary payment was made. Blackwell Construction Co. v. J. Garrell, Deputy Commissioner, etc. (1972, 352 F. Supp. 193).

— Tolling of filing period

The one-year statute of limitations for filing claim for death benefits under Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act was tolled as to minor son of deceased employee because he had no guardian or other authorized representative with legal duty to file a claim on his behalf. Blackwell Construction Co. v. J. Garrell, Deputy Commissioner, etc. (1972, 352 F. Supp. 193).

Payments of compensation made to woman who filed claim as surviving widow on account of death of deceased employee were payments of compensation and tolled the filing period, so that the claim of the actual widow and the deceased's minor son filed approximately seven months after final payment to such person were timely. Id.

Payments made with intent of providing money allowance to dependent of decedent are payments of compensation within meaning of Compensation Act provision relating to the tolling of filing period because of payments of compensation made on account of death of covered person. Id.

§ 36-502. Exceptions.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Independent contractor

Though real estate broker worked on commission basis he was not independent contractor but was "employee", within workmen's compensation recovery limitations, of corporation which required him to attend sales meetings and, as directed, to check out possible listings and "sit" on specific property, to report on all sales transactions before they were "finalized," to comply with requirements, standards and methods of doing business established by corporation and to clear with corporation all prospective listings of property and all potential sales and who was furnished office, secretarial help, business card and car and advance on expenses and hospitalization and life insurance. R. W. McGinniss v. Frederick W. Berens Sales, Inc., et ano. (D.C. App. 1973, 308 A. 2d 765).

§ 36-503. Administrative expenses.

There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to pay the expenses incurred by the United States Department of Labor in the administration of this chapter. (May 17, 1928, ch. 612, § 3, as added Oct. 26, 1973, Pub. L. 93-140, § 19, 87 Stat. 507.)

APPROPRIATIONS

See note under § 1-226a.

§ 36-504. District employees—Transfer of functions with respect to processing claims.

All functions of the Secretary under chapter 81 of title 5 of the United States Code, with respect to the processing of claims filed by employees of the government of the District for compensation for work injuries, are transferred to and shall be exercised by the Mayor, effective the day after the day on which the District establishes an independent personnel system or systems. (Dec. 24, 1973, Pub. L. 93-198, title II, § 204(e), 87 Stat. 783.)

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

CODIFICATION

Section was enacted as part of the District of Columbia Self-Government and Governmental Reorganization Act, and not as part of Act May 17, 1928, ch. 612, as amended, which comprises this chapter.

Section is also set out as a note under 5 U.S.C 8101.

EFFECTIVE DATE

Section effective July 1, 1974, see sec. 771(b) of Act Dec. 24, 1973, Pub. L. 93-198, as amended, set out as a note under § 1-121.

Chapter 6.—PAYMENT AND COLLECTION OF WAGES

§ 36-601. Definitions.

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

§ 36-603. Payment of wages upon discharge or resignation of employee and upon suspension of work—
Liability of employer for failure to pay wages in accordance with this section.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Liquidated damages

Wage payment law rather than minimum wage law (§ 36-401 et seq.) was applicable to former employee's claims against former employer for allegedly unpaid wages and, therefore denial of former employee's claim for liquidated damages, attorneys' fees and costs in reliance on the minimum wage law was improper, where former employee did not quarrel with hourly rate but sued on basis of wages allegedly due for certain hours of work. D. E. Klingaman v. Holiday Tours, Inc. (D.C. App. 1973, 309 A. 2d 54).

§ 36-606. Enforcement, records and subpoenas.

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Appealable order

Since order of Minimum Wage and Industrial Safety Board advising employer that it owed and should pay a former employee all commissions earned prior to termination of his employment was enforceable only through criminal prosecution or civil litigation in which issues of fact or law would be determined entirely upon the pleadings and trial record, and not upon the proceedings before the Board, Board's order was not an "appealable order" under the Administrative Procedure Act. Sonderling Broadcasting Corporation v. District of Columbia Minimum Wage and Industrial Safety Board (D.C. App. 1974, 315 A. 2d 828).

§ 36-608. Employees' remedies.

Chapter 7.—PUBLIC EMPLOYMENT SERVICE

Sec.

36-701. Public employment service—Establishment by Mayor—Transfer of functions of existing employment service.

§ 36-701. Public employment service—Establishment by Mayor—Transfer of functions of existing employment service.

(a) All functions of the Secretary of Labor (hereafter in this section referred to as the "Secretary") under section 3 of the Act (29 U.S.C. 49b) entitled "An Act to provide for the establishment of a national employment system and for cooperation with the States in the promotion of such system, and for other purposes", approved June 6, 1933 (29 U.S.C. 49-49k), with respect to the maintenance of a public employment service for the District, are transferred to the Mayor. After the effective date of this transfer, the Secretary shall maintain with the District the same relationship with respect to a public employment service in the District, including the financing of such service, as he has with the States (with respect to a public employment service in the States) generally.

(b) The Mayor is authorized and directed to establish and administer a public employment service in the District and to that end he shall have all necessary powers to cooperate with the Secretary in the same manner as a State under the Act of June 6, 1933, specified in subsection (a). (Dec. 24, 1973, Pub. L. 93-198, title II, § 204(a), (b), 87 Stat. 783.)

TITLE 38.—LIENS

Chapter 1.—MECHANICS, MATERIALMEN, AND CONTRACTORS

§ 38-101. Mechanic's lien.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Amount of lien

Once mechanic's lien arises, this section operates to prescribe amount thereof and if lien arises from work performed pursuant to valid contract, there is no dispute over fact that labor and materials have been expended on and to benefit of building in accordance with contract and no expenditure is challenged as unreasonable, contract price is measure of liability upon enforcement of the lien and no further proof of expenditures or proffer of reasonableness is required to make lien enforceable. M. E. Sloane et ux. v. Malcolm Price, Inc. (D.C. App. 1975, 339 A. 2d 43).

On appeal from judgment to enforce mechanic's lien based on cost-plus contract, record does not show aggregate cost upon face of account to be so excessive and unreasonable as to suggest gross negligence or fraud and does not justify compelling contractor to show reasonableness. Id.

In suit to enforce mechanic's lien based on cost-plus contract, evidence sustains finding that estimated total cost figure contained in contract was not a maximum. Id.

Statutory construction

Within provision of this section that once work on building is performed pursuant to contract, that structure becomes subject to lien "for the contract price agreed upon," "contract" is not limited to certain type of contract and includes cost-plus type contract. M. E. Sloane et ux v. Malcolm Price, Inc. (D.C. App. 1975, 339 A. 2d 43).

§ 38-102. Notice.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Abandonment of work

Evidence sustains finding that abandonment of work under home improvement contract by plaintiff contractor did not occur prior to the beginning of three months period provided for filing of mechanic's lien and that no abandonment occurred prior to termination of mutual efforts to compromise, in proceeding by contractor to enforce mechanic's lien. M. E. Sloane et ux. v. Malcolm Price, Inc. (D.C. App. 1975, 339 A. 2d 43).

When contractor abandons project prior to completion, applicable time period for asserting mechanic's lien runs from date of abandonment. Malcolm Price, Inc. v. M. E. Sloane et ux. (D.C. App. 1973, 308 A. 2d 779).

§ 38-103. Subcontractor.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Waiver

Mechanics' liens filed by subcontractor could not be enforced, where subcontractor released initial mechanics' liens after being informed that money deposited by property owner with title company would not be disbursed without such releases, and where title company then released some or all of the amount deposited, regardless of whether property owner was still indebted to general contractor when subcontractor filed subsequent mechanics' liens against the property. Hutchison Brothers Excavating Company, Inc. v. L. Dworman (D.C. App. 1973, 307 A. 2d 760).

Where subcontractor upon filing of mechanics' liens demanded statement from property owner of terms of contract between itself and general contractor as required by statute, and such demand was never acted on by property owner, but where subcontractor released its mechanics' liens, subcontractor by releasing the liens waived its right to such statement. Id.

§ 38-107. Subcontractor entitled to know terms of contract.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Waiver

Where subcontractor upon filing of mechanics' liens demanded statement from property owner of terms of contract between itself and general contractor as required by statute, and such demand was never acted on by property owner, but where subcontractor released its mechanics' liens, subcontractor by releasing the liens waived its right to such statement. *Hutchison Brothers Excavating Company, Inc. v. EFFECTIVE DATE OF 1973 AMENDMENT

Section 771 of Act Dec. 24, 1973, Pub. L. 93-198, as amended, set out as a note under § 1-121, provided in part that the amendment to this section is effective on Jan. 2, 1975, if a majority of the registered qualified electors in the District of Columbia voting on the charter issue in the charter referendum accepted the charter set out in title IV of such Act. The charter was approved by the voters on May 7, 1974.

Chapter 8.—PAY AND ALLOWANCES

§ 39-805. Annual estimates.

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

* * * * *

(b) Class A: For each passenger vehicle, including passenger vehicles licensed under paragraph (d) of section 47-2331.

(1) When wholly equipped with pneumatic tires, the manufacturer's shipping weight of which is less than three thousand four hundred pounds, $40; three thousand four hundred pounds or more, $67.

(2) When wholly or partially equipped with other than pneumatic tires, double the above fees.

Class B. For each truck, tractor, and passenger-carrying vehicle for hire having a seating capacity of eight passengers or more in addition to the driver or operator with the exception of passenger vehicles licensed under paragraph (b) of section 47-2331.

(1) When wholly equipped with pneumatic tires, the manufacturer's shipping weight of the chassis, plus the weight of the cab and body, is less than three thousand pounds, $71; three thousand pounds or more but less than four thousand pounds, $79; four thousand pounds or more but less than five thousand pounds, $92; five thousand pounds or more but less than six thousand pounds, $107; six thousand pounds or more but less than seven thousand pounds, $122; seven thousand pounds or more but less than eight thousand pounds, $132; eight thousand pounds or more but less than nine thousand pounds, $150; nine thousand pounds or more but less than ten thousand pounds, $171; ten thousand pounds or more but less than twelve thousand pounds, $218; twelve thousand pounds or more but less than fourteen thousand pounds, $225; fourteen thousand pounds or more but less than sixteen thousand pounds, $306; sixteen thousand pounds or more, $359: Provided, That in determining the total weight of a vehicle subject to the provisions of this clause, there shall be excluded, in computing such weight, the weight of any special equipment which is subject to taxation as tangible personal property under subsection (e) of this section.

(2) When wholly or partially equipped with other than pneumatic tires, double the above fees.

Class C. For each trailer, when the manufacturer's shipping weight of the chassis, plus the weight of the body, is less than five hundred pounds, $15; five hundred pounds or more but less than one thousand pounds, $22; one thousand pounds or more but less than one thousand five hundred pounds, $36; one thousand five hundred pounds or more but less than two thousand five hundred pounds, $58; two thousand five hundred pounds or more but less than three thousand five hundred pounds, $82; three thousand five hundred pounds or more but less than six thousand pounds, $107; six thousand pounds or more but less than eight thousand pounds, $132; eight thousand pounds or more but less than ten thousand pounds, $164; ten thousand pounds or more but less than twelve thousand pounds, $218; twelve thousand pounds or more but less than sixteen thousand pounds, $271; sixteen thousand pounds or more, $323: Provided, That in determining the total weight of a trailer subject to the provisions of this Class C, there shall be excluded, in computing such weight, the weight of any special equipment which is subject to taxation as tangible personal property under subsection (e) of this section.

Class D. For each motorcycle, motor bicycle, motor tricycle, and motor wheel, $16.

Class E. For each motor vehicle classified by the Commissioner or his designated agent as an antique motor vehicle on the basis of a finding that such vehicle was manufactured prior to January 1, 1930, and is owned solely as a collector's item, with its use limited to participation in club activities, exhibits, tours, parades, and similar uses, but in no event for general transportation, $7.

Class F. For dealers' identification tags, first set of tags, for $40, and $14 for each additional set.

Class G. For each motor vehicle propelled by fuel not subject to taxation under chapter 19 of title 47, and motor vehicles propelled by any means other than motor fuels as defined in said chapter, double the fees provided in this subsection for classes A through D.

* * * * *

(d) Twenty-five per centum of the gross proceeds from fees payable under this title shall be paid into the Metrobus Fund established under section 1-1443b. The remainder of the proceeds from fees payable under this title shall be divided between the General Fund and the Highway Fund. The Council of the District of Columbia shall determine the percentage of such remainder which shall be deposited to the credit of the General Fund of the District of Columbia, except that the percentage of such remainder deposited to the credit of the General Fund shall be not less than forty-two per centum or more than forty-seven per centum of such remainder. The amounts of such remainder not deposited to the credit of the General Fund, along with specified moneys collected from the motor-vehicle-fuel tax, and specified amounts of fees charged for the titling of motor vehicles and trailers, including specified amounts of fees charged for the issuance of permits to operate motor vehicles, shall be appropriated and used solely and exclusively for—

(1) construction, reconstruction, improvement, and maintenance of public highways, including the necessary administrative expenses in connection therewith;

(2) the expenses of the office of the director of vehicles and traffic incident to the regulation and control of traffic and the administration of the same; and

(3) the expenses necessarily involved in the police control, regulation, and administration of traffic upon the highways, except that the total amount to be expended under this item shall not exceed 15 per centum of the total payment appropriated for pay and allowances of officers and members of the Metropolitan Police force.

(7) Amended subsection (d) generally.

EFFECTIVE DATE OF 1975 AMENDMENT

Section 801(a) of act Oct. 21, 1975, D.C. Law 1-23, provided: "The amendments made by sections 101, 102, 201, and 203 [amending §§ 40-103, 40-603, 47-1901, and 45-723, respectively] shall take effect on the first day of the first month after the day this act becomes law according to the provisions of section 602(c) of the District of Columbia Self-Government and Governmental Reorganization Act [§ 1-147(c)]."

MAYOR TO SUBMIT LEGISLATIVE PROPOSAL

Section 104(a) of act Oct. 21, 1975, D.C. Law 1-23, provided: "The Mayor of the District of Columbia shall submit to the Council of the District of Columbia, no later than January 1, 1976, proposed legislation detailing a three-tier registration fee for automobiles in class A of section 3(b) of Title IV of the District of Columbia Revenue Act of 1937 (D.C. Code, sec. 40-103) to replace the existing two-tier structure, with disproportionately lower fee increases for lighter weight, compact and subcompact automobiles."

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in section 40-202.

§ 40-104. Unlawful acts—Penalty.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Investigatory stops

Actions of police officers in stopping rented vehicle in order to determine if the defendant had proper license and rental agreement was reasonable, and seizure of pistol that was in plain view of officer who was looking at interior of car with flashlight while other officer was engaged in conversation with defendant did not violate the Fourth Amendment. R. F. Palmore v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 290 A. 2d 573; aff'd 93 S. Ct. 1670, 411 U.S. 389).

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Arrest

Where, after being stopped for having run stop sign, defendant was unable to furnish officers with either driver's permit or vehicle registration and police were unable to verify ownership by other means because of computer malfunction, police had probable cause to believe that vehicle was being used without authorization and to arrest defendant on that basis. R. A. Botts v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 310 A. 2d 237).

Search and seizure

Search of defendant's person after arrest for driving without a permit was not unlawful. C. H. Spencer v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 316 A. 2d 331).

Where defendant was arrested for the petty offense of driving with a learner's permit while unaccompanied by a licensed driver and was frisked at scene and no weapons were found, arresting officer who then took defendant to the station and instead of informing defendant, who had $171 cash in his pockets, of his right to post $50 collateral, as prescribed for the petty offense, and leave the precinct station, required defendant as a booking inventory procedure to empty his pockets, conducted an unreasonable search rendering narcotics seized from pocket inadmissible. United States v. H. E. Mills (1972, 472 F. 2d 1231, 153 U.S. App. D.C. 156).

Informing person arrested for petty offense of his option to post collateral and giving him an opportunity to exercise that option is a necessary condition to a thorough and complete search that is conducted only as incident to needs of stationhouse detention. Id.

When person is charged with a collateral-type petty offense under which he rightfully has opportunity to post collateral and avoid further detention and there is no probable cause to believe that he committed a more serious crime, police may not engage in an inventory search of offender or an equivalent direction that he empty his pockets and seek to support it on ground of holding him in further confinement, unless at a minimum he was notified of his opportunity to post collateral and refused or was unable to do so. Id.

§ 40-302. Revocation or suspension of operators' permits—Procedure—New permit after revocation—Nonresidents—Penalty.

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Evidence

Where driver's counsel at license revocation hearing had not had transcript of testimony given at earlier license suspension hearing and hearing officer at revocation hearing had unequivocally advised counsel that urinalysis had

showed .21 ethyl alcohol, driver was entitled to challenge on appeal from revocation a police officer's testimony, given at suspension hearing, that urinalysis report showed "zero-two-one, ethyl alcohol," on ground that it was not clear whether he meant .021 or 0.21, although counsel had failed to complain at revocation hearing during which hearing officer read statement of facts, including the police officer's testimony. M. T. Reap v. Department of Motor Vehicles of the District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1973, 305 A. 2d 513).

Where hearing officer at license revocation hearing had not examined laboratory urinalysis report which police officer, at earlier suspension hearing, had testified showed "zero-two-one, ethyl alcohol," and record did not contain the report so that it was not clear whether witness meant .021 or 0.21, officer's testimony concerning the urinalysis should not have been accorded any probative weight and, inasmuch as hearing officer expressly relied upon that testimony in revoking driver's license, revocation order must be reversed and case remanded for new hearing. Id.

Procedural requirements

Procedural due process requires that hearing be held prior to permanent suspension of driver's license. A. Quick v. Department of Motor Vehicles of the District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1975, 331 A.2d 319).

Driver's license revocation proceeding is a "contested case" and, therefore, is controlled by Administrative Procedure Act (§§ 1-1501 et seq.). Id.

Search and seizure

Where officer had probable cause to arrest defendant for operating a motor vehicle after revocation of his operator's permit and effected a full custody arrest, search of defendant's person without search warrant, inspection of crumpled cigarette package found on defendant's person and seizure of heroin capsules found in the package were permissible even though officer did not indicate any subjective fear of defendant and did not suspect that defendant was armed. United States v. W. Robinson, Jr. (1973, 94 S.Ct. 467, 414 U.S. 218; rev'g 471 F. 2d 1082, 153 U.S. App. D.C. 114).

Following arrest of defendant under warrant of operating motor vehicle after revocation of operator's permit, police officer was authorized to conduct "full field search" of defendant, remove envelope from pocket inside coat and open it to determine if it contained narcotics. United States v. K. C. Simmons (D.C. App. 1973, 302 A. 2d 728).

Absent "special circumstances," a police officer has no right to search either the person or the vehicle incident to a lawful arrest for violation of a mere motor vehicle regulation. United States v. W. Robinson, Jr. (1972, 471 F. 2d 1082, 153 U.S. App. D.C. 114; rev'd 94 S. Ct. 467, 414 U.S. 218).

§ 40-303. Nonresidents exempt from registration—Period of exemption.

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

Chapter 4.—MOTOR VEHICLE SAFETY RESPONSIBILITY

§ 40-417. Short title.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Purpose

Motor Vehicle Safety Responsibility Act (this chapter) is a remedial statute designed to protect, so far as possible, innocent persons injured by negligent operation of motor vehicles. Government Employees Insurance Company v. Stonewall Casualty Company (D.C. App. 1973, 301 A. 2d 72).

Chapter 5.—PUBLIC-OWNED VEHICLES

Sec.

40-501a. Official use of motor vehicles.

40-504. Omitted.

§ 40-501a. Official use of motor vehicles.

All passenger motor vehicles and watercraft owned by the District of Columbia shall be operated and utilized in conformity with section 5 of the Act of July 16, 1914, as amended by section 16 of the Act of August 2, 1946 (31 U.S.C. 638a), and shall be under the direction and control of the Mayor of the District of Columbia. The Mayor is authorized to alter or change the assignment or direct the alteration or interchangeable use of any passenger motor vehicles or watercraft by officers and employees of the District of Columbia except as otherwise provided in such Act. Limitations on the official use of passenger motor vehicles, as set out in section 5 of such Act, shall not apply to the Mayor or, with the approval of the Mayor, to officers and employees of the District government the character of whose duties make such transportation necessary. (Oct. 26, 1973, Pub. L. 93-140, § 2, 87 Stat. 504.)

USE OF CHAUFFEURS

Section 10 of the District of Columbia Appropriation Act, 1975 (Aug. 31, 1974, Pub. L. 93-405, 88 Stat. 828) provided:

"No part of any funds appropriated by this Act shall be used to pay the compensation (whether by contract or otherwise) of any individual for performing services as a chauffeur or driver for any designated officer or employee of the District of Columbia government (other than the Commissioner of the District of Columbia, Chief of Police and Fire Chief), or for performing services as a chauffeur or driver of a motor vehicle assigned for the personal or individual use of any such officer or employee (other than the Commissioner of the District of Columbia, Chief of Police and Fire Chief). No part of any funds appropriated by this Act, in excess of $12,000 in the aggregate, shall, in any fiscal year, be used to pay the compensation (whether by contract or otherwise) of individuals for performing services as a chauffeur or driver for the Commissioner of the District of Columbia, or for performing services as a chauffeur or driver of a motor vehicle assigned for the personal or individual use of the Commissioner of the District of Columbia."

Similar provisions were contained in the following prior appropriation acts:

1974—Aug. 14, 1973, Pub. L. 93-91, § 13, 87 Stat. 310.

Chapter 6.—REGULATION OF TRAFFIC

Sec.

40-603-3. Deposit into Metrobus Fund of portion of proceeds from excise tax for issuance of motor vehicle title certificate.

CHAPTER REFERRED TO IN U.S. CODE

This chapter is referred to in section 212b of title 40, U.S. Code.

§ 40-602. Definitions.

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

§ 40-603. Council authorized to make regulations—
 Department of Vehicles and Traffic—Director—
 Congressional tags—Titling—Arterial and boulevard highways—Council may prescribe penalties—
 Publication of regulations—Signs on highways—
 Prosecutions—Excise tax imposed for issuance of motor vehicle title certificates—Impoundment of motor vehicle for outstanding traffic violation notices.

(c) The Council of the District of Columbia is authorized and empowered to make and modify, and the Mayor is authorized and empowered to enforce, reasonable regulations in respect to brakes, horns, lights, mufflers, and other equipment, the inspection of the same; the registering, reregistering, titling, retitling, transferring of titles, and revocation of the certificate of title to motor vehicles and trailers: Provided, That congressional tags shall be issued by the Mayor under consecutive numbers, one to each Senator and Representative in Congress, to the elective officers and disbursing clerks of the Senate and the House of Representatives, the chief clerk of the Senate, the Parliamentarian of the Senate, the Parliamentarian of the House of Representatives, the attending physician of the Capitol, and the assistant secretaries (one for the majority and one for the minority of the Senate), for their official use, which, when used by them individually while on official business, shall authorize them to park their automobiles in any available curb space in the District of Columbia, except within fire plug, fire house, loading station, and loading platform limitations, and such congressional tags shall not be assigned to or used by others: Provided further, That such congressional tags shall be valid only for the Congress in which such tags are so issued, and it shall be unlawful to display such congressional tags for a period longer than thirty days after the opening of the next Congress.

Any person violating this section shall be fined not more than $300 or imprisoned not more than ninety days, or both.

(j) In addition to the fees and charges levied under other provisions of this chapter, there is hereby levied and imposed an excise tax for the issuance of every original certificate of title for a motor vehicle or trailer in the District, and for the issuance of every subsequent certificate of title for a motor vehicle or trailer in the District in the case of sale or resale thereof, at the rate of 6 per centum of the fair market value of such motor vehicle or trailer at the time such certificate is issued, as determined by the Assessor of the District of Columbia or his duly authorized representatives. As used in this section, the term "original certificate of title" shall mean the first certificate of title issued by the District of Columbia for any particular motor vehicle or trailer. No certificate of title so issued shall be delivered or furnished to the person entitled thereto until the tax has been paid in full. The Assessor of the District of Columbia may require every applicant for a certificate of title to supply such information as he deems necessary as to the time of purchase, the purchase price, and other information relative to the determination of the fair market value of any motor vehicle or trailer for which a certificate of title is required and issued. The issuance of certificates of title for the following motor vehicles and trailers shall be exempt from the tax imposed by this subsection:

(1) Motor vehicles and trailers owned by the United States or the District of Columbia.

(2) Motor vehicles and trailers purchased or acquired by nonresidents prior to coming into the District of Columbia and establishing or maintaining residences in the District.

(3) Motor vehicles and trailers purchased or acquired by nonresidents prior to coming into the District of Columbia and establishing or maintaining a business or businesses in the District. Except as hereinafter provided, it is not intended to exempt from the tax the issuance of certificates of title for motor vehicles and trailers owned by nonresidents who are engaged in business in the District at the time of their purchase or acquisition of such vehicles and trailers and who use such vehicles and trailers in the conduct of their District business or businesses.

(4) Motor vehicles and trailers owned by a utility or public service company for use in furnishing a commodity or service: Provided, That the receipts from furnishing such commodity or service are subject to a gross-receipts or mileage tax in force in the District of Columbia at the time of a certificate of title for any such vehicle or trailer is issued.

(5) New motor vehicles acquired from dealers as replacements for defective vehicles purchased new not more than sixty days prior to the date of such replacement, except that if the fair market value of any replacement vehicle is greater than that of the vehicle which it replaces, then the tax imposed by this section shall be paid on such difference in value. If the fair market value of any replacement vehicle is less than that of the vehicle which it replaces, then the Mayor or his designated agent is authorized to refund to the owner of the replacement vehicle an amount equal to the difference between the excise tax paid on the defective vehicle and the excise tax paid on the replacement vehicle.

(As amended Nov. 1, 1973, Pub. L. 93-145, § 101, 87 Stat. 531; Oct. 21, 1975, D.C. Law 1-23, title I, § 102 (a), 22 DCR 2094.)

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

AMENDMENTS

1975—Act Oct. 21, 1975, D.C. Law 1-23, amended subsec. (j), by striking out "5 per centum" and inserting "6 per centum" in lieu thereof.

1973—Section 101 of Act Nov. 1, 1973, Pub. L. 93-145, amended subsec. (c) by striking out "Comptroller of the Senate," effective as of July 1, 1973.

EFFECTIVE DATE OF 1975 AMENDMENT

See sec. 801(a) of act Oct. 21, 1975, D.C. Law 1-23, set out as a note under § 40-103.

MAYOR TO SUBMIT LEGISLATIVE PROPOSAL

Section 104(b) of act Oct. 21, 1975, D.C. Law 1-23, provided: "The Mayor of the District of Columbia shall submit to the Council of the District of Columbia, no later than January 1, 1976, proposed legislation detailing a restructured three-tier motor vehicle excise tax rate which provides for a substantially lower tax rate for lighter weight, compact and subcompact automobiles."

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Evidence

Where driver's counsel at license revocation hearing had not had transcript of testimony given at earlier license suspension hearing and hearing officer at revocation hearing had unequivocally advised counsel that urinalysis had showed .21 ethyl alcohol, driver was entitled to challenge on appeal from revocation a police officer's testimony, given at suspension hearing, that urinalysis report showed "zero-two-one, ethyl alcohol," on ground that it was not clear whether he meant .021 or 0.21, although counsel had failed to complain at revocation hearing during which hearing officer read statement of facts, including the police officer's testimony. M. T. Reap v. Department of Motor Vehicles of the District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1973, 305 A. 2d 513).

Where hearing officer at license revocation hearing had not examined laboratory urinalysis report which police officer, at earlier suspension hearing, had testified showed "zero-two-one, ethyl alcohol," and record did not contain the report so that it was not clear whether witness meant .021 or 0.21, officer's testimony concerning the urinalysis should not have been accorded any probative weight and, inasmuch as hearing officer expressly relied upon that testimony in revoking driver's license, revocation order must be reversed and case remanded for new hearing. Id.

Search and seizure

Where officer had probable cause to arrest defendant for operating a motor vehicle after revocation of his operator's permit and effected a full custody arrest, search of defendant's person without search warrant, inspection of crumpled cigarette package found on defendant's person and seizure of heroin capsules found in the package were permissible even though officer did not indicate any subjective fear of defendant and did not suspect that defendant was armed. United States v. W. Robinson, Jr. (1973, 94 S.Ct. 467, 414 U.S. 218; rev'g 471 F. 2d 1082, 153 U.S. App. D.C. 114).

Absent "special circumstances," a police officer has no right to search either the person or the vehicle incident to a lawful arrest for violation of a mere motor vehicle regulation. United States v. W. Robinson, Jr. (1972, 471 F. 2d 1082, 153 U.S. App. D.C. 114; rev'd 94 S. Ct. 467, 414 U.S. 218).

Arresting officers did not have reasonable grounds to search a passenger in back seat of an automobile stopped during "rush hour" for speeding even if after automobile stopped they observed passenger move his right arm and shoulder as if to hide something or put something away, and a gun and heroin found in such search should have been suppressed pursuant to defendant's motions. United States v. L. N. Page (D.C. App. 1972, 298 A. 2d 233).

§ 40-603-2. Commissioner may enter into interstate agreement concerning enforcement of traffic laws:

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

§ 40-603-3. Deposit into Metrobus Fund of portion of proceeds from excise tax for issuance of motor vehicle title certificate.

Notwithstanding any other provision of law, not less than one-sixth of the proceeds collected under section 40-603(j) shall be deposited into the Metrobus Fund established by section 1-1443b, together with such additional proceeds collected under section 40-603(j) as the Mayor of the District of Columbia may, in his discretion, deem to be appropriate and necessary. (Oct. 21, 1975, D.C. Law 1-23, title I, § 102(b), 22 DCR 2094.)

TITLE 41.—PARTNERSHIPS

Chapter 3.—UNIFORM PARTNERSHIPS

PART IV

RELATIONS OF PARTNERS TO ONE ANOTHER

§ 41-317. Rules determining rights and duties of partners.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Partnership agreement

Where partnership agreement to which plaintiff subscribed, stated that partnership agreement could be amended by majority approval of partners, there was no requirement of unanimous vote for the merger of partnership with another firm on ground that merger was a fundamental change in partnership. J. E. Day v. Sidley & Austin et al. (1975, 394 F. Supp. 986).

§ 41-320. Partner accountable as a fiduciary.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Breach of fiduciary duty

Where there was no financial gain for defendant members of former partnership executive committee with respect to negotiations which led to merger with another partnership, and the remaining partners acquired no more power in firm as result of alleged withholding of information about merger from plaintiff former partner, there could be no breach of fiduciary duty between such defendant partners and plaintiff. J. E. Day v. Sidley & Austin et al. (1975, 394 F. Supp. 986).

§ 41-321. Right to an account.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Entitlement to accounting

Where limited partner received monthly and annual financial report of the business, had not sought to examine the books of the partnership, had been apprised of the partnership's financial status, and did not contend that general partners had engaged in financial mismanagement of any kind, he is not entitled to an accounting. C. Cafritz v. C. Cafritz et ano. (D.C. App. 1975, 347 A. 2d 267).

PART VI

DISSOLUTION AND WINDING UP

§ 41-331. Dissolution by decree of court.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Conduct prejudicial to business

Allegedly irreconcilable differences between limited partner and general partners concerning both retention of cash received upon liquidation of certain partnership assets and also concerning development of property owned by the partnership do not interfere with the carrying on the partnership business, particularly in light of the fact that, under the partnership agreement, the general partners had full power to control, operate and manage the business, so that the existence of the differences do not provide basis for dissolution. C. Cafritz v. C. Cafritz et ano. (D.C. App. 1975, 347 A. 2d 267).

§ 41-337. Rights of partners to application of partnership property.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Joint tenancy, right of survivorship

Where sister and brother, as partners, owned realty and savings accounts as joint tenants, all of the four unities of joint tenancy were present, record showed no evidence that any partnership creditors' claims were not met by partnership assets which were not held in joint tenancy, there was no indication that partners did not understand and intend survivorship consequences of joint tenancy, and there was no evidence that they at any time intended to sever joint tenancy, such partnership assets became sister's by right of survivorship on brother's death and are subject to District of Columbia inheritance tax as part of sister's estate. District of Columbia v. The Riggs National Bank of Washington, D.C., Executor etc. (D.C. App. 1975, 335 A.2d 238).

Partnership agreement

Where new partnership agreement, which plaintiff signed and which resulted in the merger of two firms, set forth in some detail relationship between partners and structure of new firm and no mention was made of the firm's Washington office or plaintiff's status therein although special arrangements were specified for certain other partners, plaintiff had no contractual right to maintain his previous authority over Washington office after merger and hence had no cause of action based on breach of contract when he became only a cochairman of Washington office following merger. J. E. Day v. Sidley & Austin et al. (1975, 394 F. Supp. 986).

§ 41-338. Rights where partnership is dissolved for fraud or misrepresentation.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Fraud

Since plaintiff, a former partner suing former partnership and partners thereof for fraud in connection with representations concerning merger with another partnership, had no right to remain chairman of Washington office under the new partnership agreement to which he subscribed, any alleged misrepresentation regarding his chairmanship of that office after merger could not form basis for cause of action for fraud. J. E. Day v. Sidley & Austin et al. (1975, 394 F. Supp. 986).

§ 41-339. Rules for distribution.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Joint tenancy, right of survivorship

Where sister and brother, as partners, owned realty and savings accounts as joint tenants, all of the four unities of joint tenancy were present, record showed no evidence that any partnership creditors' claims were not met by partnership assets which were not held in joint tenancy, there was no indication that partners did not understand and intend survivorship consequences of joint tenancy, and there was no evidence that they at any time intended to sever joint tenancy, such partnership assets became sister's by right of survivorship on brother's death and are subject to District of Columbia inheritance tax as part of sister's estate. District of Columbia v. The Riggs National Bank of Washington, D.C., Executor etc. (D.C. App. 1975, 335 A. 2d 238).

TITLE 42.—PERSONAL PROPERTY

Chapter 1.—RECORDATION OF INSTRUMENTS

§ 42-107. False statements—Penalty.

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

TITLE 43.—PUBLIC UTILITIES

Chapter 1.—DEFINITION OF TERMS AND APPLICATION OF LAW

§ 43-104. Service.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Steam and chilled water

Coverage under the Public Utilities Act was sufficiently broad to encompass furnishing of steam and chilled water services pursuant to contract between utility and association representing hotel-office-apartment buildings complex since the consumers, i. e., tenants of the complex, received their heating and cooling needs from a third party, i. e., the utility, which was neither their landlord nor their cooperative management group and utility not only distributed but also manufactured the subject steam and chilled water and utility had joined with the association in actively seeking Commission regulation of such service area in the first instance. Watergate Improvement Association v. Public Service Commission of the District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1974, 326 A. 2d 778).

§ 43-121. Pipe-line company.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Steam and chilled water

Coverage under the Public Utilities Act was sufficiently broad to encompass furnishing of steam and chilled water services pursuant to contract between utility and association representing hotel-office-apartment buildings complex since the consumers, i. e., tenants of the complex, received their heating and cooling needs from a third party, i. e., the utility, which was neither their landlord nor their cooperative management group and utility not only distributed but also manufactured the subject steam and chilled water and utility had joined with the association in actively seeking Commission regulation of such service area in the first instance. *Watergate Improvement Association v. Chapter 2.—CREATION OF PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION—MEMBERS—C O U N S E L—EMPLOYEES

Sec.

43-201a. Function of Commission—Unjust, unreasonable, or discriminating charge prohibited.

43-205. People's Counsel—Appointment, compensation, qualifications—Personnel—Duties.

43-205a. Same; Appropriations.

§ 43-201. Members—Eligibility of Commissioners—Oath.

The Public Service Commission of the District of Columbia shall be composed of three commissioners appointed by the Mayor by and with the advice and consent of the Council, except that the members (other than the Commissioner of the District of Columbia) serving as commissioners of such Commission on January 1, 1975, by virtue of their appointment by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, shall continue to serve until the expiration of the terms for which they were so appointed. The member first appointed by the Mayor, by and with the advice and consent of the Council, on or after January 2, 1975, shall serve until

June 30, 1978. Each of the appointed commissioners shall receive a salary at the rate of $7,500 per annum. The terms of office of all successors shall expire three years after the expiration of the terms for which their predecessors were appointed; but any member appointed to fill a vacancy occurring prior to the expiration of the term for which his predecessor was appointed shall be appointed only for the unexpired term of his predecessor. The commission shall at least biennially elect a chairman by a majority vote of its members. No Commissioner shall, during his term of office, hold any other public office. The Mayor shall furnish the Public Service Commission with suitable offices and quarters. No person shall be eligible to the office of Commissioner of the Public Service Commission of the District of Columbia who has not been a bona fide resident of the District of Columbia for a period of at least three years next preceding his appointment or who has voted or claimed residence elsewhere during such period. No person shall be eligible to the office of commissioner of said Public Service Commission who is, or who shall have been during a period of five years next preceding his appointment, directly or indirectly interested in any public utility operating, owning, or having an interest in property in the District of Columbia; or in any stock, bond, mortgage, security, or contract of any such public utility. If any such commissioner shall voluntarily become so interested, his office shall ipso facto become vacant; and if any such commissioner shall become so interested otherwise than voluntarily he shall, within a reasonable time, divest himself of such interest, and if he fails to do so his office shall become vacant. Before entering upon the duties of his office each commissioner, the secretary of the commission, the counsel of the commission and every employee of said commission shall take and subscribe the constitutional oath of office, and shall in addition thereto make oath or affirmation before and file with the clerk of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia that he is not pecuniarily interested, voluntarily or involuntarily, directly or indirectly, in any public utility in the District of Columbia. SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

AMENDMENTS

1975—Act Jan. 3, 1975, Pub. L. 93-635, amended section as follows:

(1) Inserted the following at the end of the first sentence: “, except that the members (other than the Commissioner of the District of Columbia) serving as commissioners of such Commission on January 1, 1975, by virtue of their appointment by the President, by and with the advise and consent of the Senate, shall continue to serve until the expiration of the terms for which they were so appointed. The member first appointed by the Mayor, by and with the advice and consent of the Council, on or after January 2, 1975, shall serve until June 30, 1978.”

(2) Repealed the first sentence which read: “Of the two commissioners first appointed after December 15, 1926, one shall be appointed for a term of two years, and one for a term of three years, commencing July 1, 1926.”

(3) Amended the sixth sentence by substituting “No Commissioner shall” for “No commissioner, other than the said Commissioner of the District of Columbia, shall”.

(4) Amended the seventh sentence by substituting “Mayor” for “Commissioner of the District of Columbia”.

(5) Amended the eighth sentence by substituting “No person shall” for “No person, other than the said Commissioner of the District of Columbia, shall”; and by inserting “of the District of Columbia” immediately after “Public Service Commission”.

1973—Act Dec. 24, 1973, Pub. L. 93-198, amended the first sentence generally. Prior to amendment, the sentence read: “The Public Service Commission of the District of Columbia shall be composed of three commissioners as follows: (1) The Commissioner of the District of Columbia, and (2) two persons appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.”

EFFECTIVE DATE OF 1973 AMENDMENT

Section 771 of Act of Dec. 24, 1973, Pub. L. 93-198, as amended, set out as a note under § 1-121, provided in part that this amendment is effective on Jan. 2, 1975, if a majority of the registered qualified electors in the District of Columbia voting on the charter issue in the charter referendum accepted the charter set out in title IV of such Act. The charter was approved by the voters on May 7, 1974.

DEFINITIONS

The definitions in § 1-122 apply to terms appearing in the amendment to this section by Act Dec. 24, 1973, Pub. L. 93-198, as amended.

TRANSFER OF FUNCTIONS

Section 712 of Act Dec. 24, 1973, Pub. L. 93-198 [set out as § 1-132], provided in part that “[no] function now vested pursuant to section 501 of Reorganization Plan Numbered 3 of 1967 in the . . . District Public Service Commission, or in any officer, employee, or body of or under such agency, shall be considered as a function transferred to the Council pursuant to section 404(a) of this Act [§ 1-144(a)]. Each such function is hereby transferred to the officer, employee, or agency (including any body of or under such agency), to whom or to which it was delegated, or in whom or in which it has remained vested, until the Mayor or Council established under this Act, or both, pursuant to the powers herein granted, shall revoke, modify, or transfer such delegation or vesting.”

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in sections 2-2418, 43-203, 43-205.

§ 43-201a. Function of Commission—Unjust, unreasonable, or discriminating charge prohibited.

There shall be a Public Service Commission whose function shall be to insure that every public utility doing business within the District of Columbia is required to furnish service and facilities reasonably safe and adequate and in all respects just and reasonable. The charge made by any such public utility for any facility or services furnished, or rendered, or to be furnished or rendered, shall be reasonable, just, and nondiscriminatory. Every unjust or unreasonable or discriminating charge for such facility or service is prohibited and is hereby declared unlawful. (Dec. 24, 1973, Pub. L. 93-198, title IV, § 493(a), 87 Stat. 811.)

CODIFICATION

Section was enacted as part of the District of Columbia Self-Government and Governmental Reorganization Act, and not as part of the Act of Mar. 4, 1913, which comprises chapters 1-10 of this title.

EFFECTIVE DATE

Section 771 of Act Dec. 24, 1973, Pub. L. 93-198, as amended, set out as a note under § 1-121, provided in part that this section is effective on Jan. 2, 1975, if a majority of the registered qualified electors in the District of Columbia voting on the charter issue in the charter referendum accepted the charter set out in title IV of such Act. The charter was approved by the voters on May 7, 1974.

§ 43-205. People's Counsel—Appointment, compensation, qualifications—Personnel—Duties.

(a) There is hereby established within the Public Service Commission of the District of Columbia, established by section 43-201, an office to be known as the “Office of the People's Counsel”.

(b) There shall be at the head of such office the People's Counsel who shall be appointed by the Mayor of the District of Columbia, by and with the advice and consent of the Council of the District of Columbia, and who shall serve for a term of three years. Appointments to the position of People's Counsel shall be made without regard to the provisions of title 5 of the United States Code, governing appointments in the competitive service. The People's Counsel shall be entitled to receive compensation at the maximum rate as may be established from time to time for GS-16 of the General Schedule under section 5332 of title 5 of the United States Code. No person shall be appointed to the position of People's Counsel unless that person is admitted to practice before the District of Columbia Court of Appeals. Before entering upon the duties of such office, the People's Counsel shall take and subscribe the same oaths as that required by the Commissioners of the Commission, including an oath or affirmation before the Clerk of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia that he is not pecuniarily¹ interested, voluntarily or involuntarily, directly or indirectly, in any public utility in the District of Columbia.

(c) The People's Counsel is authorized to employ and fix the compensation of such employees, including attorneys, as are necessary to perform the functions vested in him by this Act, and prescribe their authority and duties.

(d) The People's Counsel—

(1) shall represent and appeal for the people of the District of Columbia at hearings of the Commission and in judicial proceedings involving the interests of users of the products of or services furnished by public utilities under the jurisdiction of the Commission;

(2) may represent and appear for petitioners appearing before the Commission for the purpose of complaining in matters of rates or services;

(3) may investigate the services given by, the rates charged by, and the valuation of the properties of, the public utilities under the jurisdiction of the Commission; and

(4) is authorized to develop means to otherwise assure that the interests of users of the products of or services furnished by public utilities under the jurisdiction of the Commission are adequately represented in the course of proceedings before the Commission, including public information dissemination, consultative services, and technical assistance.

(Jan. 2, 1975, Pub. L. 93-614, § 1, 88 Stat. 1975.)

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3, of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

Chapter 3.—SERVICE, VALUATION, ACCOUNTS

§ 43-301. Public utilities—Service and facilities—Charges to be reasonable, just, and nondiscriminatory—To obey orders of Commission.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Determination of rate base—Generally

Differences in public utility's rate of return from different customer classes need not specifically and quantitatively be supported by customer class-cost considerations; differences can be based not only on quantity, but also on nature, time and pattern of use so as to achieve reasonable efficiency and economic operation. Apartment House Council of Metropolitan Washington, Inc. v. Public Service Commission of the District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1975, 332 A.2d 53).

§ 43-305. Commission to ascertain cost of construction, replacement value, outstanding stock—Information to be printed in annual report.

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

Chapter 4.—RATES, EXAMINATIONS, INVESTIGATIONS, AND HEARINGS

§ 43-401. Existing rates continued—Schedules to be filed—Application to change rates—Review of ruling by Court of Appeals.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Due process—Procedural

Although utility's initial application and public notice were captioned as requests for increases in gas rates and, thus, did not clearly indicate that changes in steam and chilled water rates were also being sought, association representing hotel-office-cooperative apartment buildings complex had not been denied procedural due process where steam and chilled water rates were partially dependent upon interruptible gas rates charged other customers and, to that extent, the association was on notice that its steam and chilled water rates might be changed; but, in any event, any possible prejudice was cured when the Commission permitted association to intervene, reopened proceedings and approved new rates only after careful study of the evidence produced at the reopened proceeding. Watergate Improvement Association v. Public Service Commission of the District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1974, 326 A.2d 778).

Jurisdictional lines

It was not unreasonable, in allocating systemwide rate increase as between District of Columbia and state of Maryland, for Public Service Commission to let share of revenue increase follow share of total test-years electricity sales applicable to each jurisdiction. L. S. Goodman v. Public Service Commission of the District of Columbia et al. (1974, 497 F.2d 661, 162 U.S. App. D.C. 74).

Power to fix rates

Under provision of original service agreement that furnishing of steam and chilled water would be subject to a regulation to extent lawfully prescribed by any local regulatory commission having jurisdiction, that if during term of agreement such public regulatory authority prescribed different rates such rates would supersede rates specified in agreement and that either purchaser or seller had right at any time to request regulatory authority to fix just and reasonable rates, the Public Service Commission had power to change rates and to grant each party the right to seek rate changes. Watergate Improvement Association v. Public Service Commission of the District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1974, 326 A.2d 778).

Rate base

So long as capitalized interest is not included in rate base, inclusion of plant under construction provides no excessive compensation to utility. L. S. Goodman v. Public Service Commission of the District of Columbia et al. (1974, 497 F.2d 661, 162 U.S.App.D.C.74).

Public Service Commission did not act arbitrarily, in rate-making case, by inclusion of plant under construction in rate base, although there were alternative methods available. Id.

Where Public Service Commission, in including plant under construction in rate base, chose between alternatives and achieved reasonable result, its findings could not be disturbed. Id.

Where Public Service Commission in including plant under construction in rate base could not determine whether impact of work in progress upon net operating income, when plant was completed, would be substantial, Commission properly gave specific effect to such possibility in setting rate of return at lowest end of range found to be acceptable, and was not required to make compensating adjustment of test-year revenue and expenses. Id.

Public Service Commission did not act arbitrarily, or "double charge" electric power rate payers, by adopting end-of-period rate base and by increasing overall fair rate of return allowed, thus assertedly taking account of effects of inflation twice. Id.

§ 43-402. Commission may adopt rules and regulations.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Applicability of Administrative Procedure Act

Decision of Public Service Commission in telephone rate proceedings to furnish transcripts to intervenors at telephone company's expense does not constitute a proper exercise of Commission's delegated powers to regulate the mode and manner of all investigations and hearings of public utilities and other parties before it, since any procedure established by the Commission must conform with the minimum requirements set forth in Administrative Procedure Act (§§ 1-1501 et seq.), and since Commission's rule that transcripts be furnished to intervenors at telephone company's expense was a mere nullity because it contravened express language of section 1-1509. Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co. v. Public Service Commission of the District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1975, 339 A.2d 710).

§ 43-411. Reasonable rates may be ordered—Notice to be given utility affected thereby.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Power to fix rates

Under provision of original service agreement that furnishing of steam and chilled water would be subject to a regulation to extent lawfully prescribed by any local regulatory commission having jurisdiction, that if during term of agreement such public regulatory authority prescribed different rates such rates would supersede rates specified in agreement and that either purchaser or seller had right at any time to request regulatory authority to fix just and reasonable rates, the Public Service Commission had power to change rates and to grant each party the right to seek rate changes. Watergate Improvement Association v. Public Service Commission of the District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1974, 326 A.2d 778).

§ 43-412. Expenses of investigation or revaluation to be borne by utility—Deposit for costs—Limitation of expenditures in rate and revaluation hearings.

The expenses, including the expenses of the Office of the People's Counsel, of any investigation, valuation, revaluation, or proceeding of any nature by the Public Service Commission of or concerning any public utility operating in the District of Columbia, and all expenses of any litigation, including appeals, arising from any such investigation, valuation, revaluation, or proceeding, or from any order or action of the Commission, shall be borne by the public utility investigated, valued, revalued, or otherwise affected as a special franchise tax in addition to all other taxes imposed by law, and such expenses with interest at 6 per centum per annum may be charged to operating expenses and amortized over such period as the Commission shall deem proper and be allowed for in the rates to be charged by such utility. When any such investigation, valuation, revaluation, or other proceeding is begun the said Public Service Commission may call upon the utility in question for the deposit of such reasonable sum or sums as in the opinion of said commission, it may deem necessary from time to time until the said proceeding or the litigation arising therefrom is completed, the money so paid to be deposited in the treasury of the United States to the credit of the appropriation account known as "miscellaneous trust fund deposit, District of Columbia" and to be disbursed in the manner provided for by law for other expenditures of the government of the District of Columbia, for such purposes as may be approved by the Public Service Commission; or certified by the People's Counsel with respect to his expenses. Any unexpended balance of such sum or sums so deposited shall be returned to the utility depositing the same: Provided, That the amount expended by the Commission and the People's Counsel, combined in any valuation or rate case shall not exceed one-half of 1 per centum of the existing valuation of the company investigated, and that the amount expended in all other investigations shall not exceed one-tenth of 1 per centum of the existing valuation for any one company for any one year. (Mar. 4, 1913, 37 Stat. 984, ch. 150, § 8, par. 42; Mar. 3, 1927, 44 Stat. 1351, ch. 304; Aug. 27, 1935, 49 Stat. 884, ch. 742, § 3; Aug. 30, 1964, 78 Stat. 634, Pub. Chapter 7.—ORDERS AND COURT PROCEEDINGS

§ 43-704. Application to Court of Appeals for instructions—Application for reconsideration.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Exhaustion of administrative remedy

Request for reconsideration was jurisdictional prerequisite for filing petition of appeal from order of Public Service Commission of the District of Columbia approving rate schedules and regulations proposed by regulated utility. Watergate Improvement Association v. Public Service Commission of the District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1974, 326 A.2d 778).

Seeking reconsideration of Public Service Commission order is jurisdictional prerequisite to filing an appeal; however, one need not have been a party to the proceeding before the Public Service Commission to seek reconsideration, one need only be affected by the order in question. L. S. Goodman v. Public Service Commission of the District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1973, 309 A.2d 97).

§ 43-705. Appeal to Court of Appeals from certain orders—Precedence over other civil causes—Proceeding when additional evidence proper—Statement to accompany decision—Commission not liable for costs or damages.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Burden of proof

Onus was on association, which represented hotel, two office buildings and three cooperative apartment buildings and which sought appellate review of rate schedules and regulations governing steam and chilled water service to the complex, to make a convincing showing that the rate order was invalid because it was unjust and unreasonable in its consequences. Watergate Improvement Association v. Public Service Commission of the District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1974, 326 A. 2d 778).

S. Goodman v. Public Service Commission of the District of Columbia* (D.C. App. 1973, 309 A. 2d 97).

Person affected

One who seeks judicial review of agency action must show impact of such action on himself. Telephone Users Association v. Public Service Commission of the District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1973, 304 A. 2d 293; cert. denied 94 S. Ct. 1448, 1449, 415 U.S. 933, 934).

One who alleges that he uses and pays for telephone service is "person or corporation affected by" order increasing telephone rates. Id.

Telephone users' association which, according to Federal Communications Commission, appeared to be for all intents and purposes the alter ego of its attorney and was not, according to telephone company's records, a subscriber to telephone service was not a "person or corporation affected by" order increasing telephone rates. Id.

§ 43-706. Appeal limited to questions of law.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

In general

It is responsibility of Public Service Commission to present its decisions in manner amenable to judicial review. Telephone Users Association v. Public Service Commission of the District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1973, 304 A. 2d 293; cert. denied 94 S. Ct. 1448, 1449, 415 U.S. 933, 934).

Evidence supporting findings

Determination by Public Service Commission, which granted electric utility a rate increase, that residential class should not bear burden of significant rate increases and that rate increases of 10.4 percent for residential class, 15.1 percent for commercial and industrial class and 22.2 percent for "high tension" class and the differentials in the inherent rates of return of 5.63 percent, 7.78 percent and 8.27 percent from such classes respectively were just, reasonable and nondiscriminatory is supported by substantial evidence. Apartment House Council of Metropolitan Washington, Inc. v. Public Service Commission of the District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1975, 332 A.2d 53).

In analyzing whether new rate established by Public Service Commission for electric power was or was not arbitrary, each component of determination was to be analyzed, i.e., reviewing court was to ascertain whether each of elements of Commission's order was supported by substantial evidence in the record. L. S. Goodman v. Public Service Commission of the District of Columbia et al. (1974, 497 F. 2d 661, 162 U.S. App. D.C. 74).

In electric power rate case, evidence before Public Service Commission sustained its findings that rate of return had declined and that decline was attrition related. Id.

Conclusion of Public Service Commission, which granted power company's application for rate increase, that adjustment in test year data for revenues from the sale of power to another power company must be accompanied by a reduction in adjustment in the test year data for generator outage was supported by substantial evidence. L. S. Goodman v. Public Service Commission of the District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1973, 309 A. 2d 97).

Where attrition was claimed, attrition being condition which can only be exemplified by showing trend over series of years, Public Service Commission erred in refusing, in rate-making case, to consider telephone company's evidence for years 1966 through 1969 on ground that whatever attrition occurred during 1966-1969 period had been recognized and allowed for in decision in previous rate case. Telephone Users Association v. Public Service Commission of the District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1973, 304 A. 2d 293; cert. denied 94 S. Ct. 1448, 1449, 415 U.S. 933, 934).

In view of evidence that telephone company's forecasts in past had proved accurate, that Public Service Commission auditors were permanently assigned to telephone company's premises and continuously audited books which were maintained in accordance with Commission prescribed accounting system and that company's expert testified that 1972 forecast was developed in ordinary course of business as part of normal budgetary process, Commission erred in refusing, in rate-making proceeding, to consider company's 1972 forecast. Id.

In view of indications in record as to when information concerning telephone company's claim for certain expenses became available to Public Service Commission, Commission erred in refusing to consider company's data in support of its claim notwithstanding Commission's contention that, because company's claims were first made part of record as part of company's rebuttal case the Commission was unable either to review fully the company's forecast or present its own evidence of offsetting adjustments without unduly prolonging proceedings. Id.

Findings

Where findings of Public Service Commission with respect to rate base and net revenues of telephone company directly influenced ultimate determination of rates that company could charge, the findings, though subsidiary, were subject to judicial review. Telephone Users Association v. Public Service Commission of the District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1973, 304 A. 2d 293; cert. denied 94 S. Ct. 1448, 1449, 415 U.S. 933, 934).

Where Public Service Commission failed in rate-making case to make adequate findings based on evidence in record respecting telephone company's claim of attrition, remand for further findings was required. Id.

Rates, computation of

A utility may not charge a higher rate in the future in order to recoup past losses. Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co. v. Public Service Commission of the District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1974, 330 A. 2d 236).

Reasonableness and justness of rates fixed

Public Service Commission was not shown, in fixing electric power rates, to have recompensed power company for past losses. L. S. Goodman v. Public Service Commission of the District of Columbia et al. (1974, 497 F. 2d 661, 162 U.S. App. D.C. 74).

Public Service Commission acted properly, in making allowance for federal income taxes in electric power rate case, in applying maximum statutory tax rate. Id.

Rejection by Public Service Commission of claim of petitioner seeking reconsideration of rate increase, that since summer of test year, used in connection with application of power company for rate increase, was abnormally cool, gross test year revenues should be normalized by the addition of $18,000,000 to reflect the normal demand for energy for air conditioning was not unreasonable, arbitrary or capricious. L. S. Goodman v. Public Service Commission of the District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1973, 309 A. 2d 97).

Rejection of argument of customer, who sought reconsideration of order of Public Service Commission granting rate increase to power company, that additional operating revenues generated from anticipated additions to power plant obviated need for present rate increase was not unreasonable, arbitrary or capricious in light of lack of evidence on projected revenues or expenses for future. Id.

Public Service Commission's computation of rate base of power company seeking rate increase by including actual cost of construction work in progress rather than capitalizing the interest on funds committed to construction was not unreasonable, arbitrary, or capricious. Id.

Despite claim that overall effective income tax rate of power company seeking rate increase was considerably less than the statutory rate, calculation of additional operating revenues necessary to realize the necessary after-tax increase by using statutory federal income tax rate was reasonable and proper. Id.

As respects rate increase awarded to power company, jurisdictional cost allocation, computed in reliance upon the average and excess demand method rather than basis of rate of growth, did not unfairly and irrationally discriminate against District of Columbia customers to the benefit of customers in other jurisdictions, and Public Service Commission's acceptance of such computation was not unreasonable, arbitrary or capricious. Id.

Review

In reviewing order of Public Service Commission, it is especially important to accord great respect to Commission in complex, esoteric area such as rate-making in which Commission has been entrusted with difficult task of deciding among many competing arguments and policies. L. S. Goodman v. Public Service Commission of the District of Columbia et al. (1974, 497 F. 2d 661, 162 U.S. App. D.C. 74).

In reviewing rate order of Public Service Commission, determination of reviewing court must focus on whether result reached is arbitrary, and the appealing party bears burden of clearly demonstrating arbitrary action, which burden cannot be met by advancing alternative techniques from which Commission could have chosen. Id.

Review of actions of Public Service Commission by Court of Appeals is limited to questions of law and the commission's findings of fact are deemed conclusive unless found to be unreasonable, arbitrary or capricious. L. S. Goodman v. Public Service Commission of the District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1973, 309 A. 2d 97).

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Repair of water service pipes

Property owners who are financially able to repair broken water service pipes connecting district's main water pipe with their private plumbing systems have an adequate remedy against district in seeking money damages; hence preliminary injunction requiring the district to repair or replace the pipes was improvidently issued. *District of Columbia et al. v. The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

§ 43-1520. Water rents—Rates.

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

§ 43-1520c. Council authorized to fix water rates.

The Council of the District of Columbia is authorized from time to time to fix the rates charged by the District for water and water services furnished by the District water supply system, at such amount as the Council, on the basis of a recommendation made by the Mayor of the District of Columbia, determines is necessary to meet the expense to the District of furnishing such water and water services. In computing the charge for the consumption of water, if such charge is for a period beginning prior to a change in water rates and ending thereafter, such charge shall be prorated in such a manner as to charge for water consumed prior to the effective date of such new water rates at the rate which is in effect during that period of consumption, and to charge for water consumed after the effective date at the new rates. Nothing in this title shall be construed to modify the provisions of section 43-1530 relating to the delivery of water from the District water supply system to the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission. (May 18, 1954, 68 Stat. 101, ch. 218, title I, § 101; Mar. 2, 1962, 76 Stat. 17, Pub. L. 87-408, § 501; Jan. 5, 1971, Pub. L. 91-650, title I, § 105(a), 84 Stat 1931; Oct. 21, 1975, D.C. SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

REFERENCE IN TEXT

This title, referred to in the last sentence, is title I of Act May 18, 1954, ch. 218, which enacted §§ 43-1520c, 43-1521a to 43-1521d, and 43-1541, and amended §§ 43-1504 and 43-1540.

AMENDMENT

1975—Act Oct. 21, 1975, D.C. Law 1-23, amended the second sentence generally.

EFFECTIVE DATE OF 1975 AMENDMENT

See sec. 801(e) of act Oct. 21, 1975, D.C. Law 1-23, set out as a note under § 43-1504a.

§ 43-1520d. Water and water service rates and charges.

Notwithstanding any other provision of law or regulation, the following rates and charges shall be applicable for water and water services provided on or after July 1, 1975:

(1) ¹ Rates and Charges for Metered Services.

The minimum rate for water furnished any premises through a metered service shall be $8.75 semi-annually for the use of up to 3,600 cubic feet of water, payable in advance and for water furnished during such period in excess of that quantity the rate shall be thirty cents per one hundred cubic feet of water.

(Oct. 21, 1975, D.C. Law 1-23, title VII, § 701(a), 22 DCR 2114.)

EFFECTIVE DATE

See sec. 801(e) of act Oct. 21, 1975, D.C. Law 1-23, set out as a note under § 43-1504a.

PENALTIES

Section 702 of act Oct. 21, 1975, D.C. Law 1-23, title VII, provided: "The penalties to be imposed for failure to pay bills for water and sewer service after the expiration of thirty days from the date of rendition thereof, and the payment of any costs incurred by the District of Columbia in connection with discontinuing and restoring the water supply to any premises, shall be as provided by sections 102 and 210 of the District of Columbia Public Works Act of 1954 (D.C. Code, secs. 43-1521a, 43-1609)."

WATER RATE STRUCTURE REPORT

Section 704 of act Oct. 21, 1975, D.C. Law 1-23, title VII, provided:

"By November 15, 1975, the Mayor of the District of Columbia shall submit to the Council of the District of Columbia a water rate structure which shall—

"(a) continue the increasing price rate structure contained in this title [VII] whereby per unit water rates increase with increased consumption;

"(b) a plan to provide for a minimum bill for water usage not to exceed $2.89 for the first 1,200 cubic feet of water used during each six month period;

"(c) provide a scheme whereby residents of multi-family units will benefit on an equal basis with residents of single-family units in the low-minimum water usage rates; and

"(d) provide detailed substantiation for the rate structure. The structure, plan and scheme submitted by the Mayor under this section shall be designed to make no change in the amount of revenue derived from the water rates and sewer service charges, and shall not take effect unless implemented by further action of the Council."

DURATION OF WATER RATES AND SEWER CHARGES

Section 705 of act Oct. 21, 1975, D.C. Law 1-23, title VII, provided:

"The water rates and sewer service charge contained in this title [VII], to be effective July 1, 1975, shall terminate on January 1, 1976, unless—

"(1) the Mayor of the District of Columbia submits to the Council of the District of Columbia, by November 15, 1975, a complete report substantiating the increased water rates and sewer service charges as necessitated by increased government cost; and

"(2) the Council adopts a resolution (before January 1, 1976) stating that the Council concurs in the Mayor's report. In the event such report is not submitted to the Council by November 15, 1975, or the Council does not adopt such resolution by January 1, 1976, then the water rates and sewer service charges in effect on June 30, 1975 shall again be effective beginning January 1, 1976."

§ 43-1521. Commissioner to have authority to collect water rates in advance.

§ 43-1618. Council's authority to make regulations.

The Council of the District of Columbia is authorized to make rules and regulations to carry out the provisions of this subchapter. (May 18, 1954, 68 Stat. 120, ch. 218, title XVII, § 1701.)

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

CODIFICATION

The section is set out in this supplement to reflect the redesignation of sections 43-1601 to 43-1618 as subchapter I of this chapter.

In addition to the sections contained in this subchapter the authority of the Council under section 402 (329) of Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967 to make regulations extends to all of the act of May 18, 1954, known as the District of Columbia Public Works Act of 1954, which has been classified to the following sections of the District of Columbia Code: §§ 7-132, 7-133, 7-901, 25-124, 25-138, 40-102, 40-103, 43-1504, 43-1511, 43-1520c, 43-1521a to 43-1521d, 43-1540, 43-1541, 43-1601 to 43-1618, 47-312, 47-313, 47-501a, 47-1203, 47-1206, 47-1208 to 47-1211, 47-1567b, 47-1701, 47-1901, 47-1912, 47-2331, 47-2501a, 47-2501b, 47-2601, 47-2602, 47-2604, 47-2605, 47-2701, 47-2702, 47-2705, 47-2802.

§ 43-1619. Agreements with Maryland and Virginia.

(a) The Mayor shall annually estimate the amount of the District's principal and interest expense which is required to service District obligations attributable to the Maryland and Virginia pro rata share of District sanitary sewage water works and other water pollution projects which provide service to the local jurisdictions in those States. Such amounts as determined by the Mayor pursuant to the agreements described in subsection (b) shall be used to exclude the Maryland and Virginia share of pollution projects cost from the limitation on the District's capital project obligations as provided in section 47-228(b).

(b) The Mayor shall enter into agreements with the States and local jurisdictions concerned for annual payments to the District of rates and charges for waste treatment services in accordance with the use and benefits made and derived from the operation of the said waste treatment facilities. Each such agreement shall require that the estimated amount of such rates and charges will be paid in advance, subject to adjustment after each year. Such rates and charges shall be sufficient to cover the cost of construction, interest on capital, operation and maintenance, and the necessary replacement of equipment during the useful life of the facility. (Dec. 24, 1973, Pub. L. 93-198, title IV, § 487, 87 Stat. 808.)

CODIFICATION

Section was enacted as a part of the District of Columbia Self-Government and Governmental Reorganization Act, and not as part of title II of Act May 18, 1954, which comprises this subchapter.

DEFINITIONS

The definitions in § 1-122 apply to terms appearing in this section.

EFFECTIVE DATE

Section 771 of Act Dec. 24, 1973, Pub. L. 93-198, as amended, set out as a note under § 1-121, provided in part that this section is effective on Jan. 2, 1975, if a majority of the registered qualified electors in the District of Columbia voting on the charter issue in the charter referendum accepted the charter set out in title IV of such Act. The charter was approved by the voters on May 7, 1974.

§ 44-214a. Fares for schoolchildren not over 18 years of age—Formula for adjusting and payment of fare subsidy.

* * * * *

In the case of any common carrier required to furnish transportation to schoolchildren at a reduced fare under this section, the Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Commission shall certify to the Mayor of the District of Columbia, with respect to each calendar month commencing with September 1968, and ending August 1977, all inclusive, an amount which is the difference between the total of all reduced fares paid during such calendar month to such carrier by schoolchildren in accordance with this section and the amount which would have been paid during that month to such carrier if such fares had been paid at the lowest adult fare established by the Commission for regular route transportation in that month. The certification required by this section shall be made for each such month as soon as practicable following the end thereof. The Mayor of the District of Columbia, upon receiving any such certification, shall pay the carrier with respect to which that certification was filed an amount equal to the amount contained therein. (As amended Aug. 14, 1974, Pub. L. 93-375, § 1, 88 Stat. 446.)

AMENDMENT

1974—Act Aug. 14, 1974, Pub. L. 93-375, amended second par. of section by striking out "1974" and substituting "1977".

CONSTRUCTION OF 1974 AMENDMENT

Section 2 of Act Aug. 14, 1974, Pub. L. 93-375, provided: "Notwithstanding any other provision of law, or any rule of law, nothing in this Act (including the amendment made by this Act) shall be construed as limiting the authority of the Council of the District of Columbia to enact any act or resolution, after January 2, 1975, pursuant to the District of Columbia Self-Government and Governmental Reorganization Act with respect to any matter covered by this Act."

§ 44-216. Unlawful conduct on public passenger vehicles.

It shall be unlawful for passengers or occupants while aboard a public passenger vehicle with a capacity for seating twelve or more passengers, including vehicles owned and/or operated by the Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority while said vehicle is transporting passengers in regular route service within the corporate limits of the District of Columbia to:

(a) Smoke or carry a lighted or smoldering pipe, cigar or cigarette in or upon any bus or rail transit car;

(b) Consume food or drink in or upon any bus or rail transit car;

(c) Spit in or upon any bus or rail car;

(d) Discard litter in or upon any bus or rail transit car;

(e) Play any radio, cassette, recorder or other such instrument, except where same is connected to an earphone that limits the sound to the individual user;

(f) Carry any flammable or combustible liquids, live animals, birds, reptiles, explosives, acids, or any item inherently dangerous or offensive to others upon any bus or rail transit car, except for seeing eye dogs properly harnessed and accompanied by blind passengers, and small animals properly packaged;

(g) Stand in front of the white line marked on the forward end of the floor of any bus, or otherwise conduct himself in such manner as to obstruct the vision of the operator;

(h) Board any bus through the rear exit door, unless so directed by an employee or agent of the carrier. (Sept. 23, 1975, D.C. Law 1-18, § 2, 22 DCR 1994.)

EFFECTIVE DATE

TITLE 45.—REAL PROPERTY

Chapter 1.—CONVEYABLE ESTATES AND METHODS OF CONVEYANCE

§ 45-102. Perpetuities—Excepting charitable uses.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Power to alienate suspended

For purposes of the rule against perpetuities, there must be certainty of vesting and power to alienate within the allowable period. A. B. Cennamo v. American Security & Trust Company et al. (1973, 360 F. Supp. 1354).

Where testamentary trust violated common-law rule against perpetuities and statute limiting suspension of power of alienation when read in isolation from rest of the will, but where such trust would not violate such rule or statute if offending lines were struck, where will contained savings clause directing trustee to terminate any trust in violation of any applicable rule against perpetuities on date limited by such rule, and elimination of such lines harmonized with testatrix' intent, such savings clause prevailed so as to result in elimination of the lines, and will as thus construed was not in violation of the rule or statute. Id.

Savings clause

Will, which provided that after death of life beneficiary, property would be held in trust for remaindermen until they reached age of 30, which provided for further trusts should remaindermen die before reaching age of 30, and which provided that all trusts created by will were to terminate on date limited by applicable rule against perpetuities or any similar rule of law, would be construed to provide that trusts for remaindermen would terminate when beneficiary reached the age specified in the will or 21 years from date of death of life beneficiary, whichever occurred earlier, so as not to violate 21-year rule of this section against perpetuities. In re Estate of D. H. Burrough (1975, 521 F. 2d 277, 172 U.S. App. D.C. 177).

Chapter 3.—FORMS—COVENANTS AND WARRANTIES

§ 45-301. Forms of instruments.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Constitutionality

District of Columbia statutes governing extrajudicial mortgage foreclosure procedures do not on their face violate due process clause of Fifth Amendment because they recognize right of private individuals contractually to create power of sale clauses which operate as a waiver of certain potential preforeclosure rights. J. A. Bryant et al. v. Jefferson Federal Savings and Loan Association et al. (1974, 509 F.2d 511, 166 U.S. App. D.C. 178).

Chapter 4.—ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

§ 45-401. Acknowledgment by attorney.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Construction

Prohibition of this section of execution or acknowledgment by attorney of any deed of conveyance of either real or personal estate applies only to deeds of conveyance and not to contracts to convey which are subject to the statute of frauds which limits enforceability of certain agreements to those signed by party to be charged or by a person authorized by party to be charged. M. A. Gustin v. R. D. Stegall et ano., Administrator, etc. (D.C. App. 1975, 347 A.2d 917; cert. denied 96 S. Ct. 2174, — U.S. —).

Chapter 5.—EFFECTIVE DATE AND RECORDING OF DEEDS

§ 45-501. When deeds take effect.

CROSS REFERENCE

Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act of 1974, see 12 U.S.C. 2601 et seq.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Deed withheld from record

Under evidence that grantee had furnished down payment with which grantor had purchased property and had made contributions toward mortgage payments for number of years thereafter, that deed in favor of grantee was executed at time of conveyance to grantor and that grantee did not record deed at that time because she did not want her husband to know of the transaction, grantee did not lose title to the property and was not limited to claiming only as a secured creditor for her advances on the purchase price even though grantee did not record deed until after death of grantor some 15 years after death of grantee's husband. M. E. Smart v. E. W. Nevins (D.C. App. 1972, 298 A. 2d 217).

Purpose of recording

Purpose of recordation of deeds is to protect rights of bona fide purchasers, creditors, assignees and others relying upon indicia of record ownership and as between grantor and grantee, failure of latter to record cannot be viewed as waiver of rights to the property. M. E. Smart v. E. W. Nevins (D.C. App. 1972, 298 A. 2d 217).

§ 45-506. Maps and plats not to be recorded.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Servitudes

Although subdivision plats must be duly recorded in office of surveyor, once that requirement has been met, District of Columbia statutes do not prohibit an owner from incorporating a revised copy of the same plat in another recordable instrument in order to impress, through a suitable endorsement on the plat, a servitude upon a single lot in the original subdivision and, in such circumstances, the revised plat is being used only as method of imposing a servitude, and not to establish the areas and boundaries of lots in the subdivision. H. Case v. A. E. Morrisette (1973, 475 F. 2d 1300, 155 U.S. App. D.C. 31).

Equitable servitudes can be created by inscriptions on subdivision plats filed with surveyor, but they also may be created by deeds, with or without plats attached. Id.

Where deed described parcel as lot on subdivision plat recorded in office of surveyor and referred to it as area for parking as shown on revised plat recorded with declaration of covenants, purchaser was placed on notice of inscription affecting lot and either such constructive notice or purchaser's actual knowledge was sufficient to require enforcement of equitable servitude against purchaser and it was immaterial that copy of revised plat bearing inscription was recorded in office of recorder of deeds rather than with surveyor. Id.

§ 45-601. Mortgages and deeds of trust executed, acknowledged, and recorded same as deeds.

CROSS REFERENCE

Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act of 1974, see 12 U.S.C. 2601 et seq.

§ 45-603. Estate of mortgagee or trustee conveyed.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Constitutionality

District of Columbia statutes governing extrajudicial mortgage foreclosure procedures do not on their face violate due process clause of Fifth Amendment because they recognize right of private individuals contractually to create power of sale clauses which operate as a waiver of certain potential preforeclosure rights. J. A. Bryant et al. v. Jefferson Federal Savings and Loan Association et al. (1974, 509 F.2d 511, 166 U.S. App. D.C. 178).

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

CROSS REFERENCE

Service by publication on nonresidents, absent defendants, and unknown heirs or devisees, see § 13-336.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Constitutionality

District of Columbia statutes governing extrajudicial mortgage foreclosure procedures do not on their face violate due process clause of Fifth Amendment because they recognize right of private individuals contractually to create power of sale clauses which operate as a waiver of certain potential preforeclosure rights. J. A. Bryant et al. v. Jefferson Federal Savings and Loan Association et al. (1974, 509 F.2d 511, 166 U.S. App. D.C. 178).

Last known address

Where owner of property never notified noteholder or trustee under deed of trust of owner's change of address, where owner, which was in the real estate business and knew the effect of default, was in serious default in its payments, and where owner was on notice that statutes required lender to send notice of foreclosure to owner at last known address, failure of owner to receive notice, which was mailed in time to reach owner at its old address but which did not reach that address until owner had moved, did not indicate deficiency on the part of the trustees or the noteholder in giving personal notice to property. S & G Investment Inc. et al. v. Home Federal Savings and Loan Association et al. (1974, 505 F. 2d 370, 164 U.S. App. D.C. 263).

Notice

Trustees under deed of trust are entitled to rely upon secured parties' notice of foreclosure to the owner of the property. S & G Investment Inc. et al. v. Home Federal Savings and Loan Association et al. (1974, 505 F. 2d 370, 164 U.S. App. D.C. 263).

Trustees under first deed of trust were not required, in addition to publishing notice of foreclosure in newspaper, to give personal notice of the foreclosure sale to the holder of the second lien, especially where second lienor had not given trustees notice that it wished to receive notice of any foreclosure sale. Id.

Publication of newspaper advertisement of foreclosure sale satisfied statutory requirement that terms of sale and notice be given and satisfied terms of deed of trust which provided that trustees had the power, upon the request of the noteholder, to sell the realty after such previous advertisement as the trustees might deem best for the interests of all concerned. Id.

Statutory requirement that notice of foreclosure sale under deed of trust be given to owner did not require that both the noteholder and the trustees give notice to the owner. Id.

Neither noteholder nor trustees under deed of trust were required to give notice of foreclosure sale to owner by telephone. Id.

§ 45-616. Sale of property and deficiency decree in personam—Same relief in re vendor's lien.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Proceeds of sale

Where deed of trust authorized trustees to use the proceeds of foreclosure sale to pay the remaining unpaid balance of the principal of note given for purchase of the property whether or not the entire balance was due and where notice of foreclosure sale sent to owner indicated that property would be sold to satisfy the debt secured by the deed of trust and also informed owner as to what the balance due was, proceeds of sale were properly applied to pay the entire amount of the note, even though payments on the note were only three months delinquent. S & G Investment Inc. et al. v. Home Federal Savings and Loan Association et al. (1974, 505 F. 2d 370, 164 U.S. App. D.C. 263).

SUBCHAPTER I.—APPOINTMENT AND FUNCTIONS OF RECORDER

§ 45-701. Appointment and duties.

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

TRANSFER OF FUNCTIONS

Section 712 of Act Dec. 24, 1973, Pub. L. 93-198 [set out as § 1-132], provided in part that "[no] function now vested pursuant to section 501 of Reorganization Plan Numbered 3 of 1967 in the . . . Office of the Recorder of Deeds, or in any officer, employee, or body of or under such agency, shall be considered as a function transferred to the Council pursuant to section 404(a) of this Act [§ 1-144(a)]. Each such function is hereby transferred to the officer, employee, or agency (including any body of or under such agency), to whom or to which it was delegated, or in whom or in which it has remained vested, until the Mayor or Council established under this Act, or both, pursuant to the powers herein granted, shall revoke, modify, or transfer such delegation or vesting."

Chapter 8.—ESTATES IN LAND

§ 45-816. Tenancies in common, tenancies by the entirety, and joint tenancies.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Estates by entireties

Where, when deed was executed in names of "John F. Douglass and Elizabeth Douglass, his wife, as tenants by the entirety," deceased was married to woman named Elizabeth but had been living for 15 years with another woman known by same name, court erred, in action wherein both women asserted right to property, in holding that property passed to wife by intestate succession on ground that deed was voided by action of second woman in having sister sign her name to deed of trust, rather than determining as matter of fact which of two women was intended to be referred to in deed by grantor thereof. E. Snipes v. E. Douglass (D.C. App. 1974, 319 A.2d 326).

Under deed of house "to Herbert L. Wright and Mattie G. Wright, his wife, and Pauline E. Liner . . . as joint tenants," the husband and wife acquired a one-half interest as tenants by the entirety and the other party acquired a one-half interest jointly with the entirety, particularly where a consideration of the transactions with respect to the property indicated that such result was the most likely intent of the parties. E. M. Daniel v. H. L. Wright et al. (1972, 352 F. Supp. 1).

§ 45-820. Estates by sufferance.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Statutory tenancy at sufferance

A "tenancy at sufferance" requires payment of rent or "hirings" or a "rate per month" to accompany the estate. M. A. Smith v. Town Center Management Corporation (D.C. App. 1974, 329 A.2d 779).

§ 45-822. Estates at will—When terminated.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Tenancy at will

A "tenancy at will" is an estate held by the joint will of lessor and lessee and such estate cannot exist or be created except by express contract. M. A. Smith v. Town Center Management Corporation (D.C. App. 1974, 329 A.2d 779).

§ 45-902. Notices to quit—Month to month.

CROSS REFERENCES

Eviction, see § 45-1653.

Retaliatory action by landlord in rent control cases prohibited, see § 45-1654.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Receipt of rent after notice

Finding, in action for possession by landlord, which charged rent on basis of the tenant's ability to pay, that fact that institution, which collected rent for landlord, accepted and deposited rent payment, which was made by tenant for new period after expiration of 30-day notice to quit, did not indicate an intention by landlord to waive such notice was not clearly erroneous. J. D. Rhodes v. United States (D.C. App. 1973, 310 A.2d 250).

Waiver

Landlord who, in early or mid-August, informed month-to-month tenant that she would have to vacate by September 1 or agree to rent increase, waived requirement of 30 days' written notice and is estopped to rely on this section relating to termination of tenancy and is not entitled to rent for September although tenant only gave oral notice on August 22 and did not comply with requirements of this section. O. Sklar et ux. v. J. Hightower (D.C. App. 1975, 342 A.2d 57).

§ 45-903. Tenancy at will—Notice for termination.

CROSS REFERENCES

Eviction, see § 45-1653.

Retaliatory action by landlord in rent control cases prohibited, see § 45-1654.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Mootness

Where occupant, who vacated apartment under threat of eviction, had occupied apartment as a permissive user or licensee, occupant left as trespasser and took with her no right of reentry; thus, occupant's appeal from refusal to vacate default judgment for owner for possession of apartment had been rendered moot. M. A. Smith v. Town Center Management Corporation (D.C. App. 1974, 329 A.2d 779).

§ 45-906. Service of notice.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Generally

Although service of notice to quit is not jurisdictional and can be waived, it is a condition precedent to the landlord's suit for possession. H. A. Moody et ano. v. Winchester Management Corp. (D.C. App. 1974, 321 A.2d 562).

Posting on premises

Service of notice to quit by resident manager who knocked on tenants' door but received no response and who slipped notice, enclosed in an envelope, under the door, did not constitute "posting in a conspicuous place" as required by this section and service of notice was defective. H. A. Moody et ano. v. Winchester Management Corp. (D.C. App. 1974, 321 A.2d 562).

Substituted service of notice to quit is less favored than delivery of the document to the tenant in person, and posting should be employed as a last resort. Id.

§ 45-908. Agreement as to notice.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Waiver of notice

Landlord who, in early or mid-August, informed month-to-month tenant that she would have to vacate by September 1 or agree to rent increase, waived requirement of 30 days' written notice and is estopped to rely on section 45-902 relating to termination of tenancy and is not entitled to rent for September although tenant only gave oral notice on August 22 and did not comply with requirements of section 45-902. O. Sklar et ux. v. J. Hightower (D.C. App. 1975, 342 A.2d 57).

§ 45-910. Ejectment or summary proceedings.

CROSS REFERENCES

Eviction, see § 45-1653.

Retaliatory action by landlord in rent control cases prohibited, see § 45-1654.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Abatement

Denial of landlord's request for summary possession against tenants, who placed words "Paid under protest" on their rent payment checks for purpose of avoiding waiver of right to challenge rent increases, on ground that granting of request would unduly impinge on class action challenging lawfulness of such increases was proper, notwithstanding contention that landlord's right to do with its property as it pleased would be impaired and contention that tenants in summary possession suit did not put into issue the lawfulness of the rent increases and thus such issue should not have been considered. F. W. Berens Sales Co., Inc. v. G. McKinney et al. (D.C. App. 1973, 310 A.2d 601).

Construction

In view of express terms of 1970 Court Reform Act, District of Columbia ejectment statute (this section) as amended by 1970 Court Reform Act was not "Act of Congress" within statute (28 U.S.C. 1345, 1363) giving original jurisdiction in district court of suits brought by the United States except as otherwise provided by Act of Congress. H. and J. Herian et al. v. United States (1973, 363 F. Supp. 287).

Counsel fees

Though landlord's summary possession suit against tenants, who placed words "Paid under protest" on their rent payment checks for purpose of avoiding waiver of right to challenge rent increases, may have been brought to achieve tactical advantage in class action challenging lawfulness of such increases, suit was not so clearly unwarranted or so vexatious, wanton or oppressive as to justify award of counsel fees to tenants on dismissal of suit. F. W. Berens Sales Co., Inc. v. G. McKinney et al. (D.C. App. 1973, 310 A.2d 601).

Defenses

Any claims which defendants sought to make concerning federal housing policy could be raised in District of Columbia Superior Court as defenses to ejectment proceedings brought by United States. H. and J. Herian et al. v. United States (1973, 363 F. Supp. 287).

Deposits in court

Trial court properly ordered tenant who had asserted defenses to landlord's possessory action and demanded jury trial to make monthly payments equal to accruing rental into registry of court pending resolution of case, where parties were present in court, relevant facts were not in dispute, and court heard argument from counsel for each party before granting landlord's motion. D. McNeal v. N. Habib (D.C. App. 1975, 346 A.2d 508).

If tenant in possessory action demands trial, future payments for use of premises become involved, and at hearing on landlord's motion for protective order, allegations of housing code violations are relevant to trial court's determination of amount which should be paid monthly into registry of court pursuant to protective order, notwithstanding fact that defense of housing code violations is normally irrelevant to possessory action based upon valid 30-day notice to quit. Id.

Court may enter order disbursing funds paid into registry of court pursuant to protective order in contested possessory action only after holding hearing at which tenant has opportunity to present evidence as to, inter alia, extent to which rental contract figure should be abated, if at all, due to violations of housing regulations which might have existed during tenant's occupancy of premises while protective order was in effect. Id.

Jurisdiction

Under District of Columbia ejectment statute (this section) as amended by 1970 Court Reform Act, District Court does not have original jurisdiction over ejectment proceedings brought by the United States; intent of Court Reform Act was to vest exclusive jurisdiction of all ejectment proceedings in Superior Court, even those brought by the United States. H. and J. Herian et al. v. United States (1973, 363 F. Supp. 287).

Mootness

Inasmuch as landlord sold apartment building during pendency of tenant's appeal from eviction order, and landlord could no longer put tenant back into possession, case is moot. S. J. Spingarn v. Lindow & Co. (D.C. App. 1975, 342 A.2d 41).

Where occupant, who vacated apartment under threat of eviction, had occupied apartment as a permissive user or licensee, occupant left as trespasser and took with her no right of reentry; thus, occupant's appeal from refusal to vacate default judgment for owner for possession of apartment had been rendered moot. M. A. Smith v. Town Center Management Corporation (D.C. App. 1974, 329 A.2d 779).

Pleading

Landlord who chose to rely upon expiration of 30-day notice to quit, rather than upon apparently unpaid past rent, waived right to claim rental arrearages in proceeding for possession of premises, and could not have amended complaint to assert claim for rent due, though he is free to seek recovery of back rent in separate action. D. McNeal v. N. Habib (D.C. App. 1975, 346 A.2d 508).

Protective orders

Superior Court Landlord and Tenant Rule which provides, inter alia, that any motion which is dependent upon facts not apparent upon record shall be in writing and accompanied by sworn testimony setting out fully facts upon which motion is based, and that such motions shall be heard not earlier than fifth day after service, is inapplicable to landlord's motion for protective order requiring tenant to make payments equal to accruing rent into court registry made orally on return date in possessory action. D. McNeal v. N. Habib (D.C. App. 1975, 346 A.2d 508).

Chapter 10.—POWERS

§ 45-1002. General power.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Conditions on exercise of power

For purposes of qualifying life interest left to wife under testamentary trust for marital deduction, power of appointment to wife was general and thus authorized an appointment of trust property to her estate, even though power was subject to condition that it be exercised by will. Estate of J. Mittleman v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue (1975, 522 F.2d 132, 173 U.S. App. D.C. 26).

Chapter 14.—REAL ESTATE AND BUSINESS BROKERS' LICENSES

§ 45-1401. Acting as broker or salesman without license unlawful.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Conflict of laws

In suit by Washington, D.C. lawyers to recover compensation for services rendered in connection with the financing and sale of Maryland realty, the governing real estate broker licensing law is that of the District of Columbia in view of evidence that all conferences among the parties relative to the financing and sale of the realty were held in the District of Columbia. G. S. Leonard et al. v. BHJK Corporation (1972, 469 F. 2d 108, 152 U.S. App. D.C. 97).

§ 45-1404. Qualifications for license.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Findings

Findings of the Real Estate Commission, in denying license as a business-chance broker were supported by substantial evidence in light of license revocation some 20 years previously for failure to refund deposits, conviction many years previously resulting in prison sentence for filing fraudulent vouchers, and filing of petition in bankruptcy listing among unpaid debts unsatisfied obligation on real estate bond. L. M. Bryant v. Real Estate Commission of the District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1973, 302 A. 2d 721).

Prior convictions

In denying application for license as a business-chance broker, it was not error for the Real Estate Commission to rely in part on a conviction for fraudulent conduct occurring prior to the ten-year period specified by § 14-305 as limitation on the use of prior convictions of witnesses for impeachment purposes in court trials. L. M. Bryant v. Real Estate Commission of the District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1973, 302 A. 2d 721).

Trustworthiness and competency

A person may demonstrate competency and even good character and yet be so lacking in fiscal responsibility as to negate any assumption of trustworthiness in conducting a brokerage business in a manner calculated to safeguard the interests of the public. L. M. Bryant v. Real Estate Commission of the District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1973, 302 A. 2d 721).

§ 45-1409. Hearing before suspension—Court review—Appeal.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Due process

Combination of prosecutorial and adjudicative functions in the same agency does not violate constitutional guarantee of due process. L. M. Bryant v. Real Estate Commission of the District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1973, 302 A. 2d 721).

Fact that the Real Estate Commission itself presented and tried charges which it eventually adjudicated in denying application for broker's license did not deny applicant due process. Id.

Findings

Findings of the Real Estate Commission, in denying license as a business-chance broker were supported by substantial evidence in light of license revocation some 20 years previously for failure to refund deposits, conviction many years previously resulting in prison sentence for filing fraudulent vouchers, and filing of petition in bankruptcy listing among unpaid debts unsatisfied obligation on real estate bond. *L. SUBCHAPTER III.—RENTAL ACCOMMODATIONS ACT OF 1975

TITLE I.—RENTAL ACCOMMODATIONS COMMISSION

§ 45-1631. Establishment of Commission.

(a) There is established for the District of Columbia a Rental Accommodations Commission (hereinafter in this subchapter referred to as the "Commission") which shall consist of nine members to be appointed by the Mayor of the District of Columbia by and with the advice and consent of the Council of the District of Columbia. The Mayor shall make his initial appointments within 30 days after the effective date of this subchapter. Three of the members of the Commission shall represent the interests of landlords, and each of the three shall be a landlord of at least one housing accommodation located in the District of Columbia. Three of the members shall be tenants who shall represent the interests of tenants. The rest of the members of the Commission shall be neither landlords nor tenants. All members of the Commission shall be residents of the District of Columbia.

(b) Members of the Commission shall be appointed to serve for a two year term beginning on the effective date of this subchapter. In the case of a vacancy in the membership of the Commission, a new member shall be appointed to serve out the term of the member whose vacancy gave rise to the appointment. The Mayor shall have the authority to remove from the Commission any member who fails to meet the qualifications of a member or who fails to attend 70 percent of the regularly scheduled meetings held within any six month period.

(c) Members of the Commission shall be entitled to receive compensation of $50.00 per day for each day spent in performing the duties of the Commission, except no member shall receive more than $5,200 under this subsection in any one calendar year. No compensation shall be paid to a member of the Commission who is also an officer or employee of the United States or the District of Columbia government.

(d) Five members of the Commission shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business so long as one of the five members is a landlord, one is a tenant, and two are neither landlords nor tenants.

(e) The chairperson and vice-chairperson of the Commission shall be selected by the members of the Commission from among their number and shall be neither landlords nor tenants. (Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-33, title I, § 101, 22 DCR 2490.)

EFFECTIVE DATE

Section 404 of act Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-33, provided that "This act [enacting this subchapter] shall take effect at the end of the 30 day period (excluding Saturdays, Sundays, holidays, and days on which either House of Congress is not in session) provided for Congressional review of acts of the Council under subsection (c) of section 602 of the District of Columbia Self-Government and Governmental Reorganization Act [§ 1-147(c)], and shall terminate at the end of the second year occurring immediately after such effective date. At the end of the first year following such effective date, the Council shall review the rent stabilization program established in this act [subchapter] through review of the reports required in Section 102(b) [§ 45-1632(b)] and through any other investigations or hearings it may conduct or require."

SHORT TITLE

The first section of act Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-33, provided "That this act [enacting this subchapter] may be cited as the 'District of Columbia Rental Accommodations Act of 1975'."

§ 45-1632. Duties.

(a) The Commission shall—

(1) promulgate, amend, and rescind rules and procedures for the administration of this subchapter; and

(2) hear and decide appeals brought to it under sections 45-1644 and 45-1652 with respect to adjustments in the maximum rent allowable for a rental unit.

(b) In addition the Commission shall, twice each year, submit to the Council of the District of Columbia a report on the trends, during the immediate preceding six months, of tax, operating, and maintenance costs (as they relate to housing accommodations in the District of Columbia) and a recommendation as to whether any adjustment should be made, as a result of such trends, in the formula contained in section 45-1644 for computing the rent ceiling.

(c) (1) The Commission shall have the power to hold such hearings, sit and act at such times and places within the District of Columbia, administer such oaths, and require by subpoena or otherwise the attendance and testimony of such witnesses and the production of such books, records, correspondence, memoranda, papers, and documents as the Commission may deem advisable in carrying out its functions under this subchapter.

(2) In the case of contumacy or refusal to obey a subpoena issued under this subsection by any person who resides, is found, or transacts business within the District of Columbia, the Superior Court of the District of Columbia, at the request of the Commission, shall have jurisdiction to issue to such person an order requiring such person to appear before the Commission, there to produce evidence if so ordered, or there to give testimony touching upon the matter under inquiry. Any failure of such person to obey any such order of the Superior Court may be punished by the Superior Court as contempt thereof.

(d) Upon the request of the chairperson, each department or entity of the District of Columbia government is authorized to furnish directly to the Commission assistance or information as may be necessary for the Commission to effectively carry out this subchapter. (Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-33, title I, § 102, 22 DCR 2492.)

§ 45-1633. Rental Accommodations Office.

(a) There is established as an agency of the District of Columbia government, within the executive office of the Mayor, a Rental Accommodations Office (hereinafter in this subchapter referred to as the "Office") which shall have as its head a Rent Administrator to be appointed by the Mayor.

(b) The Rent Administrator shall be a resident of the District of Columbia and shall be entitled to receive annual compensation (payable in regular installments) at a rate as may be established but no less than class GS-15 on the General Schedule under section 5332 of Title 5 of the United States Code. (Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-33, title III, § 103, 22 DCR 2493.)

§ 45-1634. Duties of Rent Administrator.

(a) The Rent Administrator shall carry out, according to the rules and procedures established by the Commission, the rent stabilization program established under title II of this subchapter.

(b) The Rent Administrator may employ, within such funds as may be available to him, such personnel and consultants, including legal counsel, as are necessary to carry out provisions of this subchapter. Such personnel and consultants shall be appointed subject to the provisions of title 5, United States Code, governing appointments in the competitive service, and shall be paid in accordance with the provisions of chapter 51 and subchapter III of chapter 53 of such title, relating to classification and General Schedule pay rates. (Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-33, title I, § 104, 22 DCR 2494.)

TITLE II.—RENT STABILIZATION

TITLE REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This title II is referred to in section 45-1634.

§ 45-1641. Definitions.

For the purposes of this subchapter—

(a) The term "Council" means the Council of the District of Columbia established under section 1-141.

(b) The term "Mayor" means the Mayor of the District of Columbia established under section 1-161.

(c) Except as provided in section 45-1644(d), the term "base rent" means the rent charged (on a monthly basis) for a rental unit on February 1, 1973; or, in the case of a rental unit not rented on February 1, 1973, the rent last charged (on a monthly basis) for that rental unit between January 1, 1972, and February 1, 1973; or, in the case of a rental unit which was not rented during the period beginning January 1, 1972, and ending on February 1, 1973 or, if the landlord can show to the satisfaction of the Rent Administrator that the rent charged during that period cannot be determined, an appropriate rent as determined by the Rent Administrator.

(d) The term "capital improvement" means a permanent improvement or renovation other than ordinary repair, replacement, or maintenance, the use of which will continue beyond the twelve month period beginning on the date of completion of such capital improvement.

(e) The term "housing accommodation" means any structure or building in the District of Columbia containing one or more rental units, and the land appurtenant thereto. Such term shall not include any hotel, motel, or other structure, including any room therein, used primarily for transient occupancy and in which at least 60 percent of the rooms devoted to living quarters for tenants or guests are used for transient occupancy.

(f) The term "housing regulations" means the Housing Regulations of the District of Columbia as established by the Commissioners' Order dated August 11, 1955, as amended.

(g) The term "initial leasing period" means that period during which the first tenant of a new rental unit or a rental unit covered by item (6) of subsection (a) of section 45-1642 rents such rental unit.

(h) The term "landlord" means an owner, lessor, sublessor, assignee, or agent of any thereof or other person receiving or entitled to receive rents or benefits for the use or occupancy of any rental unit, including any person who has an option to buy or who has entered into a contract to buy any housing accommodation or rental unit with the intent to offer such housing accommodation or rental unit for rent.

(i) The term "person" means an individual, corporation, partnership, association, joint venture, business entity, or an organized group of individuals, and their successors and assignees.

(j) The term "related facility" means any facility, furnishing, or equipment made available to a tenant by a landlord, the use of which is authorized by the payment of the rent charged for a rental unit, including the use of any kitchen, bath, laundry facility, parking, and the use of common room, yard and other common area.

(k) The term "related services" means services provided by a landlord, or required by law or by the terms of a rental agreement to be provided by a landlord, to a tenant in connection with the use and occupancy of a rental unit, including repairs, decorating and maintenance, the provision of light, heat, hot and cold water, telephone answering and elevator services, janitor services, and the removal of trash and refuse.

(l) The term "rent" means the entire amount of money, money's worth, benefit, bonus, or gratuity demanded, received, or charged by a landlord as a condition of occupancy or use of a rental unit, its related services, and its related facilities.

(m) The term "rental unit" means any apartment, efficiency apartment, room, single-family house (and the land appurtenant thereto), suite of rooms, or duplex, which is rented or offered for rent for residential occupancy. Such term shall not include any room in a hotel, motel or other structure used primarily for transient occupancy.

(n) The term "market value" standing alone means the greater of ¹

(1) the total purchase price most recently paid for a housing accommodation; or

(2) the estimated market value of such housing accommodation, for property assessment purposes, as determined by the Mayor.

(o) The term "assessed market value" means the estimated market value of such housing accommodation, for property assessment purposes, as determined by the Mayor.

(p) The term "substantial rehabilitation" means any improvement to or renovation of a housing accommodation or a rental unit begun on or after February 1, 1973 for which the total expenditure equals 50 percent or more of the market value of the housing accommodation before such rehabilitation.

(q) The term "tenant" includes a tenant, subtenant, lessee, sublessee, or other person entitled to the possession, occupancy or the benefits thereof, of any rental unit.

(r) The term "maximum possible rental income" means the sum of the rents for all rental units, whether occupied or not, as of the date of the filing of the registration statement.

(s) The term "vacancy loss" shall be the amount of rent not collected (computed on an annual basis) due to vacant units. No amount shall be included for units occupied by a landlord or his employees or otherwise not offered for rent.

(t) The term "uncollected rent" shall be the amount of rents and other charges due but not collected from tenants minus the amount due and not collected from tenants whose location the landlord knows and from whom he has failed to attempt to recover the loss through legal action in the Superior Court of the District of Columbia or other appropriate forum after having had adequate opportunity to do so.

(u) The term "operating expenses" shall mean the expenses for the upkeep of the accommodation for any consecutive 12 month period in the 15 months immediately preceding the filing of the registration statement required by subsection (b) of section 45-1642, including but not limited to expenses for salaries of on-site personnel, supplies, painting, maintenance and repairs, utilities, professional fees, on-site offices, and insurance.

(v) The term "management fee" shall be the amount paid to a managing agent and any pro rata salaries of off-site administrative personnel paid by the landlord.

(w) The term "property taxes" shall be the amount paid to the District of Columbia Treasurer for real property tax on the housing accommodation.

(x) The term "other income which can be derived from the housing accommodation" shall include but not be limited to fees; commissions; income from vending machines; income from laundry facilities; parking and recreational facilities; late charges; and kindred income which a landlord earns because of his ownership of a housing accommodation other than the gross rental charge. (Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-33, title II, § 201, 22 DCR 2495.)

EFFECTIVE DATE

See note under § 45-1631.

§ 45-1642. Registration—Coverage.

(a) Sections 45-1643 to 45-1652 shall apply to each rental unit in the District of Columbia, except—

(1) any rental unit in an establishment which has as its primary purpose the providing of diagnostic care and treatment of diseases, including but not limited to hospitals, convalescent homes, nursing homes, and personal care homes;

(2) any rental unit in any federally owned housing accommodation or in any housing accommodation with respect to which the mortgage or rent is federally subsidized;

(3) any rental unit in a housing accommodation for which the initial certificate of occupancy was issued after February 2, 1973 but such exception shall be effective only during the length of the initial leasing period or for the first year of tenancy, whichever is shorter;

(4) any dormitory of an institution of higher education, or a private boarding school, in which rooms are provided for students;

(5) any rental unit rented to another by the occupant of a housing accommodation of not more than two rental units, whether such occupant is the owner of such housing accommodation or a tenant who rents such housing accommodation; and

(6) any rental unit in any housing accommodation, for the length of the initial leasing period, or the first year of tenancy, whichever is shorter, which for the two years immediately preceding the effective date of this subchapter has been both vacant and not offered for rent Provided That, such housing accommodation is in substantial compliance with the housing regulations.

(b) Within not more than 90 days following the effective date of this subchapter each landlord shall file with the Rent Administrator, on a form approved by the Rent Administrator, a registration statement for each housing accommodation in the District of Columbia (whether subject to sections 45-1643 to 45-1652 or not) and for which he is receiving rent or is entitled to receive rent. The registration form shall contain that information the Rent Administrator may require, including, but not limited to—

(1) a description of the housing accommodation, including the address, number of rental units, number of stories, drainage, type of construction, date and number of housing business license issued by the District of Columbia Government with respect thereto, and date and number of the certificates of occupancy issued by the District of Columbia government with respect thereto;

(2) a description of the utilities, air-conditioning, and type of heating fuel used for each rental unit in such housing accommodation;

(3) rental information on each rental unit in such housing accommodation for the base rent date including the base rent, the current rent being charged, the amount of the security deposit if any, the related services included, and the related facilities and charges therefor;

(4) the information which is filed in paragraph (3) for the date on which such registration is filed;

(5) in the case of a housing accommodation which has been substantially rehabilitated, the market value of such housing accommodation prior to rehabilitation and the method of computing the market value, a description of such rehabilitation, and an itemized list of expenditures for rehabilitation;

(6) in the case of a housing accommodation which is planned to be substantially rehabilitated or in the process of being substantially rehabilitated, the market value of such housing accommodation prior to rehabilitation and the method of computing the market value, and a description of the proposed rehabilitation;

(7) in the case of a housing accommodation with respect to which the Rent Administrator has permitted, pursuant¹ subsection (a) of section 45-1645, the amortized costs of capital improvements to be included in the computation of the rate of return according to the formula provided in section 45-1644, the market value of such accommodation prior to such improvements, a list of all such improvements allowed pursuant to section 45-1645, and an itemized list of expenditures for such improvements;

(8) a list of any outstanding violations of housing regulations applicable to such housing accommodation;

(9) the name and address of the owner of such housing accommodation and, when applicable, the name of the resident agent;

(10) the information necessary for the Rent Administrator to easily and accurately compute, according to subsection (a) of section 45-1644, the rate of return for that housing accommodation; and

(11) the rate of return for that housing accommodation as computed by the landlord according to said formula.

(c) On or before the end of the third complete month occurring after the date the initial registration was filed under subsection (b) of this section, and, at the end of each third month thereafter, each landlord shall file with the Rent Administrator as to housing accommodations not excepted by subsection (a) of this section either—

(1) a certification of the accuracy of the information on the registration form filed by him;

(2) upon there occurring any change which would not affect the rent which may be charged under this subchapter, a sworn addendum setting forth the new information; or

(3) upon there occurring any change which would affect the rent which may be charged under this subchapter, and if the landlord wants an increase in such rent, a new registration statement. Such new registration statement per item (3) of this subsection may be filed only at the times indicated in this subsection and at no other time.

(d) Each registration form filed under this section shall be available for public inspection at the Office, and each landlord shall keep a duplicate of each registration form posted in a public place on the premises of the housing accommodation with respect to which such registration form applies Provided That, each landlord may, in lieu of posting in a public place in each single family housing accommodation, mail to each tenant of such housing accommodation such duplicate of each registration form.

(e) Each registration form filed under this section which meets the minimum requirements established by the act and by the rules of procedure of the Commission shall be assigned a registration number.

(f) Each certificate of occupancy and each housing business license issued to any landlord in the District of Columbia after the effective date of this subchapter shall contain the registration number of those housing accommodations to which such certificate or license applies. (Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-33, title II, § 202, 22 DCR 2500.)

REFERENCE IN TEXT

The effective date of this subchapter, referred to in subssecs. (a) (6), (b), and (f), is prescribed by sec. 404 of act Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-33, which is set out as a note under § 45-1631.

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in sections 45-1641, 45-1643, 45-1644, 45-1662.

§ 45-1643. Registration fee.

Each landlord of a housing accommodation covered by this subchapter shall pay to the Mayor at the time that he applies for his housing business license and at the time that he applies for any renewal thereof or, in the case of a housing accommodation for which no such license is required, at the time he files his registration statement for that housing accommodation under section 45-1642(b), an annual registration fee of $2 for each rental unit in a housing accommodation registered by him. Such fees shall be paid from time to time into the Treasury of the United States and credited to the General Fund of the District of Columbia. (Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-33, title II, § 203, 22 DCR 2506.)

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in sections 45-1642, 45-1644.

§ 45-1644. Rent ceiling.

(a) Except to the extent provided in subsections (b), (c), and (d) of this section, and section 45-1651, no landlord may charge or collect rent for any rental unit in excess of the rent computed according to the following formula (hereinafter referred to in this subchapter as the "rent ceiling"):

(1) Step 1: add to the base rent an amount equal to 4 percent of the base rent.

(2) Step 2: add to the figure computed in Step 1 an amount equal to 8 percent of such figure.

(3) Step 3: (A) In the case of a housing accommodation for which the rate of return, as shown on the registration statement and computed according to part (B) of this step, is less than 8 percent, the landlord may add to the figure computed in step 2 a pro rata share of an amount sufficient to increase the maximum possible rental income for that housing accommodation by such an amount as will generate a rate of return of no greater than eight percent, Provided That no increase shall be more than five percent of (1) the amount computed in step 2 or (2) the rent as established by the Housing Rent Commission or a court of competent jurisdiction.

(B) In determining the rate of return for each housing accommodation, the following formula shall be used (computed over a base period of any consecutive twelve month period within the fifteen months immediately preceding the filing of the registration statement):

(1) The sum of the maximum possible rent income which can be derived from a housing accommodation shall be added.

(2) To the sum of all other income which can be derived from the housing accommodation.

(3) From the total of maximum possible rental income which can be derived from a housing accommodation plus the sum of all other income which can be derived from the housing accommodation shall be subtracted (i) the dollar value of vacancy losses and (ii) uncollected rents the remainder of which shall be defined as the "gross income".

(4) From the gross income shall be subtracted (i) the operating expenses; (ii) property taxes; (iii) management fee of no more than six percent of the maximum rental income of the accommodation unless and only to the extent any additional amount is approved by the Rent Administrator pursuant to subsection (b) of section 45-1645; (iv) depreciation expenses (computed on a straight line basis) of no more than two percent of the assessed market value of the housing accommodation may be deducted in any one year as a depreciation expense, unless and to only the extent any additional amounts are approved by the Rent Administrator pursuant to subsection (c) of section 45-1645; and (v) amortized costs of capital improvements if and as permitted pursuant to subsection (a) of section 45-1645. The remainder after such subtractions shall be defined as the "net income".

(5) The net income shall be divided by the assessed market value of the housing accommodation to determine the rate of return.

(b) The rent ceiling for a particular rental unit computed according to the procedure specified in this section may be increased or decreased, as the case may be,

(1) according to section 45-1646, to allow for an increase or decrease in related services or facilities;

(2) according to section 45-1650, to allow for the cost of substantial rehabilitation; or

(3) according to section 45-1648, to allow for adjustments for vacant accommodations.

(c) In addition to the adjustments in the rent ceiling which are allowed as specified in subsection (b), any landlord may apply for a hardship adjustment to be computed under section 45-1649.

(d) The rent ceiling for any unit in a housing accommodation exempted by paragraphs (3), or (6) of subsection (a) of section 45-1642 from the provisions of sections 45-1643 to 45-1652, after the termination of such exemption, shall be the rent charged during the initial leasing period or during the first year of tenancy, whichever is less, increased by an amount not in excess of an amount computed in accordance with step 3 of the formula specified in subsection (a) Provided That, no increase shall be more than five percent of the rent so charged. Such increase may be effected only in accordance with the procedures specified in subsections (h) and (i) of this section.

(e) Notwithstanding any provision of this subchapter, the rent for any rental unit shall not be increased above the base rent unless (1) the housing accommodation of which such rental unit is a part is in substantial compliance with the housing regulations Provided That, such non-compliance is not the result of tenant neglect or misconduct; (2) the housing accommodation is registered in accordance with section 45-1642; (3) the landlord of such housing accommodation is properly licensed pursuant to the housing regulations if such regulations require his licensing; and (4) the manager of such housing accommodation, when other than the landlord, is properly registered pursuant to the housing regulations if such regulations require his registration.

(f) If, on the effective date of this subchapter, the rent being charged exceeds the allowable rent ceiling, the rent shall be reduced to the allowable rent ceiling effective the next date that the rent is due, Provided That this subsection shall not apply to any rent approved by the Housing Rent Commission under Regulation 74-20 or any rent approved by a court of competent jurisdiction. The landlord shall notify the tenant in writing of the required decreases prior to the effective date of such decreases.

(g) Notwithstanding any other provision of this subchapter, no rent shall be increased under this subchapter for any rental unit with respect to which there is a valid written lease or rental agreement establishing the rent for such rental unit for the term of such written lease or rental agreement.

(h) (1) If a landlord indicates on his registration statement filed under subsection (b) of section 45-1642, or on any document filed under item (3) of subsection (c) of section 45-1642, that he is entitled to an increase in rents under part A of step 3 of subsection (a) and that he intends to so increase such rents, such landlord shall immediately notify (in writing) the tenants of the rental units to which such increase applies of the intended rent increase. Such notice shall be mailed to the tenants by certified mail, return receipt requested. Such notice shall include those items listed in subsection (i) of this section, and, in addition, a copy of that portion of the registration statement which shows the computation of the rate of return relating to the housing accommodation containing the rental units for which a rent increase is sought. The Commission shall by regulation prescribe the actual wording (including the size of type to be used) of a statement to be included with such notice informing the tenants that they may request an audit of such registration statement and a hearing on such audit and giving the address where and time within which such request may be made.

(2) Any intended rent increase to be made under part (A) of step 3 of subsection (a) of this section shall not be effective before the first day that rent is due occurring more than 30 days after the notice specified in paragraph (1) of this subsection is mailed. If during such 30 days, a tenant in a housing accommodation to which such increase applies files a request for an audit of such registration statement, the Rent Administrator shall forthwith notify the landlord of such request and the landlord raising such rents shall pay the amounts collected reflecting such increase from the tenants of the housing accommodation, beginning on the effective date of such increase, into an interest bearing escrow account established by the landlord in a bank or other financial institution in the District of Columbia. Interest on such accounts shall be at least $5\frac{1}{4}$ percent. The landlord shall keep detailed records for such accounts showing the exact amounts in such accounts attributable to each tenant in the housing accommodation concerned. Such account, and such records, shall be maintained until the Rent Administrator completes the requested audit and issues an order specifying how the contents of such account is to be distributed. Either the landlord, or the tenant requesting an audit, may demand and receive a hearing on the audit. If the Rent Administrator finds, as a result of his audit, that such increase is justified, then he shall award the amounts in such account to the landlord. If the Rent Administrator finds, as a result of his audit that such increase was not justified, then he shall award the amounts in such account to the tenants concerned. If he finds such increase to be partially justified, he shall order the amounts in such account to be distributed equitably to reflect such finding. The Rent Administrator shall complete each such audit within a reasonable time.

(3) If any tenant files a petition for an audit of a registration statement more than 30 days after the mailing of the copy of such statement, the Rent Administrator shall conduct such an audit in a reasonable time, but the landlord shall not be required to place the amounts reflected by the increase in escrow. In addition, the Rent Administrator or Commission may initiate such an audit.

(4) An appeal may be taken from a decision of the Rent Administrator made as a result of an audit by filing a notice of such appeal with the Commission within fifteen days after the date of the decision being appealed.

(5) In the course of conducting any audit or review of any proposed rent increase under this subchapter, the Rent Administrator may require the landlord concerned to produce copies of relevant portions of income tax forms filed by the landlord with either the Federal or District of Columbia¹ for no more than three years.

(i) Each notice of an impending rent increase shall be in writing and shall contain a statement of the:

- (1) current rent;
- (2) proposed rent;
- (3) percentage increase that the proposed rent represents over the current rent;
- (4) effective date of the proposed rent increase;
- (5) base rent;
- (6) percentage increase that the current rent represents above the base rent;
- (7) percentage increase that the proposed rent represents above the base rent;

¹ So in original, probably should be followed by the word "Government".

(8) registration number of the accommodation;

(9) certification and explanation by the landlord that the unit is in substantial compliance with the housing regulations and that the increase is in substantial compliance with the housing regulations and that the increase is in compliance with this subchapter;

(10) exact method of computation of the increase including itemization of cost figures to which the increase is attributable when such increase is pursuant to sections 45-1645, 45-1646, 45-1648, 45-1649, 45-1650;

(11) statement of the penalties as described in section 45-1655, and

(12) location of the registration statement in a public place on the premises in accordance with subsection (d) of section 45-1642.

REFERENCE IN TEXT

The effective date of this subchapter, referred to in subsec. (f), is prescribed by sec. 404 of act Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-33, which is set out as a note under § 45-1631.

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in sections 45-1632, 45-1641, 45-1642, 45-1645, 45-1649, 45-1651, 45-1652.

NOTES TO DECISIONS UNDER PRIOR LAW

Constitutionality, rent control regulations

Fact that rent schedules promulgated by Secretary of Housing and Urban Development for federally insured housing projects allowed the mortgagors to charge rents up to specified maximum did not render invalid, under Supremacy Clause, District of Columbia regulation setting rent ceiling beneath maximum fixed by the Secretary; although federal standard established a maximum rent it did not, conversely, create a right or entitlement to exact the specified maximum; in addition, since federal standard is permissive rather than mandatory, there is no "impossibility of dual compliance" with the two statutes. Columbia Plaza Limited Partnership et al. v. A. Cowles et al. (1975, 403 F. Supp. 1337).

Construction

Statute, which provides that in event of adoption of rent control rules by Council, there be a "means whereby increased cost incurred by * * * landlord[s] * * * shall be taken into consideration," requires prompt, and therefore meaningful, cost passthrough procedures. Apartment and Office Building Association of Metropolitan Washington et al. v. W. E. Washington, Commissioner, et al. (D.C. App. 1975, 343 A.2d 323).

Increased costs, pass-through

Rent control regulation's rent ceiling formula of a 12.32% increase in rent did not satisfy statutory requirement that a procedure for permitting cost pass-through be provided if rent control is to be imposed. Apartment and Office Building Association of Metropolitan Washington et al. v. W. E. Washington, Commissioner, et al. (D.C. App. 1975, 343 A.2d 323).

Rent control regulation's sections, which implemented Rent Control Act provision allowing Housing Rent Commission to grant hardship exemptions to landlords, did not satisfy statutory requirement that a procedure for permitting cost passthrough be provided if rent control is to be imposed, in that pass-through requirement of Act was separate from hardship exemption provision. Id.

Even if rent control regulation contained a cost pass-through mechanism, regulation was not enforceable where implementation of the cost passthrough procedure was shown by the record to be useless as a means of providing a meaningful passthrough of increases in operating costs. Id.

Judicial review

By specifically vesting the Superior Court with jurisdiction to review Rent Commission's decisions, Congress

gave statutory recognition to authority of trial court to use its equity power in rent control field. Columbia Realty Venture v. District of Columbia Housing Rent Commission (D.C. App. 1975, 350 A.2d 120).

District of Columbia Court of Appeals is without jurisdiction to review Housing Rent Commission's voiding of hearing examiner's order allowing increased cost of operating property to be passed through to tenants due to landlord's failure to serve order on parties and Commission within 45 days after decision; review thereof would be in the Superior Court. Id.

§ 45-1645. Capital improvements.

(a) In the case of a landlord who has completed capital improvements, the Rent Administrator may permit the costs of such improvements, amortized over the useful life of such improvements and applied on an equal basis to all rental units within the housing accommodation benefiting from such improvement, to be included as an item in the computation of the rate of return to be subtracted from gross income as defined in part (B) of step (3) of subsection (a) of section 45-1644 Provided That, (1) the landlord has made available to the Rent Administrator and to the tenant concerned the plans, contracts, specifications, and building permits relating to the capital improvements; and (2) the Rent Administrator is satisfied that the interests of the tenant are being protected.

(b) Where, in the computation of a rate of return, a landlord seeks to deduct a management fee in excess of six percent of the maximum possible rental income, he shall first file with the Rent Administrator a petition to allow such excess to be deducted. If the Rent Administrator determines that such excess or part thereof is reasonable, he may permit to be deducted the same or so much thereof as he determines to be reasonable. The petition shall contain such information as the Rent Administrator may require including but not limited to the name of the payee of the fee and what, if any, identity exists between the landlord and the payee.

(c) Where, in the computation of a rate of return, a landlord seeks to deduct depreciation expenses in excess of two percent of the assessed market value of the housing accommodation, he shall first file with the Rent Administrator a petition to allow such excess to be deducted. If the Rent Administrator determines that such excess or part thereof is justified, he may permit to be deducted the same or so much thereof as he determines to be justified. The petition shall contain such information as the Rent Administrator may require including but not limited to what if any depreciation of the housing accommodation has been claimed for tax purposes.

(d) Nothing in subsections (b) and (c) of this section shall be construed to prohibit or limit the Rent Administrator in any determination of the accuracy of any claimed management fee of six percent or less of the maximum possible rental income or any claimed depreciation expense of two percent or less of the assessed market value of the housing accommodation. (Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-33, title II, § 205, 22 DCR 2515.)

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in sections 45-1642, 45-1644, 45-1652.

§ 45-1646. Services and facilities.

If the Rent Administrator determines that—

(1) the related services or related facilities supplied by a landlord for a housing accommodation or for any rental unit therein are substantially increased; or

(2) the related services or related facilities supplied by a landlord for a housing accommodation or for any rental unit therein are substantially decreased;

then the Rent Administrator may increase or decrease the rent ceiling applicable to such rental unit accordingly. (Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-33, title II, § 206, 22 DCR 2517.)

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in sections 45-1642, 45-1644, 45-1652.

§ 45-1647. Security deposit.

No person shall demand or receive a security deposit for any rental unit where no security deposit was demanded or received for such rental unit upon the effective date of this subchapter. (Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-33, title II, § 207, 22 DCR 2518.)

REFERENCE IN TEXT

The effective date of this subchapter, referred to in text, is prescribed by sec. 404 of act Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-33, which is set out as a note under § 45-1631.

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in section 45-1642, 45-1644.

§ 45-1648. Vacant accommodation.

(a) When, after the date the initial registration statement is filed under this subchapter, a rental unit becomes vacant, the landlord may adjust the rent ceiling for such rental unit to the rent ceiling applicable to any substantially identical rental unit within the same housing accommodation, provided the tenant has vacated on his own initiative or as a result of notice to vacate for one of the following causes: (1) nonpayment of rent; (2) violation of an obligation of his tenancy, as provided in item (1) of subsection (b) of section 45-1653; or (3) use of the accommodation for an illegal purpose or purposes, as provided in item (2) of subsection (b) of section 45-1653.

(b) For the purposes of this section, rental units shall be defined to be "substantially identical" where they contain essentially the same square footage, essentially the same floor plan, comparable amenities and equipment, comparable locations with respect to exposure and height (if exposure and height have previously been factors in the amount of rent charged), and are in comparable physical condition. (Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-33, title II, § 208, 22 DCR 2518.)

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in sections 45-1642, 45-1644.

§ 45-1649. Hardship petition.

(a) In those cases where, after any increase which may be permitted by Part (A) of step 3 of subsection (a) of section 45-1644, the landlord can show a negative cash flow after consideration of debt service, the Rent Administrator, upon petition of the landlord, may allow such additional increases in rent as will generate a positive cash flow Provided That, in the consideration of such petitions, the Rent Administrator shall consider the degree of hardship which the requested increase will place upon the tenants of the housing accommodation.

(b) In those cases where the rent increase permitted by Part (A) of step 3 of subsection (a) of section 45-1644 is insufficient to generate a rate of return of eight percent computed according to the formula provided in Part (B) of said step, the Rent Administrator, upon petition of the landlord and after audit of the figures and computations in the most current registration statement, may allow such additional increases in rent as will generate a rate of return of eight percent. The Rent Administrator shall approve or disapprove such petition or any part thereof but shall not permit an increase which will generate a rate of return in excess of eight percent as of the time of the filing of the most current registration statement. (Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-33, title II, § 209, 22 DCR 2519.)

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in sections 45-1642, 45-1644, 45-1652.

NOTES TO DECISIONS UNDER PRIOR LAW

Judicial review—Equitable jurisdiction

By specifically vesting the Superior Court with jurisdiction to review Rent Commission's decisions, Congress gave statutory recognition to authority of trial court to use its equity power in rent control field. Columbia Realty Venture v. District of Columbia Housing Rent Commission (D.C. App. 1975, 350 A.2d 120).

District of Columbia Court of Appeals is without jurisdiction to review Housing Rent Commission's voiding of hearing examiner's order allowing increased cost of operating property to be passed through to tenants due to landlord's failure to serve order on parties and Commission within 45 days after decision; review thereof would be in the Superior Court. Id.

Superior Court did not abuse its discretion in taking equitable jurisdiction in case, in which landlords sought to have rent control regulation declared invalid and in which Housing Rent Commission was shown to have had an administrative inability to decide landlords' petitions for hardship adjustments, notwithstanding contention that landlords' proper remedy would have been to wait 60 days and then commence an action in Superior Court pursuant to provision of District of Columbia Rent Control Act. Apartment and Office Building Association of Metropolitan Washington et al. v. W. E. Washington, Commissioner, et al. (D.C. App. 1975, 343 A.2d 323).

— Standing

Landlords, who alleged injury in fact through loss of increased rent because of failure of Housing Rent Commission to decide petitions for hardship adjustments, who alleged that they were within zone of interest that rent control regulation in Rent Control Act was designed to protect and who alleged that there was no clear and convincing indication of a legislative intent to preclude judicial review, had standing to seek judicial review of failure of Commission to act on such petitions within the 60 days required by regulation. Apartment and Office Building Association of Metropolitan Washington et al. v. W. E. Washington, Commissioner, et al. (D.C. App. 1975, 343 A.2d 323).

§ 45-1650. Substantial rehabilitation.

(a) If the Rent Administrator determines that: (1) a rental unit is to be substantially rehabilitated, (2) such rehabilitation is in the interest of the tenants of such unit and the housing accommodation in which the unit is located, then the Rent Administrator may approve, contingent upon completion of such substantial rehabilitation, an increase in the rent ceiling for such rental unit, Provided That such rent increase is no greater than the equivalent of 125 percent of the rent ceiling applicable to such rental unit prior to substantial rehabilitation.

(b) In determining whether a housing unit is to be substantially rehabilitated, the Rent Administrator shall examine the plans, specifications and projected costs for such rehabilitation, which shall be made available to the Administrator by the landlord of the unit or accommodation to be rehabilitated.

(c) In determining whether substantial rehabilitation of a housing accommodation is in keeping with the interest of the tenants, the Rent Administrator shall consider, among other relevant factors: (1) the impact of such rehabilitation on the tenants of the unit or housing accommodation and (2) the existing condition of the unit or housing accommodation and the degree to which any violations of the housing regulations in such unit or housing accommodation constitute an impairment of the health, welfare and safety of the tenants.

(d) This section shall apply to the following: (1) any rental unit with respect to which a landlord has notified the tenant, after effective date of this subchapter, of intent to substantially rehabilitate; (2) any rental unit with respect to which, prior to the effective date of this subchapter: (i) the landlord has notified the tenant of the intended substantial rehabilitation; and (ii) all the tenants have left. (Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-33, title II, § 210, 22 DCR 2520.)

REFERENCE IN TEXT

The effective date of this subchapter, referred to in subsec. (d), is prescribed by sec. 404 of act Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-33, which is set out as a note under § 45-1631.

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in sections 45-1642, 45-1644, 45-1652, 45-1662.

§ 45-1651. Transitional provision.

In the case of rental units, the rents of which have been determined by the Housing Rent Commission or a court of competent jurisdiction, the landlord of such units shall not use steps 1 and 2 of subsection (a) of section 45-1644 in computing the allowable rent ceiling for such units, but shall use the rents so allowed in lieu of said steps. (Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-33, title II, § 211, 22 DCR 2521.)

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in sections 45-1642, 45-1644.

§ 45-1652. Adjustment procedure.

(a) The Rent Administrator shall consider an adjustment allowed by sections 45-1645, 45-1646, 45-1649, or 45-1650 in the rent ceiling applicable to any rental unit upon a petition filed with him by the landlord of such rental unit. Such petition shall be filed with the Rent Administrator on a form provided by him containing such information as he may require including an itemization of the actual income and operating expenses for the housing accommodation of which that rental unit is a part for a two-year period ending not more than four months before the date such petition was filed or initiated. A tenant may file a petition for adjustment of rent pursuant to section 45-1644(e) or resulting from a reduction of services or facilities pursuant to section 45-1646. The Rent Administrator shall approve or deny, in whole or in part, each such petition whether filed by landlord or tenant within 60 days after such petition is filed with him, unless an extension of time is approved, in writing, by both the landlord and tenant of such rental unit or by the Commission.

(b) Upon receipt of such petition, the Rent Administrator shall notify the landlord if the tenant filed the petition, or the tenants concerned if the landlord filed the petition by certified mail or any other form of service which assures delivery, of the receipt of such petition and of the right of either party to request (in writing) a hearing within fifteen days after the receipt of such notice. If a hearing is timely requested by either party, notice of the time and place of the hearing shall be furnished the parties by certified mail or any other form of service which assures delivery at least fifteen days before the commencement of such hearing. Such notice shall inform each of the parties of his right to retain legal counsel to represent him at the hearing.

(c) Each landlord of any rental unit with respect to which a petition is filed or initiated under this section shall submit to the Rent Administrator, within 15 days after demand therefor is made, an information statement, on a form approved by the Rent Administrator, containing the information the Rent Administrator may request or the Commission may require.

(d) The Rent Administrator may consolidate petitions and hearings relating to rental units in the same housing accommodation.

(e) The Rent Administrator may, without holding a hearing, refuse to adjust the rent ceiling for any rental unit, and may dismiss any petition for adjustment, if a final decision has been made on a petition filed under sections 45-1646, 45-1649, or 45-1650 or under District of Columbia Regulation 74-20 on another petition for adjustment as to the same rental units within the six months immediately before the filing of the immediate petition.

(f) All petitions filed under this section, all hearings held relating thereto, and all appeals taken from decision of the Rent Administrator, shall be considered and held according to the provisions of this section and the District of Columbia Administrative Procedure Act (D.C. Code, sec. 1-1501 et seq.). In the case of any direct, irreconcilable conflict between the provisions of this section and the District of Columbia Administrative Procedure Act, the District of Columbia Administrative Procedure Act shall apply.

(g) Decisions of the Rent Administrator shall be made on the record relating to any petition filed with him. An appeal from any decision of the Rent Administrator may be taken by the aggrieved party to the Commission within ten days after the decision of the Rent Administrator, or the Commission may initiate a review of a decision of the Rent Administrator on its own initiative. The Commission may reverse, in whole or in part, any decision which it finds to be arbitrary, capricious, an abuse of discretion, or otherwise not in accordance with the provisions of this subchapter, or unsupported by the substantial evidence in the record of the proceedings before the Rent Administrator; or it may affirm, in whole or in part, the Rent Administrator's decision. The Commission shall issue a decision with respect to an appeal within 30 days after such an appeal was filed. An appeal from a decision by the Rent Administrator respecting any rent adjustment shall not stay the effectiveness of the decision.

(h) No increase in rent allowed under this subchapter shall be implemented unless the tenant concerned has been given written notice, at least 30 days before the intended date of implementation, of such increase.

(i) A copy of any decision made by the Rent Administrator or by the Commission under this section shall be mailed to the parties to such decision. (Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-33, title II, § 212, 22 DCR 2522.)

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in sections 45-1632, 45-1642, 45-1644.

§ 45-1653. Eviction.

(a) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, no tenant shall be evicted from a rental unit unless he has been served with a written notice to vacate, specifying the reasons for such eviction, and a copy of such notice has been filed with the Rent Administrator.

(b) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, no tenant shall be evicted from a rental unit, notwithstanding the expiration of his lease or rental agreement, so long as such tenant continues to pay the rent to which the landlord is entitled for such rental unit, unless—

(1) the tenant is violating an obligation of his tenancy and fails to correct such violation within 30 days after receiving notice thereof from the landlord;

(2) a court of competent jurisdiction has determined that the tenant has performed an illegal act within such rental unit or housing accommodation;

(3) the landlord seeks in good faith to recover possession of such rental unit for his immediate and personal use and occupancy;

(4) the landlord has in good faith contracted in writing to sell the rental unit, or the housing accommodation in which such rental unit is located, for the immediate and personal use and occupancy by another person, so long as at the time he offers the rental unit or housing accommodation for sale the landlord has so notified the tenant in writing;

(5) the landlord seeks in good faith to recover possession of the rental unit for the immediate purpose of making alterations or renovations of the rental unit which cannot safely or reasonably be accomplished while the rental unit is occupied or for the immediate purpose of demolishing the housing accommodation in which such rental unit is located and replacing it with a new construction, so long as the plans for such alteration or new construction have been filed with and approved by the Rent Administrator; or

(6) the landlord seeks in good faith to recover possession of the rental unit for the immediate purpose of discontinuing the housing use and occupancy of such rental unit for a continuous period of not less than 6 months.

(c) In any case where the landlord seeks to recover possession of a rental unit under paragraphs (3), (4), (5), or (6) of subsection (b) of this section he shall first notify the tenant of such rental unit, in writing and at least 90 days prior thereto, of his intent to recover possession of such rental unit Provided That, when the landlord seeks to recover possession of a rental unit under paragraph (5) for purposes of substantial rehabilitation, such notice shall be in accordance with section 45-1661.

(d) No landlord shall demand or receive rent for any rental unit which he has repossessed under paragraphs (3) or (6) of subsection (b) of this section during the 6 month period beginning on the date he recovered possession of such rental unit. No person who has purchased a rental unit which has been repossessed by a landlord under paragraph (4) of subsection (b) of this section shall demand or receive rent for such rental unit during the 6 month period beginning on the date such landlord recovered such rental unit.

(e) In the case of any rental unit which has been repossessed by a landlord under paragraph (5) of subsection (b) of this section, the tenant from whom the landlord repossessed such unit shall have an absolute right to rent such unit immediately upon completion of the renovation or alterations, and, where the renovations or alterations are necessary to bring the unit into compliance with the housing regulations, the tenant may rent at the same rent and under the same obligations as were in effect at the time he was dispossessed, Provided That, such renovations or alterations were not made necessary by the negligent or malicious conduct of such tenant. (Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-33, title II, § 213, 22 DCR 2525.)

This section is referred to in section 45-1648.

§ 45-1654. Retaliatory action.

(a) No landlord shall take any retaliatory action against any tenant who exercises any right conferred upon him by this subchapter, or by any rule or order issued pursuant thereto, or by any other provision of law. Retaliatory action shall include any action or proceeding to recover possession of a rental unit; action which would increase rent, decrease services, increase the obligation of a tenant or constitute undue or unusual inconvenience, violate the privacy of the tenant, harass, reduce the quality or quantity of service; and any refusal to honor a lease or rental agreement or any provision of a lease or rental agreement, refusal to renew a lease or rental agreement, termination of a tenancy without cause; and any other form of threat or coercion.

(b) In determining whether an action taken by a landlord against a tenant is retaliatory action, the trier of fact shall take into consideration whether, within the 6 months immediately preceding such landlord's action, the tenant—

(1) has made a witnessed oral or written request to the landlord to make repairs which are necessary to bring the housing accommodation or the rental unit into compliance with the housing regulations;

(2) contacted appropriate officials of the District of Columbia government, either orally in the presence of a witness or in writing, concerning existing violations of the housing regulations of the rental unit he occupies or pertaining to the housing accommodation in which such rental unit is located, or reported to such officials suspected violations which, if confirmed, would render such rental unit or housing accommodation in noncompliance with the housing regulations;

(3) withheld all or part of his rent, after having given a reasonable notice to the landlord, either orally or in the presence of a witness or in writing, of a violation of the housing regulations;

(4) organized, been a member of, or been involved in any lawful activities pertaining to a tenant organization;

(5) made an effort to secure or enforce any of his rights under his lease or contract with the landlord; or

(6) brought legal action against the landlord based on the provisions of this subchapter.

(Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-33, title II, § 214, 22 DCR 2529.)

§ 45-1655. Penalties.

(a) Any person who—

(1) demands or receives any rent for a rental unit in excess of the maximum allowable rent applicable to that rental unit under the provisions of this subchapter, or

(2) substantially reduces or eliminates related services previously provided for a rental unit, shall be held liable by the Rent Administrator for treble the amount by which the rent exceeded the applicable rent ceiling or for $50, whichever is greater.

(b) Any person who—

(1) willfully makes a false or misleading statement in any registration statement or other statement filed under this subchapter, or

(2) willfully commits any other action in violation of this subchapter, or willfully fails to do anything required under this subchapter; shall be fined not more than $5,000 for each violation. (Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-33, title II, § 215, 22 DCR 2531.)

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in section 45-1644.

TITLE III.—CONVERSION OF RENTAL HOUSING

§ 45-1661. Sale of single family housing accommodation.

Any owner of a single family housing accommodation may sell such housing accommodation to a purchaser but only after such owner has given the tenant of such housing accommodation an opportunity to purchase such housing accommodation at a price which represents a bonafide offer of sale. The tenant shall be afforded at least 45 days within which to accept such offer of sale. (Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-33, title III, § 301, 22 DCR 2532.)

EFFECTIVE DATE

See note under § 45-1631.

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in section 45-1653.

§ 45-1662. Condominium conversion.

(a) Every tenant of a housing accommodation which the landlord seeks to convert from a rental basis to a condominium or cooperative, shall be notified in writing no less than 180 days before the conversion thereof. The landlord of such a housing accommodation shall make to each tenant a bonafide offer of sale of the unit which such tenant occupies, and the tenant shall be afforded no less than 60 days within which to accept. No tenant shall be served with a notice to vacate until 150 days after he first receives notice of the landlord's intention to convert, nor shall the notice to vacate be served prior to the expiration of the aforesaid 60-day period or receipt of the tenant's written rejection of the bonafide offer of sale of the unit which he occupies, whichever occurs first. Nothing in this subsection shall be construed to permit conversion of rental units to condominium units where otherwise prohibited by law.

(b) The tenant of every housing accommodation which the landlord seeks to substantially rehabilitate shall be notified in writing at least 120 days prior to commencement of rehabilitation. No tenant shall be served with a notice to vacate until 90 days after he first received written notice of the landlord's intention to rehabilitate, and no landlord shall commence actual (physical) rehabilitation until the 120-day notice period has expired. The written notice of intent to substantially rehabilitate shall include the information required under section 45-1642(b), and a statement that the Rent Administrator has approved the substantial rehabilitation according to section 45-1650 and information indicating tenant may obtain a copy of the registration form at the office of the Rent Administrator, and the address of the Rent Administrator. (Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-33, title III, § 302, 22 DCR 2532.)

TITLE IV.—MISCELLANEOUS

§ 45-1671. Construction.

Except as to the appointment of members of the Rental Accommodations Commission, the provisions of this act shall be deemed as a continuation of Act 1-35, adopted on July 22, 1975 by the Council and approved by the Mayor on July 25, 1975, and shall be deemed to have been in effect as of the effective date of said Act 1-35. (Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-33, title IV, § 401, 22 DCR 2534.)

EFFECTIVE DATE

See note under § 45-1631.

§ 45-1672. Transfer of property, records, and unexpended balances—Continuation of determinations etc.

(a) There are hereby authorized to be transferred to the Rent Administrator and the Commission for use in the administration of the functions of those offices, the property, records, and unexpended balances of appropriations and other funds which related primarily to the functions so transferred.

(b) Any determination, rule, or order, contract, compact, designation or other action made by the District of Columbia Housing Rent Commission shall, except to the extent modified or made inapplicable by the subchapter, continue in effect. (Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-33, title IV, § 402, 22 DCR 2534.)

§ 45-1673. Judicial review.

(a) Any person or class of persons aggrieved by a decision of the Commission, or by any failure on the part of the Commission to act, may seek judicial review of such decision or failure by filing a petition for review in the District of Columbia Court of Appeals. The Commission on its own initiative, or the Rent Administrator, may commence a civil action to enforce any rule or decision of the Commission or Rent Administrator, as the case may be. Such an action brought by the Commission or Rent Administrator, as the case may be, shall be brought in the Superior Court of the District of Columbia.

(b) The Superior Court, in issuing any order in any action brought under this section, may award costs of litigation (including a reasonable attorney's fee) to any successful party. (Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-33, title IV, § 403, 22 DCR 2535.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS UNDER PRIOR LAW

Jurisdiction

By specifically vesting the Superior Court with jurisdiction to review Rent Commission's decisions, Congress gave statutory recognition to authority of trial court to use its equity power in rent control field. Columbia Realty Venture v. District of Columbia Housing Rent Commission (D.C. App. 1975, 350 A.2d 120).

District of Columbia Court of Appeals is without jurisdiction to review Housing Rent Commission's voiding of hearing examiner's order allowing increased cost of operating property to be passed through to tenants due to landlord's failure to serve order on parties and Commission within 45 days after decision; review thereof would be in the Superior Court. Id.

§ 45-1674. Severability.

If any provision of this subchapter, or any section, sentence, clause, phrase or word or the application thereof, in any circumstances is held invalid, the validity of the remainder of the subchapter and of the application of any such provision, section, sentence, clause, phrase or word shall not be affected. (Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-33, title IV, § 405, 22 DCR 2536.)

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established By Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

CODIFICATION

In subsec. (b) (5) (R), "(22 U.S.C. 288—288f-2)" has been substituted for "(22 U.S.C. 288—288f-1)" to reflect the addition of another section to the International Organizations Immunities Act by Act Nov. 27, 1973, Pub. L. 93-161, 87 Stat. 635.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Boundaries of District of Columbia

Washington National Airport is within boundaries of Commonwealth of Virginia and not within those of District of Columbia; thus employer of pilot, whose base of operations was the airport, correctly reported pilot's wages to Virginia for unemployment compensation purposes and pilot is not entitled to unemployment benefits from the District of Columbia. J. L. Bryan v. District Unemployment Compensation Board (D.C. App. 1975, 342 A.2d 45).

Employment—Interstate arrangements

Where claimant, by combining his military service with his later private employment in Ohio, claims to be qualified for increased benefits under the Interstate Arrangement for Combining Employment and Wages, his military service constitutes "employment" under interstate arrangement entered into by District of Columbia, and since the District is the paying state and Ohio is the transferring state, Ohio law governs whether claimant's employment is subject to transfer to the District so as to qualify him for increased benefits. Benjamin Rose Institute v. District Unemployment Compensation Board (D.C. App. 1975, 338 A.2d 104).

§ 46-303. Employer contributions.

* * * *

(c) FUTURE RATES BASED ON BENEFIT EXPERIENCE.—

* * * *

(10) At least one month prior to the final date upon which the first contributions for any calendar year or part thereof become due from any employer at a contribution rate determined under this subsection, the Board shall notify such employer of his rate of contributions and of the benefit charges upon which such rate was based. Such determination shall become conclusive and binding upon the employer unless, within thirty days after the mailing of notice thereof to his last-known address, or in the absence of mailing, within thirty days after the delivery of such notice, the employer files an application for review and a redetermination, setting forth his reasons therefor. Upon receipt of such application, the Board shall voluntarily adjust such matter or shall grant an opportunity for a fair hearing and promptly notify the employer thereof. All such hearings shall be held before a Contribution Rate Review Committee composed of three members who shall be employees of the Board and appointed by the Board. The findings and decision of this Committee shall not be subject to review by the District Auditor. No employer shall have standing, in any proceeding involving his rate of contributions or contribution liability, to contest the chargeability of his account of any benefits paid in accordance with a determination, redetermination, or decision pursuant to section 46-311, except on the ground that the services on the basis of which such benefits were found to be chargeable do not constitute services performed in employment for him and only in the event that he was not a party to such determination, redetermination, or decision or to any other proceedings under this chapter in which the character of such services was determined. The employer shall be promptly notified in writing of the Board's denial of his application or of the Board's redetermination. An employer aggrieved by the Board's decision may seek review of such determination in the District of Columbia Court of Appeals in accordance with the District of Columbia Administrative Procedure Act [D.C. Code, secs. 1-1501 to 1-1510].

(j) Notwithstanding any of the provisions of this chapter, no employer's experience rating account shall be charged and no employer shall be liable for payments in lieu of contributions with respect to extended benefit payments which are wholly reimbursed to the District of Columbia by the Federal Government. (As amended Dec. 7, 1974, Pub. L. 93-515, title III, § 301(1), 88 Stat. 1617; May 13, 1975, D.C. Law 1-2, § 1(1), 21 DCR 3941.)

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established By Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

1975—Act May 13, 1975, D.C. Law 1-2, added subsec. (j).

1974—Section 301(1) of Act Dec. 7, 1974, Pub. L. 93-515, amended subsec. (c) (10) by substituting "The employer shall be promptly notified in writing of the Board's denial of his application or of the Board's redetermination. An employer aggrieved by the Board's decision may seek review of such determination in the District of Columbia Court of Appeals in accordance with the District of Columbia Administrative Procedure Act [D.C. Code, secs. 1-1501 to 1-1510]." for the last three sentences which read: "The employer shall be promptly notified of the Board's denial of his application or of the Board's redetermination, both of which shall become final unless, within thirty days after the mailing of such notice thereof to his last-known address, or in the absence of mailing, within thirty days after the delivery of such notice, a petition for judicial review is filed in the Superior Court of the District of Columbia. In any proceedings under this subsection the findings of the Board as to the facts, if supported by evidence and in the absence of fraud, shall be conclusive and the jurisdiction of said court shall be confined to questions of law. Such proceedings shall be given precedence over all other civil cases except cases arising under section 46-312 and under section 36-501."

EFFECTIVE DATE OF 1975 AMENDMENT

Section 2.2 of Act May 13, 1975, D.C. Law 1-2, provided: "The amendments [to §§ 46-303, 46-307] made by this act shall take effect immediately upon passage of this act."

EFFECTIVE DATE OF 1974 AMENDMENTS

Section 302 of Act Dec. 7, 1974, Pub. L. 93-515, title III, 88 Stat. 1616, provided: "The amendments [to §§ 46-303, 46-312] made by section 302¹ of this title shall take effect with respect to petitions filed after the date of enactment of this title for review of decisions or orders."

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Construction

As this section clearly and unambiguously provided that the standard contribution rate for unemployment compensation insurance should be 2.7% except that after December 31, 1971, each employer "newly subject" to this chapter should pay contributions at a rate later determined to be 1.1%, and as petitioner first became subject to the chapter in October of 1969, petitioner was not "newly" subject to the chapter and was not entitled to a reduced rate until it had been an employer for a sufficient period to qualify for a reduced rate based on experience; further, the statutory classification was reasonable and the act was therefore constitutional as applied to petitioner. Temporaries Incorporated v. District Unemployment Compensation Board (D.C. App. 1973, 304 A. 2d 14).

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

Available for work

Claimant's enrollment as a day student at a state university for nine hours of classes per week is sufficient to render him ineligible for unemployment benefits since by not devoting full time to seeking other jobs claimant failed to make himself available for reemployment. B. L. Wood v. District Unemployment Compensation Board (D.C. App. 1975, 334 A.2d 188).

Evidence of availability

Evidence that claimant, who had been employed as a saleswoman in a department store prior to voluntarily leaving her employment in the District of Columbia and going to rural area in Virginia to live, was willing to drive 10 or 15 miles from her home to work but was unwilling to drive 25 miles to nearest sizable town where there were many opportunities to find work sustained determination that claimant was not available for work and was not entitled to unemployment compensation. M. L. Hollar v. District of Columbia Unemployment Compensation Board (D.C. App. 1974, 317 A. 2d 868).

Evidence did not support decision of Unemployment Compensation Board that unemployment compensation claimant who lived one mile from public transportation, made constant effort to obtain employment, registered with both local and state employment agencies and made numerous job contacts had not been available for work during period for which benefits were claimed and was not entitled to unemployment benefits. M. L. Hill v. District Unemployment Compensation Board (D.C. App. 1973, 302 A. 2d 226).

Federal employees

Where express terms of statute relating to assignment of federal service and wages required that the Defense Department, which was former employer of unemployment compensation claimant, who had worked at the Pentagon, had no other choice than to assign claimant's federal service and wages to Virginia, the state where his last duty station was located, and where statute made it clear that a state agency had no authority to set aside a federal agency's certification with respect to the last official duty station, claimant could not recover unemployment compensation from the District of Columbia, and fact that letterheads on official stationery of the Secretary and Assistant Secretaries of Defense identified their mailing address as a Washington, D.C. postal zone would not change the result. J. D. Hemenway v. District Unemployment Compensation Board (D.C. App. 1974, 326 A. 2d 776).

Job contacts

Neither unemployment compensation statute nor the Unemployment Compensation Board's regulations require a claimant for unemployment benefits to make, as a condition precedent, at least three job contacts weekly. M. L. Hill v. District Unemployment Compensation Board (D.C. App. 1973, 302 A. 2d 226).

Official notice

Agency must notify the parties to an administrative proceeding that a material fact is being officially noticed so that the parties have an opportunity to rebut that fact. P. E. Carey v. District Unemployment Compensation Board (D.C. App. 1973, 304 A. 2d 18).

Proposed findings and decision of District Unemployment Compensation Board denying unemployment compensation benefits on ground, inter alia, that claimant was not available for work due to her refusal to accept the aid of the United States Employment Service did not notify claimant that the Board was invoking its prerogative to take official notice of a nonrecord fact consisting of agency record, and thus claimant did not waive her right to contest that fact by failing to request an opportunity to rebut the evidence. Id.

§ 46-310. Disqualification for benefits.

(h) The eligibility of any individual, who is or has recently been pregnant, for benefits under this chapter, shall be determined under the same standards and procedures as for any other claimant under this chapter. (As amended Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-34, § 4, 22 DCR 2553.)

AMENDMENT

1975—Subsec. (h) amended generally by act Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-34.

EFFECTIVE DATE OF 1975 AMENDMENT

See Effective Date note under section 46-327.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Misconduct

Alleged company rule prohibiting performance of paid overtime work at home without supervisor's approval, which was allegedly violated and thus formed basis of finding of petitioner's misconduct in unemployment compensation proceeding, falls short of standard requiring that conduct be act of wanton or willful disregard of employer's interest, deliberate violation of employer's rules, disregard of standards of behavior which employer has right to expect of employer, or negligence in such degree or recurrence as to manifest culpability, wrongful intent, or evil design, or show intentional or substantial disregard of employer's interest or of employee's duties and obligations to employer. C. M. Green v. District Unemployment Compensation Board (D.C. App. 1975, 346 A.2d 252).

In unemployment compensation proceeding, where petitioner was denied unemployment benefits on ground she violated alleged company rule against doing overtime work at home without supervisor's approval even though employer testified petitioner was discharged from job on grounds of falsified overtime records and specifically disavowed Board's ground as being basis for dismissal, Board should not have made independent judgment that other grounds existed sufficient to support finding of misconduct which, in Board's opinion, should be cause for employer to discharge employee and deny unemployment benefits on that ground. Id.

Separation from employment as wage rate director for international union due to affirmation of conviction for violating Landrum-Griffin Act by falsifying financial records which union was required by law to keep, which conviction precluded employment with union for five years, was tantamount to a discharge for misconduct so as to render wage rate director, disqualified for unemployment compensation. M. Budzanoski v. District Unemployment Compensation Board (D.C. App. 1974, 326 A. 2d 243).

Where outside salesman, despite warnings from his supervisor, on several occasions cut short his workday to attend to personal affairs without first receiving permission and on those occasions he had, without authorization, released two new employees who had been assigned to him to learn his duties, route and customers, employee breached his contractual duty to devote his entire time, attention and energies to his employment and was guilty of misconduct as a matter of law, justifying denial of unemployment benefits for five weeks. G. R. Colvin v. District Unemployment Compensation Board (D.C. App. 1973, 306 A. 2d 662).

—Burden of proof

Claimant for unemployment compensation was not denied procedural due process on theory that he was not instructed that burden of proof was on employer, which alleged misconduct of employee as ground for discharge, and that, in absence of affirmative proof of such misconduct, employee was not obliged to offer any testimony nor would any misconduct be presumed from his failure to testify, where claimant had been informed by appeals examiner prior to hearing that burden was on employer, he had been represented by counsel at both hearings and regulation respecting burden of proof was matter of public record. G. R. Colvin v. District Unemployment Compensation Board (D.C. App. 1973, 306 A. 2d 662).

—Most recent work

Even though claimant was employed as president of local union at time he was convicted of violating Landrum-Griffin Act by falsifying financial records which union was required to keep and did not commence employment as wage rate director for international union until ten months after his conviction, where claimant held both positions at time his conviction was affirmed, both jobs were claimant's "most recent work" within meaning of statute rendering an individual who is discharged for misconduct occurring in the course of his most recent work ineligible for unemployment benefits and claimant's alleged misconduct occurred during both his employment as wage rate director and as union president. M. Budzanoski v. District Unemployment Compensation Board (D.C. App. 1974, 326 A. 2d 243).

§ 46-311. Determination of claims.

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Evidence of availability

Evidence did not support decision of Unemployment Compensation Board that unemployment compensation claimant who lived one mile from public transportation, made constant effort to obtain employment, registered with both local and state employment agencies and made numerous job contacts had not been available for work during period for which benefits were claimed and was not entitled to unemployment benefits. M. L. Hill v. District Unemployment Compensation Board (D.C. App. 1973, 302 A. 2d 226).

Final decision

District Unemployment Compensation Board is authorized to provide by a procedural rule that appeals examiner's decision constitutes the proposed findings and decision of the Board and in so doing the Board should at the same time the appeals examiner's decision is issued provide a time limit in which to file with the Board objections to the appeals examiner's decision with a date for oral argument before the Board or any such objections set at that time or at a later date. P. E. Carey v. District Unemployment Compensation Board (D.C. App. 1973, 304 A. 2d 18).

Findings

Findings and conclusions of the Unemployment Compensation Board are conclusive upon the Court of Appeals if supported by evidence in whole of the administrative record. M. L. Hill v. District Unemployment Compensation Board (D.C. App. 1973, 302 A. 2d 226).

Official notice

Agency must notify the parties to an administrative proceeding that a material fact is being officially noticed so that the parties have an opportunity to rebut that fact. P. E. Carey v. District Unemployment Compensation Board (D.C. App. 1973, 304 A. 2d 18).

Proposed findings and decision of District Unemployment Compensation Board denying unemployment compensation benefits on ground, inter alia, that claimant was not available for work due to her refusal to accept the aid of the United States Employment Service did not notify claimant that the Board was invoking its prerogative to take official notice of a nonrecord fact consisting of agency record, and thus claimant did not waive her right to contest that fact by failing to request an opportunity to rebut the evidence. Id.

Time to appeal

Under this section providing that appeal to Unemployment Compensation Board from initial determination shall be filed within ten days after notification thereof, or after the date such notification was mailed to claimant's last known address, as amended to provide that only in the absence of mailing would the actual date of delivery be used, Board had no authority to extend limitation time as to petitioner who filed his appeal from determination that he had received benefits to which he was not entitled three days beyond the ten-day time limit, even though petitioner explained failure to file timely appeal as due to death of his wife. G. Gaskins, Sr. v. District Unemployment Compensation Board (D.C. App. 1974, 315 A. 2d 567).

§ 46-312. Court review.

Any person aggrieved by the decision of the Board may seek review of such decision in the District of Columbia Court of Appeals in accordance with the District of Columbia Administrative Procedure Act [D.C. Code, secs. 1-1501 to 1-1510]. (As amended Dec. 7, 1974, Pub. L. 93-515, title III, § 301(2), 88 Stat. 1617.)

of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

§ 46-314. Method of paying administrative expenses.SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

§ 46-315. District Unemployment Compensation Board.SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

§ 46-316. Reciprocal arrangements.NOTES TO DECISIONS*Interstate claims cases

Where claimant, by combining his military service with his later private employment in Ohio, claims to be qualified for increased benefits under the Interstate Arrangement for Combining Employment and Wages, his military service constitutes "employment" under interstate arrangement entered into by District of Columbia, and since the District is the paying state and Ohio is the transferring state, Ohio law governs whether claimant's employment is subject to transfer to the District so as to qualify him for increased benefits. Benjamin Rose Institute v. District Unemployment Compensation Board (D.C. App. 1975, 338 A.2d 104).

§ 46-317. Records and reports.SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

§ 46-326. Commissioner of the District of Columbia.SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

§ 46-327. Pregnancy.

There shall be no presumption that a person who is pregnant is physically unable to work, even when pregnancy was an issue in the separation from employment. (Aug. 28, 1935, ch. 794, § 28, as added Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-34, § 3, 22 DCR 2553.)

EFFECTIVE DATE

Section 6 of act Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-34, provided: "This act [enacting § 46-327 and amending § 46-310] shall be effective at the end of the period provided for Congressional review by section 602(c) of the District of Columbia Self-Government and Governmental Reorganization Act [§ 1-147(c)]."

FINDINGS

Section 2 of act Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-34, provided: "The Council of the District of Columbia finds that persons who are or who have recently been pregnant are subject to special and unfair disadvantages in obtaining unemployment compensation benefits."

REPEAL OF INCONSISTENT RULES AND REGULATIONS

Section 5 of act Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-34, provided: "The District of Columbia Rules and Regulations, Title 18, section 300.4, and any other regulations, policies, and practices of the District Unemployment Compensation Board not consistent with this act, are repealed or prohibited."

PRIOR LAW

A prior section based on Leg. Assem., Aug. 22, 1871, ch. 65, p. 78, provided: "The fiscal year of the District of Columbia shall commence on the first day of July in each and every year until otherwise provided by law."

TRANSITION TO NEW FISCAL YEAR

Section 502 of Act July 12, 1974, Pub. L. 93-344, title V, 88 Stat. 321, provided:

"(a) As soon as practicable, the President shall prepare and submit to the Congress—

"(1) after consultation with the Committees on Appropriations of the House of Representatives and the Senate, budget estimates for the United States Government for the period commencing July 1, 1976, and ending on September 30, 1976, in such form and detail as he may determine; and

"(2) proposed legislation he considers appropriate with respect to changes in law necessary to provide authorizations of appropriations for that period.

"(b) The Director of the Office of Management and Budget shall provide by regulation, order, or otherwise for the orderly transition by all departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the United States Government and the government of the District of Columbia from the use of the fiscal year in effect on the date of enactment of this Act to the use of the new fiscal year prescribed by section 237(a) (2) of the Revised Statutes [31 U.S.C. 1020 (a) (2)]. The Director shall prepare and submit to the Congress such additional proposed legislation as he considers necessary to accomplish this objective.

"(c) The Director of the Office of Management and Budget and the Director of the Congressional Budget Office jointly shall conduct a study of the feasibility and advisability of submitting the Budget or portions thereof, and enacting new budget authority or portions thereof, for a fiscal year during the regular session of the Congress which begins in the year preceding the year in which such fiscal year begins. The Director of the Office of Management and Budget and the Director of the Congressional Budget Office each shall submit a report of the results of the study conducted by them, together with his own conclusions and recommendations, to the Congress not later than 2 years after the effective date of this subsection."

§ 47-106. Apportionment of appropriations for contingent and miscellaneous expenses.

(a) There is established for the District of Columbia the Office of District of Columbia Auditor who shall be appointed by the Chairman, subject to the approval of a majority of the Council. The District of Columbia Auditor shall serve for a term of six years and shall be paid at a rate of compensation as may be established from time to time by the Council.

(b) The District of Columbia Auditor shall each year conduct a thorough audit of the accounts and operations of the government of the District in accordance with such principles and procedures and under such rules and regulations as he may prescribe. In the determination of the auditing procedures to be followed and the extent of the examination of vouchers and other documents and records, the District of Columbia Auditor shall give due regard to generally accepted principles of auditing including the effectiveness of the accounting organizations and systems, internal audit and control, and related administrative practices.

(c) The District of Columbia Auditor shall have access to all books, accounts, records, reports, findings and all other papers, things, or property belonging to or in use by any department, agency, or other instrumentality of the District government and necessary to facilitate the audit.

(d) The District of Columbia Auditor shall submit his audit reports to the Congress, the Mayor, and the Council. Such reports shall set forth the scope of the audits conducted by him and shall include such comments and information as the District of Columbia Auditor may deem necessary to keep the Congress, the Mayor, and the Council informed of the operations to which the reports relate, together with such recommendations with respect thereto as he may deem advisable.

(e) The Council shall make such report, together with such other material as it deems pertinent thereto, available for public inspection.

(f) The Mayor shall state in writing to the Council, within an appropriate time, what action he has taken to effectuate the recommendations made by the District of Columbia Auditor in his reports. (Dec. 24, 1973, Pub. L. 93-198, title IV, § 455, 87 Stat. 803.)

This section is referred to in section 47-120-1.

§ 47-120-1. Annual audit of accounts and operations of District government by General Accounting Office—Accessibility of records—Reports—Compliance with audit recommendations.

(a) In addition to the audit carried out under section 47-120, the accounts and operations of the District government shall be audited annually by the General Accounting Office in accordance with such principles and procedures, and in such detail, and under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the Comptroller General of the United States. In the determination of the auditing procedures to be followed and the extent of the examination of vouchers and other documents, the Comptroller General shall give due regard to generally accepted principles of auditing, including consideration of the effectiveness of the accounting organizations and systems, internal audit and control, and related administrative practices. The representatives of the General Accounting Office shall have access to all books, accounts, records, reports, files, and all other papers, things, or property belonging to or in use by the District and necessary to facilitate the audit, and such representatives shall be afforded full facilities for auditing the accounts and operations of the District government.

(b) (1) The Comptroller General shall submit his audit reports to the Congress, the Mayor, and the Council. The reports shall set forth the scope of the audits and shall include such comments and information as the Comptroller General may deem necessary to keep the Congress, the Mayor, and the Council informed of the operations to which the reports relate, together with such recommendations with respect thereto as the Comptroller General may deem advisable.

(2) After the Mayor has had an opportunity to be heard, the Council may make such report, together with such other material as it deems pertinent thereto, available for public inspection.

(3) The Mayor, within ninety days after receipt of the audit from the Comptroller General, shall state in writing to the Council, with a copy to the Congress, what has been done to comply with the recommendations made by the Comptroller General in the report. § 47-221. Submission of annual budget.

(a) At such time as the Council may direct, the Mayor shall prepare and submit to the Council each year, and make available to the public, an annual budget for the District of Columbia government which shall include—

(1) the budget for the forthcoming fiscal year in such detail as the Mayor determines necessary to reflect the actual financial condition of the District government for such fiscal year, and specify the agencies and purposes for which funds are being requested; and which shall be prepared on the assumption that proposed expenditures resulting from financial transactions undertaken on either an obligation or cash-outlay basis, for such fiscal year shall not exceed estimated resources from existing sources and proposed resources;

(2) an annual budget message which shall include supporting financial and statistical information on the budget for the forthcoming fiscal year and information on the approved budgets and expenditures for the immediately preceding three fiscal years;

(3) a multiyear plan for all agencies of the District government as required under section 47-222;

(4) a multiyear capital improvements plan for all agencies of the District government as required under section 47-223;

(5) a program performance report comparing actual performance of as many programs as is practicable for the last completed fiscal year against proposed goals for such programs for such year, and, in addition, presenting as many qualitative or quantitative measures of program effectiveness as possible (including results of statistical sampling or other special analyses), and indicating the status of efforts to comply with the reports of the District of Columbia Auditor and the Comptroller General of the United States;

(6) an issue analysis statement consisting of a reasonable number of issues, identified by the Council in its action on the budget in the preceding fiscal year, having significant revenue or budgetary implications, and other similar issues selected by the Mayor, which shall consider the cost and benefits of alternatives and the rationale behind action recommended or adopted; and

(7) a summary of the budget for the forthcoming fiscal year designed for distribution to the general public.

(b) The budget prepared and submitted by the Mayor shall include, but not be limited to, recommended expenditures at a reasonable level for the forthcoming fiscal year for the Council, the District of Columbia Auditor, the District of Columbia Board of Elections and Ethics, the District of Columbia Judicial Nomination Commission, the Zoning Commission of the District of Columbia, the Public Service Commission, the Armory Board, and the Commission on Judicial Disabilities and Tenure.

(c) The Mayor from time to time may prepare and submit to the Council such proposed supplemental or deficiency budget recommendations as in his judgment are necessary on account of laws enacted after transmission of the budget or are otherwise in the public interest. The Mayor shall submit with such proposals a statement of justifications, including reasons for their omission from the annual budget. Whenever such proposed supplemental or deficiency budget recommendations are in an amount which would result in expenditures in excess of estimated resources, the Mayor shall make such recommendations as are necessary to increase resources to meet such increased expenditures. (Dec. 24, 1973, Pub. L. 93-198, title IV, § 442, 87 Stat. 798; Aug. 14, 1974, Pub. L. 93-376, title III, § 306(a), 88 Stat. 458.)

AMENDMENT

1974—Act Aug. 14, 1974, Pub. L. 93-376, amended subsec. (b) by substituting "Board of Elections and Ethics" for "Board of Elections".

EFFECTIVE DATE

Section 771 of Act Dec. 24, 1973, Pub. L. 93-198, as amended, set out as a note under § 1-121, provided in part that this chapter is effective on Jan. 2, 1975, if a majority of the registered qualified electors in the District of Columbia voting on the charter issue in the charter referendum accepted the charter set out in title IV of such Act. The charter was approved by the voters on May 7, 1974.

EFFECTIVE DATE OF 1974 AMENDMENT

Amendment effective on and after Aug. 14, 1974, see section 306(a) of Act Aug. 14, 1974, Pub. L. 93-376, set out as § 1-1156(a).

§ 47-222. Multiyear plan.

The Mayor shall prepare and include in the annual budget a multiyear plan for all agencies included in the District budget, for all sources of funding, and for such program categories as the Mayor identifies. Such plan shall be based on the actual experience of the immediately preceding three fiscal years, on the approved current fiscal year budget, and on estimates for at least the four succeeding fiscal years. The plan shall include, but not be limited to, provisions identifying—

(1) future cost implications of maintaining programs at currently authorized levels, including anticipated changes in wage, salary, and benefit levels;

(2) future cost implications of all capital projects for which funds have already been authorized, including identification of the amount of already appropriated but unexpended capital project funds;

(3) future cost implications of new, improved, or expanded programs and capital project commitments proposed for each of the succeeding four fiscal years;

(4) the effects of current and proposed capital projects on future operating budget requirements;

(5) revenues and funds likely to be available from existing revenue sources at current rates or levels;

(6) the specific revenue and tax measures recommended for the forthcoming fiscal year and for the next following fiscal year necessary to balance revenues and expenditures;

(7) the actuarial status and anticipated costs and revenues of retirement systems covering District employees; and

(8) total debt service payments in each fiscal year in which debt service payments must be made for all bonds which have been or will be issued, and all loans from the United States Treasury which have been or will be received, to finance the total cost on a full funding basis of all projects listed in the capital improvements plan prepared under section 47-223; and for each such fiscal year, the percentage relationship of the total debt service payments (with payments for issued and proposed bonds and loans from the United States Treasury, received or proposed, separately identified) to the bonding limitation for the current and forthcoming fiscal year as specified in section 47-228(b).

§ 47-223. Multiyear capital improvements plan.

The Mayor shall prepare and include in the annual budget a multiyear capital improvements plan for all agencies of the District which shall be based upon the approved current fiscal year budget and shall include—

(1) the status, estimated period of usefulness, and total cost of each capital project on a full funding basis for which any appropriation is requested or any expenditure will be made in the forthcoming fiscal year and at least four fiscal years thereafter, including an explanation of change in total cost in excess of 5 per centum for any capital project included in the plan of the previous fiscal year;

(2) an analysis of the plan, including its relationship to other programs, proposals, or elements developed by the Mayor as the central planning agency for the District pursuant to section 1-163;

(3) identification of the years and amounts in which bonds would have to be issued, loans made, and costs actually incurred on each capital project identified; and

(4) appropriate maps or other graphics.

§ 47-224. Adoption of budget by Council—Enactment of appropriations by Congress.

The Council, within fifty calendar days after receipt of the budget proposal from the Mayor, and after public hearing, shall by act adopt the annual budget for the District of Columbia government. Any supplements thereto shall also be adopted by act by the Council after public hearing. Such budget so adopted shall be submitted by the Mayor to the President for transmission by him to the Congress. No amount may be obligated or expended by any officer or employee of the District of Columbia government unless such amount has been approved by Act of Congress, and then only according to such Act. Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, the Mayor shall not transmit any annual budget or amendments or supplements thereto, to the President of the United States until the completion of the budget procedures contained in this Act. This section is referred to in sections 1-144, section 445 of title 11 Appendix, 47-247.

§ 47-225. Consistency of budget, accounting, and personnel systems.

The Mayor shall implement appropriate procedures to insure that budget, accounting, and personnel control systems and structures are synchronized for budgeting and control purposes on a continuing basis. No employee shall be hired on a full-time or part-time basis unless such position is authorized by Act of Congress. Employees shall be assigned in accordance with the program, organization, and fund categories specified in the Act of Congress authorizing such position. Hiring of temporary employees and temporary employee transfers among programs shall be consistent with applicable Acts of Congress and reprogramming procedures to insure that costs are accurately associated with programs and sources of funding. § 47-226. Financial duties of Mayor.

Subject to the limitations in section 47-228, the Mayor shall have charge of the administration of the financial affairs of the District and to that end he shall—

(1) supervise and be responsible for all financial transactions to insure adequate control of revenues and resources and to insure that appropriations are not exceeded;

(2) maintain systems of accounting and internal control designed to provide—

(A) full disclosure of the financial results of the District government's activities,

(B) adequate financial information needed by the District government for management purposes,

(C) effective control over and accountability for all funds, property, and other assets,

(D) reliable accounting results to serve as the basis for preparing and supporting agency budget requests and controlling the execution of the budget;

(3) submit to the Council a financial statement in any detail and at such times as the Council may specify;

(4) submit to the Council, by November 1 of each fiscal year, a complete financial statement and report for the preceding fiscal year;

(5) supervise and be responsible for the assessment of all property subject to assessment and special assessments within the corporate limits of the District for taxation, prepare tax maps, and give such notice of taxes and special assessments, as may be required by law;

(6) supervise and be responsible for the levying and collection of all taxes, special assessments, license fees, and other revenues of the District, as required by law, and receive all moneys receivable by the District from the Federal Government or from any court, agency, or instrumentality of the District;

(7) have custody of all public funds belonging to or under the control of the District, or any agency of the District government, and deposit all funds coming into his hands, in such depositories as may be designated and under such terms and conditions as may be prescribed by act of the Council;

(8) have custody of all investments and invested funds of the District government, or in possession of such government in a fiduciary capacity, and have the safekeeping of all bonds and notes of the District and the receipt and delivery of District bonds and notes for transfer, registration or exchange; and

(9) apportion the total of all appropriations and funds made available during the fiscal year for obligation so as to prevent obligation or expenditure thereof in a manner which would indicate a necessity for deficiency or supplemental appropriations for such fiscal year, and with respect to all appropriations or funds not limited to a definite period, and all authorizations to create obligations by contract in advance of appropriations, apportion the total of such appropriations or funds or authorizations so as to achieve the most effective and economical use thereof.

§ 47-227. Accounting supervision and control.

The Mayor shall—

(a) prescribe the forms of receipts, vouchers, bills and claims to be used by all the agencies, offices, and instrumentalities of the District government;

(b) examine and approve all contracts, orders, and other documents by which the District government incurs financial obligations, having previously ascertained that money has been appropriated and allotted and will be available when the obligations shall become due and payable;

(c) audit and approve before payment all bills, invoices, payrolls, and other evidences of claims, demands, or charges against the District government and with the advice of the legal officials of the District determine the regularity, legality, and correctness of such claims, demands, or charges; and

(d) perform internal audits of accounts and operations and agency records of the District government, including the examination of any accounts or records of financial transactions, giving due consideration to the effectiveness of accounting systems, internal control, and related administrative practices of the respective agencies.

(Dec. 24, 1973, Pub. L. 93-198, title IV, § 449, 87 Stat. 802.)

EFFECTIVE DATE

§ 47-228. Budget process—Limitations on borrowing and spending.

(a) Nothing in this Act shall be construed as making any change in existing law, regulation, or basic procedure and practice relating to the respective roles of the Congress, the President, the Federal Office of Management and Budget, and the Comptroller General of the United States in the preparation, review, submission, examination, authorization, and appropriation of the total budget of the District of Columbia government.

(b) (1) No general obligation bonds (other than bonds to refund outstanding indebtedness) or Treasury capital project loans shall be issued during any fiscal year in an amount which would cause the amount of principal and interest required to be paid both serially and into a sinking fund in any fiscal year on the aggregate amounts of all outstanding general obligation bonds and such Treasury loans, to exceed 14 per centum of the District revenues (less court fees, any fees or revenues directed to servicing revenue bonds, retirement contributions, revenues from retirement systems, and revenues derived from such Treasury loans and the sale of general obligation or revenue bonds) which the Mayor estimates, and the District of Columbia Auditor certifies, will be credited to the District during the fiscal year in which the bonds will be issued. Treasury capital project loans include all borrowings from the United States Treasury, except those funds advanced to the District by the Secretary of the Treasury under the provisions of section 47-2501.

(2) Obligations incurred pursuant to the authority contained in subchapter II of chapter 17 of title 2, and obligations incurred by the agencies transferred or established by sections 201 and 202, whether incurred before or after such transfer or establishment, shall not be included in determining the aggregate amount of all outstanding obligations subject to the limitation specified in the preceding subsection.

(3) The 14 per centum limitation specified in paragraph (1) shall be calculated in the following manner:

(A) Determine the dollar amount equivalent to 14 percent of the District revenues (less court fees, any fees or revenues directed to servicing revenue bonds, retirement contributions, revenues from retirement systems, and revenues derived from such Treasury loans and the sale of general obligation or revenue bonds) which the Mayor estimates, and the District of Columbia Auditor certifies, will be credited to the District during the fiscal year for which the bonds will be issued.

(B) Determine the actual total amount of principal and interest to be paid in each fiscal year for all outstanding general obligation bonds and such Treasury loans.

(C) Determine the amount of principal and interest to be paid during each fiscal year over the term of the proposed general obligation bond or such Treasury loan to be issued.

(D) If in any one fiscal year the sum arrived at by adding subparagraphs (B) and (C) exceeds the amount determined under subparagraph (A), then the proposed general obligation bond or such Treasury loan in subparagraph (C) cannot be issued.

(c) The Council shall not approve any budget which would result in expenditures being made by the District Government, during any fiscal year, in excess of all resources which the Mayor estimates will be available from all funds available to the District for such fiscal year. The budget shall identify any tax increases which shall be required in order to balance the budget as submitted. The Council shall be required to adopt such tax increases to the extent its budget is approved. For the purposes of this section, the Council shall use a Federal payment amount not to exceed the amount authorized by Congress. In determining whether any such budget would result in expenditures so being made in excess of such resources, amounts included in the budget estimates of the District of Columbia courts in excess of the recommendations of the Council shall not be applicable.

(d) The Mayor shall not forward to the President for submission to Congress a budget which is not balanced according to the provision of subsection (c).

(e) Nothing in this Act shall be construed as affecting the applicability to the District government of the provisions of section 3679 of the Revised Statutes of the United States (31 U.S.C. 665), the so-called Anti-Deficiency Act. (Dec. 24, 1973, Pub. L. 93-198, title VI, § 603, 87 Stat. 814.)

SUBCHAPTER II.—BORROWING

§ 47-241. Authority to issue and redeem general obligation bonds for capital projects.

(a) Subject to the limitations in section 47-228(b), the District may incur indebtedness by issuing general obligation bonds to refund indebtedness of the District at any time outstanding and to provide for the payment of the cost of acquiring or undertaking its various capital projects. Such bonds shall bear interest, payable annually or semi-annually, at such rate and at such maturities as the Mayor, subject to the provisions of section 47-242, may from time to time determine to be necessary to make such bonds marketable.

(b) The District may reserve the right to redeem any or all of its obligations before maturity in such manner and at such price as may be fixed by the Mayor prior to the issuance of such obligations.

INTERIM LOAN AUTHORITY

Section 723 of title VII of Act Dec. 24, 1973, Pub. L. 93-198, 87 Stat. 821, provided:

"(a) The Mayor is authorized to accept loans for the District from the Treasury of the United States, and the Secretary is authorized to lend to the Mayor, such sums as the Mayor may determine are required to complete capital projects for which construction and construction services funds have been authorized or appropriated, as the case may be, by Congress prior to the effective date of title IV [Jan. 2, 1975]. In addition, such loans may include funds to pay the District's share of the cost of the adopted regional system specified in the National Capital Transportation Act of 1969 [§ 1-1441 et seq.].

"(b) Loans advanced pursuant to this section during any six-month period shall be at a rate of interest determined by the Secretary as of the beginning of such period, which, in his judgment, would reflect the cost of money to the Treasury for borrowing at a maturity approximately equal to the period of time the loan is outstanding.

"(c) Subject to the limitations contained in section 603(b) [§ 47-228(b)], there are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to make loans under this section."

REFUNDING BOND AUTHORIZATION

Act Dec. 20, 1975, D.C. Law 1-41, 22 DCR 3307, provided: That this act may be cited as the "Refunding Bond Authorization Act."

Sec. 2. The issuance of general obligation bonds of the District of Columbia in the maximum principal amount of $50,000,000 (herein called the "Bonds"), is hereby authorized in accordance with the provisions of this act and Title IV of the District of Columbia Self-Government and Governmental Reorganization Act (Public Law 93-198, herein called the "District Charter") for the purpose of refunding the outstanding principal amount of loans made to the General Fund of the District of Columbia from the United States Treasury, as follows:

Date of loan	Outstanding principal Amount to be refunded
March 31, 1975	$ 6,000,000
May 30, 1975	$44,000,000

Sec. 3. The following determinations are hereby made:

(a) The maximum rate of interest to be paid on any maturity of the bonds shall be eight per centum (8%) per annum;

(b) The maximum allowable maturity for the Bonds, computed from the date of the Bonds, shall be thirty years; and

(c) The maximum debt service payable in any year on the Bonds shall be $5,200,000.

Sec. 4. The Bonds shall be executed in the name of the District of Columbia by the facsimile signature of the Mayor and the Chairman of the Council of the District of Columbia and by the manual signature of the Director of the Office of Budget and Management Systems, or in the absence or inability of such Director to act, by the manual signature of a Deputy Director of said office, and shall be sealed with the corporate seal of the District of Columbia or a facsimile thereof, and the coupons appertaining to Bonds issued in bearer coupon form shall bear the facsimile signature of said Mayor and said Chairman.

Sec. 5. The full faith and credit of the District of Columbia are hereby irrevocably pledged for the payment of the principal of and interest on the Bonds as the same become due and payable. A special tax upon all real property subject to taxation in the District of Columbia is hereby authorized and shall be levied annually, without limitation as to rate or amount, in an amount which, together with other revenues of the District of Columbia available and applicable for said purposes, will be sufficient to pay the principal of and interest on the Bonds and the premium, if any, upon the redemption thereof, as the same respectively become due and payable, which tax shall be levied and collected at the same time and in the same manner as other District taxes are levied and collected, and when collected, shall be set aside, together with such other revenues, in the sinking fund required to be established by the Mayor pursuant to section 481 of the District-Charter [§ 47-251], and irrevocably dedicated to the payment of such principal, interest and premium.

Sec. 6. In accordance with the provisions of section 465 of the District Charter [§ 47-245], the Bonds may be issued in one or more series, but no issue of the Bonds shall be advertised for sale unless the Mayor shall have filed with the Secretary of the Council of the District of Columbia, not less than two days prior to the first publication of the notice of such sale, excluding Saturdays, Sundays and holidays: (i) a copy of his certificate executed pursuant to such section, determining the amount of such issue, the maturities and the other terms and details of such issue, (ii) the form of such notice of sale, and (iii) the form of the official statement or other similar brochure to be distributed in relation to such issued, Provided, however, that subsequent to such filing, the Mayor, without any further filing, may make such minor changes, insertions, additions and modifications in such official statement or brochure as he shall deem appropriate.

Sec. 7. The Bonds and the interest thereon shall be payable at such place or places within or without the District of Columbia as the Council of the District of Columbia may by resolution determine.

Sec. 8. The Mayor may issue temporary Bonds pending the printing or engraving and delivery in definitive form of the Bonds after public sale. Such temporary Bonds shall be of substantially the same form and tenor as the definitive Bonds, but with such omissions, insertions, and variations as may be appropriate to temporary Bonds. Such temporary Bonds shall provide that they are exchangeable for definitive Bonds when such definitive Bonds are ready for delivery, and if such definitive Bonds are coupon Bonds, the temporary Bonds need not have coupons attached, but may provide for the payment of interest upon their presentation for notation of such payment thereon. Such temporary Bonds may be issued in such denominations as the purchaser may request.

Sec. 9. The Mayor may contract from time to time for a period or periods not exceeding five years each, with any bank or trust company located within or without the District of Columbia for the purpose of having such bank or trust company act in connection with the Bonds, as the Registrar for the District of Columbia and for related services, and for the payment by the District of reasonable compensation for the services to be performed pursuant to such contract. Any such contract shall provide that it may be terminated by the District of Columbia at any time.

Sec. 10. (a) In case any definitive or temporary Bond shall become mutilated, or be destroyed, lost, or stolen, the Mayor in his discretion may cause to be prepared and executed and delivered a new Bond (with coupons corresponding to the coupons, if any, appertaining to the mutilated, destroyed, lost or stolen Bond) in exchange for the mutilated Bond and its coupons (if any), or in lieu of and substitution for the Bond and its coupons (if any) so destroyed, lost or stolen. In case any coupon or coupons appertaining to any temporary or definitive Bond shall become mutilated or be destroyed, lost, or stolen, the Mayor in his discretion may cause to be prepared and authenticated and delivered a new Bond (with coupons corresponding to the coupons appertaining to such temporary or definitive Bond) in exchange and substitution for such definitive or temporary Bond and any coupons appertaining thereto which shall not be destroyed, lost or stolen and in lieu of and substitution for the coupons appertaining thereto which shall be mutilated, destroyed, lost or stolen. In every case of exchange or substitution, the applicant shall furnish to the District such security or indemnity as may be required by the Mayor to save the District harmless from all risks, however remote, and the applicant shall also furnish to the District evidence to the satisfaction of the Mayor of the mutilation, destruction, loss or theft of the applicant's Bond (or coupon or coupons) and of the ownership thereof. Upon the issue of any Bond upon such exchange or substitution, the Mayor may require the payment of a sum sufficient to cover any tax or other governmental charge that may be imposed in relation thereto and any other expenses, including counsel fees, of the District. In case any Bond or any coupon which has matured or is about to mature shall become mutilated or be destroyed, lost or stolen, the Mayor may, instead of issuing a Bond in exchange or substitution therefor, authorize the payment of the same (without surrender thereof except in the case of a mutilated Bond or coupon) if the applicant for such payment shall furnish to the District such security or indemnity as the Mayor may require to save the District harmless, and evidence to the satisfaction of the Mayor of the mutilation, destruction, loss or theft of such Bond or coupon and of the ownership thereof.

(b) Every Bond issued pursuant to the provisions of this act in exchange or substitution for any Bond which (or coupon appertaining to which) is destroyed, lost, or stolen, shall constitute an additional contractual obligation of the District, whether or not the destroyed, lost, or stolen Bond or coupon or coupons shall be found at any time, or be enforceable by anyone, and shall be entitled to all benefits equally and proportionately with any and all other Bonds and coupons of the same issue.

Sec. 11. This act shall become law and become effective in accordance with the provisions of sections 404(e) and 602(c) of the District Charter [§§ 1-144(e) and 1-147(c)].

§ 47-242. Contents of borrowing legislation.

The Council may by act authorize the issuance of general obligation bonds for the purposes specified in section 47-241. Such an act shall contain, at least, provisions—

- (1) briefly describing each project to be financed by the act;
- (2) identifying the Act authorizing each such project;
- (3) setting forth the maximum amount of the principal of the indebtedness which may be incurred for each such project;
- (4) setting forth the maximum rate of interest to be paid on such indebtedness;
- (5) setting forth the maximum allowable maturity for the issue and the maximum debt service payable in any year; and
- (6) setting forth, in the event that the Council determines in its discretion, to submit the question of issuing such bonds to a vote of the qualified voters of the District, the manner of holding such election, the manner of voting for or against the incurring of such indebtedness, and the form of ballot to be used at such election.

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in sections 47-245, 47-251.

§ 47-245. Acts for issuance of general obligation bonds.

At the end of the twenty-day period specified in section 47-244, the Mayor may issue general obligation bonds as authorized pursuant to the provisions of sections 47-241 to 47-245. An issue of general obligation bonds is hereby defined to be all or any part of an aggregate principal amount of bonds authorized pursuant to such sections, but no indebtedness shall be deemed to have been incurred within the meaning of this Act until such bonds have been sold, delivered, and paid for, and then only to the extent of the principal amount of such bonds so sold and delivered. The bonds of each issue shall be payable in annual installments beginning not more than three years after the date of such bonds and ending not more than thirty years from such date. The amount of said issues to be payable in each year shall be so fixed that when the annual interest is added to the principal amount payable in each year, the total amount payable either serially or to a sinking fund shall be substantially equal. It shall be an immaterial variance if the difference between the largest and smallest amounts of principal and interest so payable during each fiscal year during the term of the general obligation bonds does not exceed 3 per centum of the total authorized amount of such series. Such bonds and coupons may be executed by the facsimile signatures of the officer designated by the act authorizing such bonds, to sign the bonds, within the exception that at least one signature shall be manual. Such bonds may be issued in coupon form in the denomination of $1,000, or $1,000 and $5,000, registerable as to principal only or as to both principal and interest, and if registered as to both principal and interest may be issuable in denominations of multiples of $1,000. Such bonds and the interest thereon may be payable at such place or places within or without the District as the Council may determine. (Dec. 24, 1973, Pub. L. 93-198, title IV, § 465, 87 Stat. 805; Aug. 29, 1974, Pub. L. 93-395, § 1(5), 88 Stat. 793.)

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in section 47-251.

§ 47-246. Public sale.

All general obligation bonds issued under this part shall be sold at public sale upon sealed proposals after publication of a notice of such sale at least once not less than ten days prior to the date fixed for sale in a daily newspaper carrying municipal bond notices and devoted primarily to financial news or to the subject of State and municipal bonds published in the city of New York, New York, and in one or more newspapers of general circulation published in the District. Such notice shall state, among other things, that no proposal shall be considered unless there is deposited with the District as a downpayment a certified check or cashier's check for an amount equal to at least 2 per centum of the par amount of general obligation bonds bid for, and the Mayor shall reserve the right to reject any and all bids. (Dec. 24, 1973, Pub. L. 93-198, title IV, § 466, 87 Stat. 806; Aug. 29, 1974, Pub. L. 93-395, § 1(6), 88 Stat. 793.)

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in section 47-251.

§ 47-251. Payment of bonds and notes—Special tax.

(a) The act of the Council authorizing the issuance of general obligation bonds pursuant to this title, shall, where necessary, provide for the levy annually of a special tax or charge without limitation as to rate or amount in amounts which, together with other revenues of the District available and applicable for said purposes, will be sufficient to pay the principal of and interest on such bonds and the premium, if any, upon the redemption thereof, as the same respectively become due and payable, which tax shall be levied and collected at the same time and in the same manner as other District taxes are levied and collected, and when collected shall be set aside in a sinking fund and irrevocably dedicated to the payment of such principal, interest, and premium.

(b) The full faith and credit of the District shall be and is hereby pledged for the payment of the principal of and the interest on all general obligation bonds and notes of the District hereafter issued pursuant to sections 47-241 to 47-251 whether or not such pledge be stated in such bonds or notes or in the act authorizing the issuance thereof.

(c) (1) As soon as practicable following the beginning of each fiscal year, the Mayor shall review the amounts of District revenues which have been set aside and deposited in a sinking fund as provided in subsection (a). Such review shall be carried out with a view to determining whether the amounts so set aside and deposited are sufficient to pay the principal of and interest on general obligation bonds issued pursuant to this title, and the premium (if any) upon the redemption thereof, as the same respectively become due and payable. To the extent that the Mayor determines that sufficient District revenues have not been so set aside and deposited, the Federal payment made for the fiscal year within which such review is conducted shall be first utilized to make up any deficit in such sinking fund.

(2) The Comptroller General of the United States shall make annual audits of the amounts set aside and deposited in the sinking fund. (Dec. 24, 1973, Pub. L. 93-198, title IV, § 481, 87 Stat. 807.)

REFERENCE IN TEXT

"This title", referred to in subsecs. (a) and (c) (1), is title IV (consisting of sections 401 to 495) of the District of Columbia Self-Government and Governmental Reorganization Act, approved Dec. 24, 1973 (Pub. § 47-253. Legal investment.

Notwithstanding any restriction on the investment of funds by fiduciaries contained in any other law, all domestic insurance companies, domestic insurance associations, executors, administrators, guardians, trustees, and other fiduciaries within the District may legally invest any sinking funds, moneys, trust funds, or other funds belonging to them or under or within their control in any bonds issued pursuant to this title, it being the purpose of this section to authorize the investment in such bonds or notes of all sinking, insurance, retirement, compensation, pension, and trust funds. National banking associations are authorized to deal in, underwrite, purchase and sell, for their own accounts or for the accounts of customers, bonds and notes issued by the Council to the same extent as national banking associations are authorized by paragraph seven of section 5136 of the Revised Statutes (12 U.S.C. 24), to deal in, underwrite, purchase and sell obligations of the United States, States, or political subdivisions thereof. All Federal building and loan associations and Federal savings and loan associations; and banks, trust companies, building and loan associations, and savings and loan associations, domiciled in the District, may purchase, sell, underwrite, and deal in, for their own account or for the account of others, all bonds or notes issued pursuant to this title. Nothing contained in this section shall be construed as relieving any person, firm, association, or corporation from any duty of exercising due and reasonable care in selecting securities for purchase or investment. (Dec. 24, 1973, Pub. L. 93-198, title IV, § 486, 87 Stat. 807.)

§ 47-254. Revenue bonds and other obligations.

(a) The Council may by act issue revenue bonds, notes, or other obligations (including refunding bonds, notes, or other obligations) to borrow money to finance or assist in the financing of undertakings in the areas of housing, health facilities, transit and utility facilities, recreational facilities, college and university facilities, and industrial and commercial development. Such bonds, notes, or other obligations shall be fully negotiable and payable, as to both principal and interest, solely from and secured solely by a pledge of the revenues realized from the property, facilities, developments, and improvements whose financing is undertaken by the issuance of such bonds, notes, or other obligations, including existing facilities to which such new facilities and improvements are related, which financing may be effected through loans made directly or indirectly (including the purchase of mortgages, in those cases described in subsection (b) of this section, notes, or other securities) to any public, quasi-public, or private corporation, partnership, association, person, or other legal entity.

(b) Except in the case of housing, recreation, commercial and industrial development, the property, facilities, developments, and improvements being financed may not be mortgaged as additional security for bonds, notes, or other obligations, but in no event shall any property owned by the District of Columbia or the United States be mortgaged for the purpose of this section.

(c) Any and all such bonds, notes, or other obligations shall not be general obligations of the District and shall not be a pledge of or involve the faith and credit or the taxing power of the District, shall not constitute a debt of the District, and shall not constitute lending of the public credit for private undertakings as contained in section 1-147(a) (2).

(d) Any and all such bonds, notes, or other obligations shall be issued pursuant to an act of the Council without the necessity of submitting the question of such issuance to the registered qualified electors of the District for approval or disapproval.

(e) Any such act may contain provisions—

(1) briefly describing the purpose for which such bond, note, or other obligation is to be issued;

(2) identifying the Act authorizing such purpose;

(3) prescribing the form, terms, provisions, manner or method of issuing and selling (including negotiated as well as competitive bid sale), and the time of issuance, of such bonds, notes, or other obligations; and

(4) prescribing any and all other details with respect to any such bonds, notes, or other obligations and the issuance and sale thereof.

The act may authorize and empower the Mayor to do any and all things necessary, proper, or expedient in connection with the issuance and sale of such notes, bonds, or other obligations authorized to be issued under the provisions of this section. - (5) Comparability of tax effort between the District of Columbia and surrounding jurisdictions in the metropolitan area and cities of comparable size.

(Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407, title IV, § 402, 88 Stat. 1051.)

EFFECTIVE DATE

Section 478 of Act Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407, title IV, 88 Stat. 1065, provided: "Except as specifically provided in this title [for classifications of title IV, consisting of secs. 401 to 478, see Tables], the provisions of this title shall take effect on the date of enactment of this title, except that Part 1 [§§ 47-621, 47-622] and subparts A through G of Part 2 [§§ 47-631 to 47-658] shall apply beginning with the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1975."

SHORT TITLE

Section 401 of Act Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407, title IV, provided: "This title [enacting this chapter, sections 47-504, 47-801-1, and 47-1567g, and provisions set out in notes under this section and sections 47-504 and 47-632; amending sections 47-801a, 47-2405, and 47-2601; and repealing sections 47-301, 47-501a, 47-602 to 47-605, 47-701 to 47-709, and 47-713] may be cited as the 'District of Columbia Real Property Tax Revision Act of 1974.'"

POWERS OF COMMISSIONER AND COUNCIL; DELEGATION OF FUNCTIONS

Section 475 of Act Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407, title IV, 88 Stat. 1065, provided: "Except as specifically provided in this title, nothing in this title [for classifications of title IV, consisting of secs. 401 to 478, see Tables] or any amendments made by this Act, shall be construed so as to affect the authority vested in the Commissioner of the District of Columbia or the authority vested in the District of Columbia Council by Reorganization Plan Numbered 3 of 1967. The performance of any function vested by this title in the Commissioner of the District of Columbia or in any office or agency under his jurisdiction and control, or in the District of Columbia Council, may be delegated by the Commissioner or by the Council, as the case may be, in accordance with the provisions of such plan."

Section 501 of Act Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407, title V, 88 Stat. 1066, provided: "notwithstanding any other provision of law, or any rule of law, nothing in this Act [for classification of Act to the Code, see Tables] shall be construed as limiting the authority of the Council of the District of Columbia to enact any act, resolution, or regulation, after January 2, 1975, pursuant to the District of Columbia Self-Government and Governmental Reorganization Act with respect to any matter covered by this Act."

SAVINGS PROVISIONS

Section 476 of Act Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407, title IV, 88 Stat. 1065, provided: "(a) The repeal or amendment by this title [for classifications of title IV, consisting of secs. 401 to 478, see Tables] of any provision of law shall not affect any act done or any right accrued or accruing under such provision of law before the effective date of this title or any suit or proceeding had or commenced before the effective date of this title, but all such rights and liabilities under such law shall continue, and may be enforced in the same manner and to the same extent, as if such repeal or amendment had not been made.

"(b) All offenses committed, and all penalties incurred, prior to the effective date of this title, under any provision of law hereby repealed or amended, may be prosecuted and punished in the same manner and with the same effect as if this title had not been enacted."

§ 47-622. Definitions.

For the purposes of this chapter—

(1) The term "real property" means real estate identified by plat on the records of the District of Columbia Surveyor according to lot and square together with improvements thereon.

(2) The term "Commissioner" means the Commissioner of the District of Columbia established under Reorganization Plan Numbered 3 of 1967.

(3) The term "Council" means the District of Columbia Council established under Reorganization Plan Numbered 3 of 1967.

(4) The term "estimated market value" means 100 per centum of the most probable price at which a particular piece of real property, if exposed for sale in the open market with a reasonable time for the seller to find a purchaser, would be expected to transfer under prevailing market conditions between parties who have knowledge of the uses to which the property may be put, both seeking to maximize their gains and neither being in a position to take advantage of the exigencies of the other.

(5) The term "regulation", unless specifically identified as a regulation of the Commissioner, means a regulation of the Council enacted under section 406 of the Reorganization Plan Numbered 3 of 1967, and after January 2, 1975, such term means an act of the Council of the District of Columbia enacted under section 412 [D.C. Code § 1-146] (and related sections) of the District of Columbia Self-Government and Governmental Reorganization Act.

(6) The term "tax year" means—

(A) with respect to a real property tax rate proposed by the Mayor or established by the Council after January 1 but before June 30 of any calendar year, the next following fiscal year; and

(B) with respect to a real property tax rate proposed by the Mayor or established by the Council after June 30 in any calendar year, the fiscal year during which the rate was proposed or established.

(Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407, title IV, § 403, 88 Stat. 1051.)

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

SUBCHAPTER II.—AUTHORITY AND PROCEDURE TO ESTABLISH REAL PROPERTY TAX RATES

SUBPART A.—REAL PROPERTY TAX RATE

§ 47-631. Tax on real property.

Notwithstanding the provisions of section 47-501, there is hereby levied for each fiscal year a tax on the real property in the District of Columbia at a rate determined according to the provisions of this chapter. Unless otherwise provided by law, all revenues received from such tax shall be deposited, from time to time, in the Treasury of the United States, to the credit of the District of Columbia. (Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407, title IV, § 411, 88 Stat. 1052.)

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in section 47-633.

§ 47-632. Council to establish tax rate—Public hearings.

The Council, after public hearing, shall establish each year, within thirty days after receipt of the Commissioner's recommendation under section 47-633, a rate of taxation which, except as provided in section 47-651, shall be applied, during the tax year, to the assessed value of all real property subject to taxation. The Council may by resolution extend the time for any year for setting such rate of taxation, except that if the Council does make such an extension, it must establish such a rate for that tax year. If the Council fails to establish such a rate within such thirty days, and fails to extend the time for establishing such a rate, the rate calculated by the Commissioner, pursuant to section 47-633, shall be the rate for that tax year. (Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407, title IV, § 412, 88 Stat. 1052.)

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

PROPERTY TAX RATE FOR FISCAL YEAR 1975

Section 461 of Act Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407, 88 Stat. 1064, provided: "Notwithstanding any other provision of law the property tax rate for the District of Columbia for fiscal year 1975 shall be set by the Council at such an amount to yield at least $146 million in fiscal year 1975; except that such amount may be reduced by any amount raised by the Council pursuant to delegation of authority contained in section 471 of this Act [§ 47-504], or by any revenue obtained pursuant to any other provision of law, or by any amount raised by reprogramming or reallocation of the fiscal year 1975 budget."

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in section 47-633.

§ 47-633. Commissioner to recommend tax rate to Council.

(a) (1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), by July 15 of each year, the Commissioner shall calculate and submit to the Council a proposed real property tax rate for the tax year, and inform the Council of his certification of the assessment roll pursuant to section 47-646(g). The Commissioner may extend the period for submitting such recommendation.

(2) With respect to the real property tax rate for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1975, the Commissioner shall submit his recommendation to the Council within 30 days after September 3, 1974.

(b) At the time the Commissioner submits to the Council the proposed real property tax rate under subsection (a), he shall also submit the following:

(1) The total aggregate assessed value of taxable real property for the year preceding the tax year by major class or type of property.

(2) The estimated total aggregate assessed value of taxable real property for the tax year for which the property tax rate recommendation is being made, by major class or type of property, indicating separately for each class or type the estimated value attributable to new construction.

(3) The real property tax rate (rounded to the nearest penny) calculated to yield in the tax year the same amount of revenue (exclusive of the revenue attributable to new construction) as was raised by that tax at the rate applicable during the year preceding the tax year.

(c) The real property tax rate submitted by the Commissioner pursuant to subsection (b) (3) shall become the real property tax rate applicable during the tax year for which it is submitted unless the Council acts to set a different such rate pursuant to section 47-632.

(d) On or before February 1 of each year the Commissioner shall estimate as closely as possible the rate to be calculated in subsection (b) (3) and shall so inform the Council.

(e) The real property tax rate applicable in the District for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1975, calculated according to the provisions of sections 47-631, 47-632, and 47-633, and section 461, shall be applied to the assessment roll for 1975 determined according to provisions of law in effect prior to the effective date of this chapter. (Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407, title IV, § 413, 88 Stat. 1052; Jan. 3, 1975, Pub. L. 93-635, § 6(a) (1), (b), 88 Stat. 2176.)

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

"This chapter", referred to in subsec. (e), in the original was "this title", meaning title IV of Act Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407. Such title IV enacted this chapter, §§ 47-504, 47-801-1, 47-1567g, and provisions set out as notes under §§ 47-504, 47-621, 47-632; amended §§ 47-801a, 47-2405, 47-2601; and repealed §§ 47-301, 47-501a, 47-602 to 47-605, 47-701 to 47-709, 47-713. For the effective date, see note set out under § 47-621.

CODIFICATION

In subsec. (a) (2), "September 3, 1973" was substituted for "the date of enactment of this title."

AMENDMENT

1975—Act Jan. 3, 1975, Pub. L. 93-635, amended subsecs. (c) and (d) by striking out "subsection (a)" and inserting in lieu thereof "subsection (b) (3)"; and amended subsec. (e) by striking out "Act" and inserting in lieu thereof "chapter".

EFFECTIVE DATE OF 1975 AMENDMENTS

Section 6(a) (2) of Act Jan. 3, 1975, Pub. L. 93-635, provided: "The amendments [to subsecs. (c) and (d) of § 47-633] made by paragraph (1) shall take effect January 2, 1975."

Section 6(h) of such Act provided: "The amendments [to §§ 47-633(e), 47-641(a), (f), 47-642(b), 47-646(f), (1)] made by subsections (b), (c), (d), (e), (f), and (g) shall take effect as provided in section 478 of that Act [District of Columbia Real Property Tax Revision Act of 1974] as if the sections (as amended) amended by such subsections had been included in Public Law 93-407 on the date of its enactment."

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in sections 47-632, 47-634.

§ 47-634. Commissioner to submit information concerning tax exempt real property.

At the time the Commissioner submits to the Council the proposed real property tax rate under section 47-633, he shall also submit the following:

(1) The total aggregate assessed value of real property exempt from the real property tax levied in the District for the current fiscal year by major class or type of exempt status and the tax that would have been paid during such fiscal year had such property not been exempt.

(2) The estimated total aggregate assessed value of real property exempt from the real property tax levied in the District by major class or type of exempt status and the tax that would be paid during the fiscal year under the real property tax rate proposed by the Commissioner pursuant to section 47-633.

(Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407, title IV, § 414, 88 Stat. 1053.)

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

§ 47-635. Comparison of tax rates and burdens.

In establishing a real property tax rate the Council shall make a comparison of tax rates and burdens applicable to residential and nonresidential property in the District with those such rates applicable to such property in jurisdictions in the vicinity of the District. The comparison shall include other major taxes in addition to the tax on real property. Without in any way limiting the authority of the Council, it is the intention of Congress, that tax burdens in the District be reasonably comparable to those in the surrounding jurisdictions of the Washington metropolitan area. (Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407, title IV, § 415, 88 Stat. 1053.)

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

§ 47-636. Publication of tax comparisons.

The Commissioner shall, by June 30 of each year, compile and publish information regarding the relative amount of tax for all major taxes in the District compared with those in surrounding jurisdictions in the Washington metropolitan area and with those in other cities. The information shall include the rate of the property tax levied on residential and non-residential property, and the effect of major taxes levied on families of different income levels and on businesses. (Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407, title IV, § 416, 88 Stat. 1053.)

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

SUBPART B.—ASSESSMENT AND ADMINISTRATION

§ 47-641. Assessment of real property—Regulations.

(a) The assessed value of all real property shall be listed on the assessment roll for real property taxation purposes annually as provided in this subpart. The assessed value for all real property shall be the estimated market value of such property as of January 1 of the year preceding the tax year, as determined by the Commissioner. In determining estimated market value for various kinds of real property the Commissioner shall take into account any factor which might have a bearing on the market value of the real property including, but not limited to, sales information on similar types of real property, mortgage, or other financial considerations, reproduction cost less accrued depreciation because of age, condition, and other factors, income earning potential (if any), zoning, and government-imposed restrictions. Assessments shall be based upon the sources of information available to the Commissioner which may include actual view.

(b) All real property shall be assessed no less frequently than once every two years, and as soon as practicable such assessment shall be made annually. The Council may authorize and direct assessments to be made annually for some or all classes of real property, except that for fiscal year 1978, and for each fiscal year thereafter, all real property shall be assessed on an annual basis.

(c) The Council may adopt regulations concerning the assessment and reassessment of real property and matters relating thereto which shall be consistent with the provisions of this chapter and other applicable provisions of law.

(d) The Council may adopt regulations regarding information to be furnished the Commissioner by owners of real property. Such regulations shall provide, under penalty of law, that all such information with respect to income derived from investment on income-producing real property shall be handled in the same confidential manner as income tax returns and supporting data required to be submitted to the government of the District of Columbia under laws applicable in the District.

(e) The Commissioner shall submit to the Council, within forty-five days after September 3, 1974, proposed regulations to be adopted by the Council pursuant to subsection (c).

(f) Consistent with the provisions of this chapter and regulations of the Council, the Commissioner shall promulgate necessary regulations and administrative orders. If the Council shall not have adopted regulations concerning assessment pursuant to subsection (c) within ninety days after September 3, 1974, the Commissioner shall promulgate such regulations. (Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407, title IV, § 421, 88 Stat. 1053; Jan. 3, 1975, Pub. L. 93-635, § 6(c), (d), 88 Stat. 2176.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS UNDER PRIOR LAW

Parties in court suit

Where class of taxpayers sought to be represented by purported intervenors in suit brought on behalf of city commercial property owners seeking declaratory judgment that practice of assessing commercial property at higher percentage of market value than residential property violated former section 47-713 and the Fifth Amendment had economic interest in outcome of suit, and District of Columbia, which had agreed to set up single level of assessment and had not denied that its dual assessments violated that section and Fifth Amendment principles of equal protection, did not adequately represent such taxpayers, proposed intervenors should be allowed to intervene under Superior Court rule on behalf of all taxpayers other than commercial ones. Calvin-Humphrey et al. v. District of Columbia et al. (D.C. App. 1975, 340 A.2d 795).

§ 47-642. Separate valuation of land and improvements—Appointment of assessors.

(a) The Commissioner shall assess all real property, identifying separately the value of land and improvements thereon, and administer and collect the real property tax within the District. The Commissioner shall also notify owners of real property of assessments and of appeal procedures. In addition, he shall maintain adequate records relating to the administration of the real property tax in the District, and provide appropriate public information concerning such tax.

(b) The Commissioner shall appoint assessors competent to determine values of real property to carry out the provisions of this subpart and other relevant portions of this chapter. Each person so appointed shall take and subscribe an oath to diligently, faithfully, and impartially assess all real property according to applicable law and regulations and otherwise perform the duties of office.

(c) The Commissioner shall assure that information regarding the characteristics of real property, sales and exchanges of all such property, building permits, land use plans, and any other information pertinent to the assessment process shall be made available to the assessors on a timely basis. (Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407, title IV, § 422, 88 Stat. 1054; Jan. 3, 1975, Pub. L. 93-635, § 6(e), 88 Stat. 2176.)

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

REFERENCE IN TEXT

"This chapter", referred to in subsec. (b), in the original was "this title", meaning title IV of Act Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407. AMENDMENT

1975—Act Jan. 3, 1975, Pub. L. 93-635, amended the first sentence of subsec. (b) by striking out "this chapter" the first place it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "this subpart".

EFFECTIVE DATE OF 1975 AMENDMENT

See note under § 47-633.

§ 47-643. Assessments to be made in name of owner and by address and lot and square.

(a) All real property, except as hereinafter provided, shall be assessed in the name of the owner, or trustee or trustees of the owner thereof. All undivided real property of a deceased person may be assessed in the name of such deceased person until such undivided real property is divided according to law, or has otherwise passed into the possession of some other person; and all real property, the ownership of which is unknown, shall be assessed as owner unknown.

(b) All real property, whether taxable or not, shall be assessed according to the address and the number of the squares and lots thereof, or part of lots, and upon the number of the square or superficial feet in each square or lot or part of a lot. (Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407, title IV, § 423, 88 Stat. 1054.)

§ 47-644. Preliminary assessment roll—Public inspection of records—Publication of assessment-sales ratio studies and assessed property values.

(a) The Commissioner shall, on or before March 1 of each year, compile in tabular form and place in a book, known as the preliminary assessment roll, the name of the owner, address, lot and square, amount, description, and value, as of January 1 of that year, of the land and improvements of all real property whether such property is taxable or exempt.

(b) The preliminary assessment roll, together with all maps, field books, assessment-sales ratio studies, surveys, and plats, shall be open to public inspection during normal business hours. In addition, any notes and memorandums relating to the assessment of his real property, or a statement clearly indicating the basis upon which his real property has been assessed, shall be open to inspection by the taxpayer or his designated representative during normal business hours. Provision shall be made to furnish copies of all material to any person, upon request, at the lowest charge which covers cost of making such copies.

(c) The Commissioner shall undertake, publish, and otherwise publicize the results of assessment-sales ratio studies for different types of real property for the entire District and for different types of real property within each of the districts utilized in making assessments. If, for a given year, adequate sales data are lacking for particular studies, the Commissioner shall so indicate.

(d) The Commissioner shall, either himself or in a newspaper of general circulation, publish a listing of the assessed value of each property by address, lot, and square, and he shall also make such listing available at the main public library in the District and at such other points as he may determine. Such publication can be by neighborhood areas so long as maps showing the assessment areas are generally available. (Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407, title IV, § 424, 88 Stat. 1054.)

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in sections 47-645, 47-646.

§ 47-645. Annual notice or statement of assessment—Contents.

Beginning as soon as possible after January 1, but no later than March 1 of each year, each taxpayer shall be notified of the assessment of his real property for the next fiscal year. The notice, or statement accompanying the notice, shall include—

(1) the address, lot, square, and type of land use by major category of the property;

(2) the assessed value of the land and improvements (shown separately and in total) of the property for the next fiscal year and such amounts for the previous fiscal year;

(3) the amount and percentage of change in assessed value over the previous fiscal year;

(4) an indication of the reason for such change in assessment, such as, but not limited to, improvements to the property, zoning change, changing market values;

(5) statement of appeal procedures pursuant to section 47-646(i);

(6) the citation to the regulations or orders under which the property was assessed;

(7) the location of the assessment roll, studies, and notes referred to in sections 47-644 and 47-646(g) and the hours during which the information is available;

(8) the availability of a listing of the assessed value of property referred to in section 47-644(c); and

(9) an explanation of all special benefits, incentives, limitations, or credits which relate to real property taxes as a result of this or any other Act. (Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407, title IV, § 425, 88 Stat. 1055.)

§ 47-646. Board of Equalization and Review—Meetings—Appeals—Assessment revisions.

(a) There is established a Board of Equalization and Review for the District (hereinafter in this chapter referred to as the "Board") which shall be composed of fifteen members, a majority of whom shall be residents of the District, appointed by the Commissioner, with the advice and consent of the Council. The Council may authorize a larger size if the caseload so requires. Members of the Board shall be persons having knowledge of the valuation of property, real estate transactions, building costs, accounting, finance, or statistics. The Commissioner shall name one member as Chairman. None of the members may be officers of the District of Columbia government. Each member shall serve for a term of five years, except of the members first appointed under this section, the Commissioner shall designate equal numbers for terms of one, two, three, four, and five years. The terms of the members first appointed under this section shall begin on January 1, 1975. Any person appointed to fill a vacancy shall be appointed to serve for the remainder of the term during which the vacancy arose. Each member shall receive compensation at a rate to be determined by the Council unless otherwise prohibited by law, but not to exceed one two-thousandth of the annual salary of the highest step of grade 15 of the General Schedule in section 5332 of title 5 of the United States Code for each hour such member is engaged in the actual performance of duties vested in the Board.

(b) The Commissioner shall provide such other support as is needed for the efficient operation of the Board.

(c) The Board shall convene as business necessities from the first Monday in January until the Commissioner shall be presented with the assessment roll for the fiscal year as provided in subsection (g). The Board shall also convene as business necessities for a period of thirty days following any special assessment which shall be generally applicable to a class of real property, and as business in the Board otherwise makes necessary.

(d) A majority of the Board shall constitute a quorum for transacting business, except the Board may provide for the establishment of three member panels for hearing and deciding individual appeals. The Board shall adopt and publish necessary rules, and all applicable provisions of the District of Columbia Administrative Procedures Act (D.C. Code, secs. 1-1501—1-1510) shall apply to the rules and procedure of the Board.

(e) On or before April 15 of each year any taxpayer may appeal the amount of his assessment for the forthcoming fiscal year.

(f) Pursuant to applicable provisions of law, regulations adopted by the Council, or orders of the Commissioner, the Board shall attempt to assure that all real property is assessed at the estimated market value. Based on the record of complaints or of other information available to or solicited by the Board, the Board shall raise or lower the estimated market value of any real property which it finds to be more than 5 per centum above or below the estimated market value contained in the preliminary assessment roll prepared by the Commissioner according to section 47-644 and shall revise the assessment roll accordingly.

(g) On or before June 1 the Board shall present the revised assessment roll for the forthcoming fiscal year to the Commissioner. The Commissioner shall make such further revisions to the assessment roll as are required under other applicable provisions of law, and shall approve such assessment roll not later than June 30. Except as otherwise provided by law, the approved assessment roll shall constitute the basis of assessment for the forthcoming fiscal year and until another assessment roll is made according to law.

(h) Neither the Board nor any court shall order the increase of the assessed value of any parcel of real property above its estimated market value, nor the decrease of the assessed value of any parcel of real property below its estimated market value solely on the basis of average ratio studies comparing sales and assessments, unless such studies are the primary basis for the assessment, or reassessment of the concerned property.

(i) Any person aggrieved by any assessment, equalization, or valuation made, may, by October 15 of the calendar year in which such assessment, equalization, or valuation is made, appeal from such assessment, equalization, or valuation in the same manner and to the same extent as provided in sections 47-2403 and 47-2404, if such person shall have first made his complaint to the Board respecting such assessment as herein provided, except that in any case where no notice in writing of such increase of valuation was given the taxpayer prior to March 15 of the particular year, no such complaint shall be required for appeal. (Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407, title IV, § 426, 88 Stat. 1055; Jan. 3, 1975, Pub. L. 93-635, § 6(f), (g), 88 Stat. 2176.)

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

AMENDMENT

1975—Act Jan. 3, 1975, Pub. L. 93-635, amended the last sentence of subsec. (f) by striking out "section 47-643" and inserting in lieu thereof "section 47-644"; and amended subsec. (i) by striking out "sections 47-2404 and 47-24143" and inserting in lieu thereof "sections 47-2403 and 47-2404".

EFFECTIVE DATE OF 1975 AMENDMENT

See note under § 47-633.

PRIOR PROVISIONS

Provisions which related to composition and functions of the Board of Equalization and Review were formerly contained in act Aug. 14, 1894, ch. 287, § 9, 28 Stat. 284, and act Aug. 17, 1937, ch. 690, title IX, § 5(a), as added May 16, 1938, ch. 223, § 8, 52 Stat. 372, as amended, and were formerly classified to § 47-708.

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in sections 47-633, 47-645.

§ 47-647. Power to administer oaths and summon witnesses—Witness fees—Perjury.

Each assessor of the District, and each assistant assessor, in the discharge of any of his duties, or the Board, may administer all necessary oaths or affirmations. The Commissioner or, in his absence, his designated agent, and the Chairman of the Board, shall have power to summon the attendance of any person to be examined under oath touching such matters and things as the Commissioner or the Board may deem advisable in the discharge of their duties; and any member of the Metropolitan Police force of the District of Columbia may serve subpoenas in his behalf. Such fees shall be allowed witnesses so examined, to be paid out of funds available to the Commissioner, as are allowed in civil actions before the United States District Court for the District of Columbia. Any person summoned and examined as aforesaid who shall knowingly make false oath or affirmation shall be guilty of perjury, and upon conviction thereof be punished according to the laws in force for the punishment of perjury. (Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407, title IV, § 427, 88 Stat. 1056.)

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

§ 47-648. Class actions.

Within one year after September 3, 1974, the Superior Court of the District of Columbia shall establish a method which it deems appropriate by which class action cases regarding any matter relating to real and personal property taxes may be brought before the Superior Court. (Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407, title IV, § 428, 88 Stat. 1057.)

CODIFICATION

"September 3, 1974" was substituted for "the date of enactment of this title".

§ 47-649. Penalties.

Any person who shall refuse or knowingly neglect to perform any duty enjoined on him by law, or who shall consent to or connive at any evasion of the provision of the first section of the Act of March 3, 1881 (D.C. Code, sec. 47-209), or section 13 of the Act of August 14, 1894 (D.C. Code, sec. 47-606), or any other provision of this chapter shall, for each offense, be removed from office and fined not more than $10,000, or imprisoned for no longer than one year, or both, in the discretion of the court. (Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407, title IV, § 429, 88 Stat. 1057.)

REFERENCES IN TEXT

"The first section of the Act of March 3, 1881 (D.C. Code, sec. 47-209)", referred to in text, appears identical with the original. However, the citation to sec. 47-209 of the Code appears to be erroneous as that section is based on section 14 of Act Aug. 14, 1894, 28 Stat. 285, rather than the 1881 Act. So much of the first section of the 1881 Act as was classified to sec. 47-301 of the Code was repealed by section 474(b) of Act Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407. Other portions of the first section of the 1881 Act have been classified to secs. 7-1206, 32-813, and 47-210 of the Code. The remainder of the first section of the 1881 Act has not been classified to the Code.

"This chapter", referred to in text, in the original was "this title", meaning title IV of Act Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407. Such title IV enacted this chapter, §§ 47-504, 47-801-1, 47-1567g, and provisions set out as notes under §§ 47-504, 47-621, 47-632; amended §§ 47-801a, 47-2405, 47-2601; and repealed §§ 47-301, 47-501a, 47-602 to 47-605, 47-701 to 47-709, 47-713.

SUBCHAPTER C.—HOMEOWNER EXEMPTION

§ 47-650. Exemption for low and moderate income families.

(a) In order that the shift to equalized assessment at the same percentage of estimated market value for all properties not result in increases in proportionate tax burden for households of low or moderate income who own or rent property identified on the assessment roll as row dwellings, detached dwellings, or semi-detached dwellings, the Council by regulation is authorized to provide that the amount of up to $3,000 of market value may be deducted from the estimated market value of some or all of such property.

(b) Subsection (a) shall take effect on and after July 1, 1974. (Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407, title IV, § 430, 88 Stat. 1057.)

District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

SUBPART D.—TAX INCENTIVES

§ 47-651. Tax incentives—Rehabilitation and new construction in areas—Preservation of historic buildings.

(a) The Council shall, within one year after September 3, 1974, after public hearing, adopt regulations providing tax incentives for the rehabilitation of existing structures and for new construction, including rehabilitation or construction of commercial property, located in areas of the District as designated by the Council. The Council shall also adopt regulations providing tax incentives for the rehabilitation and maintenance of historic buildings. Such tax incentives may include, but are not limited to—

(1) establishing different tax rates for land and for improvements thereon; and

(2) providing that any increase in assessed value of improvements resulting from rehabilitation or new construction be ignored for tax purposes for up to five years from the year of such reassessment.

(b) To be eligible for incentive under this section, historic buildings must be property designated as an historic landmark and conform to the provisions of subpart E. (Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407, title IV, § 431, 88 Stat. 1057; Jan. 3, 1975, Pub. L. 93-635, § 15 (a), (b), 88 Stat. 2178.)

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

SUBPART E.—TAX RELIEF FOR CERTAIN HISTORIC PROPERTIES

SUBPART REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This subpart is referred to in section 47-651.

§ 47-652. Assessment of officially designated historic buildings.

For certain officially designated historic buildings in the District, the Commissioner shall, in addition to assessing at full market value, assess land and improvement on the basis of current use and structures of the buildings, which latter assessment, if it is less than full market value, shall be the basis of tax liability to the District. (Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407, title IV, § 432, 88 Stat. 1058; Jan. 3, 1975, Pub. L. 93-635, § 15(c), 88 Stat. 2178.)

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

§ 47-653. Eligibility for historic property tax relief.

To be eligible for historic property tax relief, real property must be a historic building designated by the Joint Committee on Landmarks of the National Capital and, in addition, must be approved by the Commissioner under section 47-654. (Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407, title IV, § 433, 88 Stat. 1058; Jan. 3, 1975, Pub. L. 93-635, § 15(d), 88 Stat. 2178.)

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

AMENDMENT

1975—Act Jan. 3, 1975, Pub. L. 93-635, amended section by striking out "historic property" and inserting in lieu thereof "a historic building"; and by striking out "Planning Commission and the Commission on Fine Arts," immediately following "National Capital".

§ 47-654. Agreements for maintenance and use of historic buildings.

The Council may provide that the owners of historic buildings which have been so designated by the Joint Committee on Landmarks of the National Capital may enter into agreements with the government of the District of Columbia for periods of at least twenty years which will assure the continued maintenance of historic buildings in return for property tax relief. Such a provision shall, as a condition for tax relief, require reasonable assurance that such buildings will be used and properly maintained and such other conditions as the Council finds to be necessary to encourage the preservation of historic buildings. The Council shall also provide for the recovery of back taxes, with interest, which would have been due and payable in the absence of the exemption, if the conditions for such exemption are not fulfilled. (Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407, title IV, § 434, 88 Stat. 1058; Jan. 3, 1975, Pub. L. 93-635, § 15(e), 88 Stat. 2178.)

AMENDMENT

1975—Act Jan. 3, 1975, Pub. L. 93-635, amended section generally. Prior to amendment the section read: "The Council may provide that the owners of properties which have been designated historic landmarks by the Joint Committee on Landmarks of the National Capital Planning Commission and the Commission of Fine Arts may enter into agreements with the government of the District of Columbia for periods of at least twenty years which will assure the continued maintenance of historic properties in return for property tax relief. Such a provision shall, as a condition for tax relief, require reasonable assurance that such property will be used and properly maintained and such other conditions as the Council finds to be necessary to encourage the preservation of historic property. The Council shall also provide for the recovery of back taxes, with interest, which would have been due and payable in the absence of the exemption, if the conditions for such exemption are not fulfilled."

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in section 47-653.

SUBPART F.—TAX DEFERRAL

§ 47-655. Tax deferral—Homeowner whose adjusted gross income does not exceed $20,000.

(a) An eligible taxpayer may defer each year any real property tax owed in excess of 110 per centum of his immediately preceding year's real property tax liability. To be eligible for such deferral the taxpayer must—

(1) have owned for at least five years the residential real property for which deferral is claimed;

(2) certify that the combined household adjusted gross income (for purposes of District income taxes) does not exceed $20,000 in one year;

(3) file a written request for deferral on a form prescribed by the Commissioner;

(4) certify that such residential real property is the principal place of residence of the taxpayer;

(5) certify that the zoning classification of such residential property has not changed in the immediately past fiscal year;

(6) certify that increases in the assessed valuation of such residential real property attributable to improvements which increase the intrinsic value of such residential real property are not included in the calculation of the increase in real property tax payable; and

(7) certify that the assessment of such residential real property for the immediately previous fiscal year was not the result of an obvious arithmetical error.

(b) Taxes deferred under this section shall bear interest compounded annually. The rate of interest which shall be applied in each year shall be the average Treasury bill rate for the preceding twelve months as certified by the Secretary of the Treasury to the Commissioner.

(c) No further deferrals of real property tax shall be granted a taxpayer when his deferred tax plus interest equals more than 10 per centum of the current assessed value of his property.

(d) Taxes deferred under this section, together with all accumulated interest, shall constitute a preferential lien upon the real property which shall be immediately payable by the seller, transferor, or conveyer whenever the real property is sold, refinanced, transferred, or conveyed in any manner, or whenever additional co-owners (other than spouse) are added to the real property. (Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407, title IV, § 435, 88 Stat. 1058.)

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

EFFECTIVE DATE

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in section 47-656.

§ 47-656. Same; Homeowner whose adjusted gross income exceeds $20,000.

(a) Any owner of residential real property whose combined household adjusted gross income is in excess of $20,000, and who meets the qualification specified in clauses (1), (3), (4), (5), and (6) of subsection (a) of section 47-655, may defer the amount of real property tax attributable to an increase by more than 25 per centum in any one year over the assessment of the immediately previous fiscal year. For the purposes of this section and section 47-655, for the fiscal year 1975 the assessed value of all properties assessed at 55 per centum of estimated market value shall be the assessed value of the property divided by 0.55.

(b) Taxes deferred under this section shall bear interest compounded annually. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the rate of interest which shall be applied in each year is the average Treasury bill rate for the preceding twelve months as certified by the Secretary of the Treasury to the Commissioner.

(c) No further deferrals of real property tax shall be granted a taxpayer when his deferred tax plus interest equals more than 10 per centum of the current assessed value of his property.

(d) Taxes deferred under this section, together with all accumulated interest, shall constitute a preferential lien upon the property which shall be immediately payable by the seller, transferor, or conveyer whenever the property is sold, refinanced, transferred, or conveyed in any manner, or whenever additional co-owners (other than spouse) are added to the property.

(e) The deferral provided in this section shall terminate June 30, 1979 unless specifically extended by the Council. (Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407, title IV, § 436, 88 Stat. 1059.)

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

SUBPART G.—DISPOSAL OF TAX DELINQUENT PROPERTY TO ENCOURAGE HOMEOWNER-SHIP

§ 47-657. Tax delinquent property to be deeded to District—Redemption.

Notwithstanding any other provision of law, whenever any real property in the District of Columbia has been, or shall hereafter be, offered for sale for nonpayment of taxes or assessments of any kind whatsoever, and shall have been bid off in the name of the District of Columbia, and two years or more have elapsed since such property was bid off as aforesaid, and the same has not been redeemed as provided by law, the Commissioner of the District may enforce the lien of the District for taxes or other assessments on such real property by ordering that a deed in fee simple to such property be issued by the Commissioner of the District of Columbia to the District of Columbia, and up to the time of the issuance of the deed such property may be redeemed by the owner or other person having an interest therein by the payment of all taxes or assessments due the District of Columbia upon said property, and all legal penalties, interest and costs thereon, together with such other expenses and costs, including costs of publication, as may have been incurred by the District. (Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407, title IV, § 437, 88 Stat. 1059.)

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

§ 47-661. Regulations—Penalties.

Except as specifically provided in this chapter, or in other provisions of law applicable to the District of Columbia, the Council may by regulation establish penalties for violations of any provisions of this chapter, including any regulation issued pursuant to this chapter. Such penalties may not exceed imprisonment for longer than one year, or a fine not to exceed $10,000, or both, for each offense. (Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407, title IV, § 477, 88 Stat. 1065; Jan. 3, 1975, Pub. L. 93-635, § 8(d), 88 Stat. 2177.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS UNDER FORMER § 47-701

Notice of assessment

Heirs at law of deceased record owner of realty were not deprived of due process of law by tax sale of the property without actual notice where the district complied with the statutory requirements on notice and the provisions governing the manner in which real property is to be assessed, i. e., mailing the required notices to the record owner. W. J. Moore et al. v. Government of the District of Columbia et al. (D.C. App. 1975, 332 A.2d 749).

Although statutory scheme relating to tax sales might be considered for modernization, i. e., so as to avoid tax sales of property without actual notice to a property owner, such as where the record owner has died and his property has passed to others, such task is not for the court but, rather, for the legislature. Id.

§ 47-703. Repealed. Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407, title IV, § 474(h), 88 Stat. 1065.

Section, Act Mar. 3, 1883, ch. 137, § 5, 22 Stat. 569, provided that assessments be by lot and square, and is now covered by § 47-643.

EFFECTIVE DATE OF REPEAL AND SAVINGS PROVISIONS

Section 474 of Act Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407, provided in part that this section is repealed effective June 30, 1975. Section 476 of such Act, containing savings provisions, is set out as a note under § 47-621.

§§ 47-704 to 47-707. Repealed. Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407, title IV, § 474(f), 88 Stat. 1065.

Section 47-704, Act Aug. 14, 1894, ch. 287, § 4, 28 Stat. 283, required the District Commissioner to supply the Board of Assistant Assessors with plats.

Section 47-705, Act Aug. 14, 1894, ch. 287, § 6, 28 Stat. 283, provided that the Board Assistant Assessor's valuation be made separately for improvements and each tract or lot, and is now covered by § 47-642.

Section 47-706, Acts Aug. 14, 1894, 28 Stat. 283, ch. 287, § 7; Sept. 1, 1916, 39 Stat. 678, ch. 433; July 3, 1926, 44 Stat. 834, ch. 759, § 10, required Board of Assistant Assessors to make annual tabulated report of property assessed, and is now covered by § 47-644.

Section 47-707, Act Aug. 14, 1894, ch. 287, § 8, 28 Stat. 283, provided penalties for violations of the Act.

EFFECTIVE DATE OF REPEAL AND SAVINGS PROVISIONS

Section 474 of Act Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407, provided in part that these sections are repealed effective June 30, 1975. Section 476 of such Act, containing savings provisions, is set out as a note under § 47-621.

§§ 47-708, 47-709. Repealed. Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407, title IV, § 474(g), 88 Stat. 1065; Jan. 3, 1975, Pub. L. 93-635, § 9, 88 Stat. 2177.

Section 47-709, Act Aug. 17, 1937, ch. 690, title IX, § 5(a) (last three sentences), as added May 16, 1938, 52 Stat. 372, § 223, § 8, and amended July 26, 1939, 53 Stat. 1109, ch. 367, title IV, § 5(b); July 10, 1952, 66 Stat. 544, ch. 649, § 3(c); July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, title I, § 161(a)(5), 84 Stat. 580, provided that valuation of real property be complete on the first Monday of May annually, that the valuation be approved by the Commissioner by July 1, annually, and constitute the basis for taxation; and provided for appeals for persons aggrieved by any assessment, equalization, or valuation. See new § 47-646.

EFFECTIVE DATE OF REPEAL AND SAVINGS PROVISIONS

Section 474 of Act Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407, provided in part that these sections are repealed effective June 30, 1975. Section 476 of such Act, containing savings provisions, is set out as a note under § 47-621. Section 9 of Act Jan. 3, 1975, Pub. L. 93-635, also provision that these sections are repealed effective June 30, 1975.

NOTES TO DECISIONS UNDER FORMER § 47-709

Exhaustion of administrative remedy

Where taxing officials did not disclose change in assessment levels until after time for administrative review of District of Columbia tax assessments had passed, affected real property owners were not barred from seeking injunctive relief by their failure to exhaust administrative remedies. District of Columbia et al. v. C. Green et al. (D.C. App. 1973, 310 A.2d 848).

Injunctions

Where real property owners who had not sought administrative review of District of Columbia tax assessments were excused from so doing because of lack of knowledge that debasement factor had been raised, those property owners who had sought administrative review of assessments would not be required to wait statutory period and pay tax before applying for relief by injunction. District of Columbia et al. v. C. Green et al. (D.C. App. 1973, 310 A.2d 848).

— Compliance

Where previous judgment of trial court required real property tax assessment of all single-family property at 55%, trial court did not err in rejecting District of Columbia's method of computation which was designed to comply with such judgment and which resulted in average level of assessment of 55.00772%, in ordering that District recompute assessed value, correct tax roll and reissue supplementary tax bills or refunds within 90 days using method suggested by trial court which was designed to reach greater mathematical exactitude in computation of real property taxes, and in declining to view as de minimis differences in amounts of real property taxes between the methods of computation. District of Columbia et al. v. C. Green et al. (D.C. App. 1975, 348 A.2d 305).

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Assessment

Since taxpayer's allegation that taxes imposed on building which was completed in second half of the year should have been imposed only for the second half and should not have been imposed under statute providing for annual assessment was an attack on the propriety of the annual assessment, taxpayer's attack was on entire assessment, even though taxpayer recognized validity of assessment for the second half, and Superior Court was without jurisdiction to hear the appeal where taxpayer had paid only the first installment of the tax. George Hyman Construction Co. et al. v. District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1974, 315 A.2d 175).

§ 47-711. New buildings under roof to be included in list.

Provisions which related to the assessment of new buildings under roof were formerly contained in act July 3, 1926, ch. 759, § 3, 44 Stat. 833.

EFFECTIVE DATE OF REPEAL AND SAVINGS PROVISIONS

Section 474 of Act Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407, provided in part that this section is repealed effective June 30, 1975. Section 476 of such Act, containing savings provisions, is set out as a note under § 47-621. Section 9 of Act Jan. 3, 1975, Pub. L. 93-635, also provided that this section is repealed effective June 30, 1975.

NOTES TO DECISIONS UNDER PRIOR LAW

Debasement

Where previous judgment of trial court required real property tax assessment of all single-family property at 55%, trial court did not err in rejecting District of Columbia's method of computation which was designed to comply with such judgment and which resulted in average level of assessment of 55.00772%, in ordering that District recompute assessed value, correct tax roll and reissue supplementary tax bills or refunds within 90 days using method suggested by trial court which was designed to reach greater mathematical exactitude in computation of real property taxes, and in declining to view as de minimis differences in amounts of real property taxes between the methods of computation. District of Columbia et al. v. C. Green et al. (D.C. App. 1975, 348 A.2d 305).

Action of District of Columbia taxing authorities in raising debasement factor as to some but not all single-family residences from 55 to 60 percent of fair market value, without any administrative resort left to the taxpayers for amelioration of tax inequities, was unconstitutional and arbitrary action, despite contention that action was taken as part of effort to equalize tax assessments through "stair step" increases of debasement factor for single-family residences so as to bring such properties ultimately into equality with other types of property. District of Columbia et al. v. C. Green et al. (D.C. App. 1973, 310 A.2d 848).

Parties in court suit

Where class of taxpayers sought to be represented by purported intervenors in suit brought on behalf of city commercial property owners seeking declaratory judgment that practice of assessing commercial property at higher percentage of market value than residential property violated this section and the Fifth Amendment had economic interest in outcome of suit, and District of Columbia, which had agreed to set up single level of assessment and had not denied that its dual assessments violated this section and Fifth Amendment principles of equal protection, did not adequately represent such taxpayers, proposed intervenors should be allowed to intervene under Superior Court rule on behalf of all taxpayers other than commercial ones. Calvin-Humphrey et al. v. District of Columbia et al. (D.C. App. 1975, 340 A.2d 795).

Rulemaking

Interpretation or implementation by taxing authorities of words "full and true value" by changing debasement factor for taxation of single-family residences from 55 percent of estimated market value to 60 percent is, within meaning of District of Columbia Administrative Procedure Act, "rulemaking" such as to require publication of notice despite contention that change was part of effort to equalize District of Columbia tax assessments as required by Constitution. District of Columbia et al. v. C. Green et al. (D.C. App. 1973, 310 A.2d 848).

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Construction

Where January 5, 1971 was the effective date of amendment of this section providing, inter alia, that any building should not be considered a building used for purposes of public charity, “* * * except that this sentence will not apply to those organizations granted an exemption under this paragraph before the date of enactment of this sentence.”, the specific exception or saving clause was controlling, and neither the District of Columbia nor any court had jurisdiction to make thereafter a determination of binding legal effect that the building and grounds of taxpayer corporation were used for purposes of public charity and, thus, exempt from taxation. District of Columbia v. Linda Pollin Memorial Housing Corporation (D.C. App. 1973, 313 A. 2d 579).

Subsection (m) of this section exempting from real property tax the property of churches, including buildings and structures reasonably necessary and usual in the performance of activities of the church, and subsection (n) exempting from property tax the buildings which belong to religious corporations or societies and which are primarily and regularly used for religious worship, study, training and missionary activities, are not mutually exclusive, but are complementary; Congress enacted the latter subsection to provide tax exemption to organizations with buildings which, by virtue of their use, could not be classified as churches, but which Congress felt should nonetheless be exempt from real property tax due to character of work carried on within. District of Columbia v. The Maryland Synod of the Lutheran Church in America (D.C. App. 1973, 307 A. 2d 735).

Educational purposes

Fact that nonprofit professional resident theater and drama school spent nearly five times more money for its professional theater productions than it did for the school and that the productions generated over five times more income than the school tuitions, although relevant, was not a crucial factor in determining whether school should be granted exemption from real estate taxation on basis that it was an educational institution. The Washington

Theater Club, Inc. v. District of Columbia (1973, 311 A. 2d 492).

Religious corporation

Real property which was owned by religious organization and rented by the organization with an offer to purchase to church and which the church used primarily and regularly for religious worship, study, training and missionary activities was exempt from real estate tax under subsection (n) of this section exempting from real property tax the buildings which belong to religious corporations or societies and which are primarily and regularly used for religious worship, study, training, and missionary activities. District of Columbia v. The Maryland Synod of the Lutheran Church in America (D.C. App. 1973, 307 A. 2d 735).

Fact that rent or income was secured from exempt property was not, standing alone, sufficient reason to assess and tax the property; rather, crux of exemption determination was use of the property and not fact that income might be derived from it. Id.

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

§ 47-801e. Appeal.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Time to appeal

Requirement that petition contesting assessment of real property be filed within six months "after payment of the tax" applies to tax exempt property, and such six-month period runs from date of assessment. National Graduate University v. District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1975, 346 A.2d 740).

§ 47-801f. Rules and regulations.

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

Chapter 10.—REAL PROPERTY TAX SALES

§ 47-1001. Delinquent tax list—Publication of notice—Competitive proposals—Sale.

The assessor of the District of Columbia shall prepare a list of all taxes on real property in said District subject to taxation on which said taxes are levied and in arrears on the first day of July of each year hereafter; and the Council of the District of Columbia shall fix date of sale. The notice of sale and the delinquent tax list shall be advertised according to regulations prescribed by the Council of the District of Columbia in not less than two major daily newspapers published in the District. If the taxes due, together with the penalties and costs that may have accrued thereon, shall not be paid prior to the day fixed for sale, the property will be sold, under the direction of the Mayor of the District of Columbia, at public auction at the office of the said collector of taxes, commencing at least three weeks after the first publication of said notice and continuing on each following day, Sundays and legal holidays excepted, until all said delinquent property is sold; a description sufficient to identify the property shall be considered a proper description. (Feb. 28, 1898, 30 Stat. 250, ch. 32, § 1; July 1, 1902, 32 Stat. 632, ch. 1358, § 1(1); July 3, 1926, 44 Stat. 834, ch. 759, § 9; Mar. 2, 1927, 44 Stat. 1303, ch. 271; May 21, 1928, 45 Stat. 650, ch. 659; Feb. 25, 1929, 45 Stat. 1268, ch. 314; Oct. 26, 1973, Pub. SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

CODIFICATION

Acts Feb. 28, 1898, July 1, 1902, and July 3, 1926, contained a provision for the publication of a pamphlet and for notice of the publication thereof. Acts Mar. 3, 1927, May 21, 1928, and Feb. 25, 1929, abolished this pamphlet and enacted the following provisions which (prior to enactment of Act Oct. 26, 1973) were set out as the second sentence of this section: "The notice of sale and the delinquent tax list shall be advertised once a week for two weeks in the regular issue of one morning and one evening newspaper published in the District of Columbia; and notice shall be given, by advertising twice a week for two successive weeks in the regular issue of two daily newspapers published in the District of Columbia, that such delinquent tax list has been published in two daily newspapers, giving the name of each and the dates and the issues containing said list, and such notice shall be published in the two weeks immediately following the week in which the delinquent tax list shall have been published: Provided further, That competitive proposals shall be invited by the Commissioner of the District of Columbia from the several newspapers published in the District of Columbia for publishing the said delinquent tax list."

AMENDMENT

1973—Act Oct. 26, 1973, amended second sentence generally. For prior provisions, see "Codification" note above.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Notice—Deceased owners

Heirs at law of deceased record owner of realty were not deprived of due process of law by tax sale of the property without actual notice where the district complied with the statutory requirements on notice and the provisions governing the manner in which real property is to be assessed, i.e., mailing the required notices to the record owner. W. J. Moore et al. v. Government of the District of Columbia et al. (D.C. App. 1975, 332 A.2d 749).

Although statutory scheme relating to tax sales might be considered for modernization, i.e., so as to avoid tax sales of property without actual notice to a property owner, such as where the record owner has died and his property has passed to others, such task is not for the court but, rather, for the legislature. Id.

— Sufficiency

Where final notice of delinquency was mailed to landowner, announcing that further nonpayment would result in sale, and where certified or registered letter notifying landowner that redemption period was soon to expire was received by person who customarily delivered mail to the landowner, fact that the landowner claimed that he did not receive any notice does not prove that efforts of the District of Columbia to notify him were insufficient. T. L. Dodson v. T. J. Scheve et al. (D.C. App. 1975, 339 A.2d 39; cert. denied 96 S. Ct. 1103, 424 U.S. 909).

§ 47-1008. Payment of expenses of advertising.

The expenses of advertising the notice of sale and delinquent tax list for real property taxes, water charges, sanitary sewer service charges, and special assessments in arrears together with penalties and costs, shall be reimbursed to the District by a charge to be fixed annually by the Mayor and assessed against each lot or piece of property advertised. The amounts so received shall be deposited to such fund of the District as the Mayor shall from time to time determine. AMENDMENTS

1973—Act Oct. 26, 1973, amended section generally. Prior to amendment, the section read: "The expenses of advertising shall be paid by a charge of fifty cents for each lot or piece of property advertised."

1928—Act May 21, 1928, deleted the words "and the printing of said pamphlet" following the word "advertising".

1902—Act July 1, 1902, reduced the charge from one dollar and twenty cents to fifty cents.

APPROPRIATIONS

CHARGE FOR PROPERTY ADVERTISED

The District of Columbia Appropriation Act, 1961 (approved Apr. 8, 1960, Pub. L. 86-412, 74 Stat. 18), authorized the Commissioners to fix annually a charge "for each lot or piece of property advertised". This authority was continued by subsequent Appropriation Acts, and was last continued for fiscal year 1974 by § 10 of the District of Columbia Appropriation Act, 1974 (approved Aug. 14, 1973, Pub. SUBCHAPTER II.—INCOME AND FRANCHISE TAXES FOR TAXABLE YEARS AFTER JANUARY 1, 1947

SUBCHAPTER REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This subchapter is referred to in sections 1-1182, 5-916, 21-311, 26-702, 47-504, 47-1701, 47-2413.

TITLE I.—REPEAL OF PRIOR INCOME TAX LAW AND APPLICABILITY OF SUBCHAPTER; GENERAL DEFINITIONS

§ 47-1551. Repeal of subchapter I and retention of certain provisions thereof.

SHORT TITLE

The first section of act Oct. 21, 1975, D.C. Law 1-23, provided "That this act [for classification of act see Tables] may be cited as the 'Revenue Act of 1975'."

SEVERABILITY AND SAVINGS PROVISIONS OF D.C. LAW 1-23

Section 802 of act Oct. 21, 1975, D.C. Law 1-23, title VIII, provided:

"Sec. 802(a) If any provision of this act, including any amendment made by this act, or the application thereof to any person or circumstance, is held invalid, the remainder of the act, including the remaining amendments, and the application of such provision to other persons or circumstances shall not be affected thereby.

"(b) The repeal or amendment by this Act of any provision of law shall not affect any act done or any right accrued or accruing under such provision of law before the effective date of this Act or any suit or proceeding had or commenced before the effective date of this Act, but all such rights and liabilities in the same manner and to the same extent, as if such repeal or amendment had not been made.

"(c) All offenses committed, and all penalties incurred, prior to the effective date of this Act, under any provision of law hereby repealed or amended, may be prosecuted and punished in the same manner and with the same effect as if this Act had not been enacted."

REPORT ON TOTAL IMPACT OF TAXES AND USER CHARGES

Section 602 of act Oct. 21, 1975, D.C. Law 1-23, provided: "The Mayor of the District of Columbia shall, within six months after the effective date of this section, submit to the Finance and Revenue Committee of the Council of the District of Columbia and to the District of Columbia Auditor, a report which shall analyze the total impact of all District of Columbia taxes and user charges. This report shall set forth all information which the Mayor deems useful to a full understanding of the impact of the tax structure. It shall specifically set forth the impact and revenue of all taxes, as a sum, on individual residents grouped by income class and family status, (including unmarried, married, single parent, retired, and such other classifications as are appropriate). The same analysis shall be given for each separate tax on individuals. Such analysis shall include consideration of business taxes and charges likely to be passed on to consumers. The report shall also set forth the impact and revenue of each tax on commercial and professional activity, and on businesses grouped by type and size of business activity. In addition to the impact and revenue analysis, the report shall set forth the distribution of returns for each tax grouped by quartile of revenue starting from the quartile containing the fewest returns. An estimate of the revenue effect and collection expense should be given for changes in major exemptions and deductions."

§ 47-1551c. General definitions.

For the purposes of this subchapter and wherever appearing herein, unless otherwise required by the context—

* * * * *

(h) The words "trade or business" include the engaging in or carrying on of any trade, business, profession, vocation or calling or commercial activity in the District of Columbia; and include the performance of the functions of a public office: Provided, however, That the words "trade or business" shall not include, for the purposes of this subchapter—

(1) Sales of tangible personal property whereby title to such property passes within or without the District, by a corporation or unincorporated business which does not physically have or maintain an office, warehouse, or other place of business in the District, and which has no officer, agent, or representative having an office or other place of business in the District, during the taxable year; or

(2) Repealed. Oct. 21, 1975, D.C. Law 1-23, title VI, § 609, 22 DCR 2114.

For purposes of this proviso, the words "agent" or "representative" shall not include any independent broker engaged independently in regularly soliciting orders in the District for sellers and who holds himself out as such.

* * * * *

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in sections 47-1564b, 47-1564c.

§ 47-1564a. Requirement—Who must file.

Each of the following persons shall file a return with the Assessor stating specifically the items of his gross income and the items claimed as deductions and credits allowed under this subchapter, and such other information for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this subchapter as the Assessor may require:

(a) Residents and nonresidents.—Every nonresident of the District receiving income subject to tax under this subchapter and every resident of the District, except fiduciaries, when—

(1) his gross income for the taxable year, if single, or if married and not living with husband or wife, exceeds the personal exemptions authorized for the taxpayer as of July 1, 1975, by subsection (b) of section 151 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 [26 U.S.C. 151(b)]; or

(2) his gross income for the taxable year, if married and living with husband or wife, exceeds the combined amount of the personal exemptions authorized for the taxpayer and the spouse of the taxpayer as of July 1, 1975, by subsection (b) of section 151 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 [26 U.S.C. 151(b)]; or

(3) his gross sales or gross receipts from any trade or business other than an unincorporated business subject to tax under sections 47-1574 to 1574e, exceeds $5,000, regardless of the amount of his gross income; or

(4) the combined gross income for the taxable year of a husband and wife living together exceeds the combined amount of the personal exemptions authorized as of July 1, 1975, for the taxpayer and the spouse of the taxpayer by subsection (b) of section 151 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 [26 U.S.C. 151(b)], or the combined gross sales or gross receipts from any trade or business, other than an unincorporated business subject to tax under sections 47-1574 to 47-1574e, exceeds $5,000, regardless of the amount of their gross income.

(b) Fiduciaries.—Every fiduciary (except a receiver appointed by authority of law in possession of only part of the property of an individual) for—

(1) every individual if single, or if married and not living with husband or wife, for whom he acts having a gross income for the taxable year in excess of the amount of his personal exemption as authorized for the taxpayer as of July 1, 1975, by subsection (b) of section 151 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 [26 U.S.C. 151(b)];

(2) every individual, if married and living with husband or wife, for whom he acts having a gross income for the taxable year in excess of their personal exemptions as authorized for the taxpayer as of July 1, 1975, by subsection (b) of section 151 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 [26 U.S.C. 151(b)];

(3) every estate for which he acts, the gross income of which for the taxable year is in excess of its personal exemption, which is equivalent to the personal exemption authorized for an individual as of July 1, 1975, by subsection (b) of section 151 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 [26 U.S.C. 151(b)]; or

(4) every trust for which he acts, the gross income of which for the taxable year is $100 or over.

(As amended Oct. 21, 1975, D.C. Law 1-23, title VI, § 601(7), 22 DCR 2107.)

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in sections 47-1574e, 47-1577b.

§ 47-1567g. Credit for property taxes accrued and payable by District of Columbia residents.

(a) (1) For purposes of providing relief to certain District of Columbia residents who own or rent their principal place of abode and who reside in same, a credit shall be allowed to the eligible claimant equal to the amount by which all or a portion of real property taxes the taxpayer pays, or rent paid constituting property taxes, on his principal place of residence for the taxable year, exceeds a percentage (determined under subsection (a) (2)) of his household gross income for that year.

(2) The percentage required under paragraph (1) of this subsection to be determined under this subsection for taxpayers shall be the percentage specified in the following table:

If household gross income is:	The percentage of property tax paid on the first $400 of property tax, or rent constituting property tax, which shall constitute credit is:
Under $3,000-----	80 per centum of tax in excess of 2 per centum of income.
$3,000 to $4,999-----	70 per centum of tax in excess of 3 per centum of income.
$5,000 to $6,999-----	60 per centum of tax in excess of 4 per centum of income.

(b) For purposes of this section:

(1) (A) The term "household gross income" means gains, profits, and income derived from salaries, wages, or compensation for personal services of whatever kind and in whatever form paid, including salaries, wages, and compensation paid by the United States to its officers and employees, or income derived from any trade or business or sales or dealings in property whether real or personal, including capital assets as defined in this subchapter growing out of the ownership or sale of or interest in such property; income from rent, royalties, interest, dividends, securities, of transactions of any trade or business carried on for gain or profit, or gains or profits and income derived from any source whatever, including but not limited to alimony, and separate maintenance payments (including amounts received under separate maintenance agreements), strike benefits, cash public assistance and relief (not including relief or credit granted under this section), sick pay, workmen's compensation, proceeds of life insurance policies, the gross amount of any pension or annuity (including railroad retirement benefits, veterans' disability pensions, or payment received under the Federal Social Security Act [42 U.S.C. 301 et seq.]), State or District of Columbia unemployment compensation laws, and nontaxable interest received from the United States, a State or any agency or instrumentality thereof. The word "income" does not include gifts from nongovernmental sources, food stamps, or food or other relief in kind supplied by a governmental agency.

(B) In determining household gross income the exclusions from gross income as provided by subsection (b) of section 47-1557a shall not apply.

(2) The term "household income" shall have the same meaning as the words "adjusted gross income" are defined in subsection (c) of section 47-1557a. For purposes of determining adjusted gross income within the meaning of this section, gross income shall mean household income as defined in this section.

(3) The term "home" means the claimant's dwelling house, whether owned or rented by the claimant, and so much of the land surrounding it as is reasonably necessary for use of the dwelling as a home, and may include a multiunit building or a multipurpose building and a part of the land upon which it is located.

(4) The term "claimant" means a person who has filed a claim under this section, was an owner of record of a home in the District, or a lessee, tenant at will or tenant at sufferance paying rent on a home in the District, during the entire calendar year preceding the year in which he files a claim for relief under this section. Only one claimant per home and per household per year shall be entitled to relief under this section.

(5) (A)¹ The term "rent constituting property taxes accrued" means 15 per centum of the rent actually paid by a claimant in cash or its equivalent in the calendar year 1975 or any subsequent calendar year solely for the right to occupy his District home in such calendar year, and which rent constitutes the basis in the succeeding calendar year for the claim for relief made by the claimant under this section, exclusive of amounts which are paid as rent or other consideration for the providing by the landlord of furniture or furnishings of any kind, and exclusive of amounts included in the rent for utilities. Whenever the amount of rent includes charges for the providing by the landlord of furniture or furnishings or charges for utilities, and the charges therefor are not separately stated, then there shall be deducted from the rent as the charge for such furniture or furnishings 20 per centum of the rent, and for utilities 10 per centum of the rent, and the balance shall be deemed to be the amount paid by the claimant solely for the right to occupy his District home for the purposes of the credit allowed under this section.

(C) In the event that any installment of rent for a calendar year for which a claim is filed is paid prior to the beginning of or subsequent to the end of such calendar year, it shall be included as rent for the year for which the claim was made and for no other year, and shall not be included as rent for purposes of this section for the year in which the installment was paid.

(d) If the Mayor determines that the rent paid was not the result of an agreement entered into at arm's length between the tenant and his landlord, the Mayor may adjust the rent to a reasonable amount for the purposes of this section.

(e) (1) Beginning with the calendar year 1975 and for each succeeding calendar year, if a claimant owns and occupies his home in the District on July 1 of any such year, "property taxes accrued" means property taxes (exclusive of special assessments, interest on a delinquency in payment of tax, and any penalties and service charges) assessed and paid to date against such home commencing January 1, 1975, and for succeeding years. If a home is an integral part of a larger unit such as a multipurpose building or a multidwelling building, property taxes accrued shall be that percentage of the total property taxes accrued as the value of the home bears to the total value of the property.

(2) When a claimant rents two or more different homes in the District in the same calendar year, rent paid by the claimant during that year shall be determined by dividing the rent paid pursuant to the last rental agreement in force during that calendar year by the number of months during that calendar year for which this rent was paid and multiplying the result by twelve.

(f) The right to file under this section shall be personal to the claimant, but such right may be exercised by his legal guardian or attorney-in-fact. The right to file a claim shall not survive the death of a claimant. If a claimant dies after having filed a claim, any amount refunded as a result thereof shall be disbursed to his estate: Provided, That if no executor or administrator qualifies therein within two years of the filing of the claim, or no petition for distribution of a small estate is filed pursuant to sections 20-2101 and 20-2102, the claim shall not be allowed.

(g) Subject to the limitations provided in this section, commencing with the taxable year beginning after December 31, 1974, and for succeeding taxable years, the claimant may claim as a credit against the District income taxes otherwise due on his income, property taxes accrued or rent constituting property taxes accrued for that year. If the allowable amount of such claim exceeds the income taxes otherwise due from the claimant, or other tax liabilities of the claimant to the District, or if there are no District income taxes due from the claimant, the amount of the claim not used as an offset against income taxes or other tax liabilities of the claimant to the District shall be paid or credited to the claimant. No interest shall be allowed on any payment made to a claimant pursuant to this section.

(h) No claim with respect to property taxes accrued or with respect to rent constituting property taxes accrued shall be allowed unless a District of Columbia individual income tax return or (if the claimant is not required to file such return) a claim for credit under this section is filed with the District on the forms and in such manner and with such information as the Mayor may prescribe. Any claim for credit shall be filed on or before the time prescribed for the filing of a return of individual income under this article. The Mayor may grant a reasonable extension of time, not to exceed six months, for the filing of a return or claim for credit under this section whenever in his judgment good cause exists therefor.

(i) The amount of any claim otherwise payable under this section may be applied by the District against any outstanding tax liability of the claimant to the District.

(j) (1) In determining eligibility for the credit allowable under this section, and for the purpose of determining outstanding tax liability (if any) of the claimant to the District household income for which the claim is filed and the claimant's outstanding tax liability (if any) shall be determined on the basis of the combined household income of all members present in the household, except there shall be excluded from the computation of gross household income the first $1,000 earned by a dependent.

(2) In the case of husband and wife, who during the entire calendar year for which a claim is filed under this section, maintains separate homes, for the purpose of determining household income and the claimant's outstanding tax liability (if any), such husband and wife shall be deemed to have been unmarried during the calendar year for which the claim is made.

(k) No credit shall be allowed under this title for any year during which the person claiming the credit was a dependent, under any State, Federal, or District law levying a tax on income, unless during that year such person is or becomes sixty-five years of age or older.

(l) In the case of persons whose incomes vary substantially from year to year, the Council of the District of Columbia shall adopt regulations concerning income averaging for purposes of calculating benefits.

(m) Each owner of a rental unit or his authorized agent shall, when requested in writing, furnish to the tenant making such written request a statement indicating the amount of rent paid by the tenant during the calendar year solely for the right of occupancy of the leased premises. Requests shall be made under this paragraph only by those persons entitled to file a claim under this section or who at the time of the making of the request deem themselves entitled to file a claim for credit under this section.

(n) (1) If, on an audit of any claim filed under this section, the Mayor finds the amount to have been incorrectly computed, he shall determine the correct amount and notify the claimant in accordance with the procedures set forth in section 47-1586d.

(2) If it is determined that a claim was filed with fraudulent intent, it shall be disallowed in full. If the claim has been paid or a credit has been allowed against income taxes otherwise payable, the credit shall be canceled and the amount paid shall be assessed against the claimant and recovered in the same manner as provided for the collection of taxes under section 47-312.

(o) No claim for relief under this section shall be allowed to any person who was not living in a home which was subject to District of Columbia real property taxation during the calendar year for which the claim is filed.

(p) Notwithstanding any other provision of law to the contrary, any person aggrieved by the denial in whole or in part of a claim for the credit authorized by this section, or an assessment of tax made pursuant to subsection (n) (1) of this section, may appeal the denial within six months after notice of the denial of the claim or within six months after notice of assessment, to the Board which shall consider such appeal as a contested case under section 1-1509. In the case of an assessment of tax, the mailing to the claimant of a statement of taxes due shall be considered notice of assessment with respect to such taxes.

(q) The Mayor is authorized to provide a table which will approximate, as closely as feasible, the amount of relief allowable under this section.

(r) If it is determined by the District that a claimant received title to his home in the District or became legally obligated to pay rent for his home in the District primarily for the purpose of receiving benefits under the provisions of this section, his claim shall be disallowed.

(s) The Council of the District of Columbia is empowered to make such changes in the amount of annual relief provided under subsection (a) of this section as it may deem proper. (July 16, 1947, ch. 258, Art. I, title VI, § 8, formerly § 7, as added Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407, title IV, § 451, 88 Stat. 1060; renumbered and amended Jan. 3, 1975, Pub. L. 93-635, § 7 (a) (1), (b) (1), (c)-(e), 88 Stat. 2176.)

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

CODIFICATION

Section was enacted by title IV of Act Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407, and is therefore subject to the definitions and regulations provisions of such title IV, as set out in §§ 47-622 and 47-661.

AMENDMENTS

1975—Section 7(a) (1) of Act Jan. 3, 1975, Pub. L. 93-635, made technical amendments to the source statute (sec. 451 of Pub. L. 93-407) without making change in the text of the section. Section 7(a) (2) of such Act made these amendments effective on and after Sept. 3, 1974.

Section 7(b) (1) of such Act renumbered section 7 of the 1947 Act as section "(8)". Section 7(b) (3) of such Act made this amendment effective on and after Jan. 1, 1975.

Section 7(c) of such Act amended subsec. (f) by striking out "the first section of the Act of September 14, 1965 (D.C. Code, secs. 20-2101 and 20-2102)" and inserting in lieu thereof "sections 20-2101 and 20-2102".

Section 7(d) of such Act amended subsec. (p) by striking out "paragraph (1)" and inserting in lieu thereof "subsection (n) (1)".

Section 7(e) of such Act amended subsec. (s) by striking out "section 7(a) of this title" and inserting in lieu thereof "subsection (a) of this section".

EFFECTIVE DATE

Section 451 of Act Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407, provided in part that this section is effective Jan. 1, 1975.

EFFECTIVE DATE OF 1975 AMENDMENTS

Section 7(f) of Act Jan. 3, 1975, Pub. L. 93-635, provided: "The amendments [to subsecs. (f), (p), and (s)] made by subsections (c), (d), and (e) shall take effect as provided in section 451 of that Act [Public Law 93-407] as if the sections (as amended) amended by such subsections had been included in Public Law 93-407 on the date of its enactment."

TITLE X.—PURPOSE OF SUBCHAPTER AND ALLOCATION AND APPORTIONMENT

§ 47-1580. Purpose of subchapter.

It is the purpose of this subchapter to impose (1) an income tax upon the entire net income of every resident and every resident estate and trust, and (2) a franchise tax upon every corporation and unincorporated business for the privilege of carrying on or engaging in any trade or business within the District and of receiving such other income as is derived from sources within the District: Provided, however, That, in the case of any corporation, the amount received as dividends from a corporation which is subject to taxation under this subchapter or under chapter 18 of this title, and, in the case of a corporation not engaged in carrying on any trade or business within the District, interest received by it from a corporation which is subject to taxation under this subchapter or under chapter 18 of this title shall not be considered as income from sources within the District for purposes of this subchapter; and in the case of any corporation organized as a bank holding company under the provisions of the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956 and the Bank Holding Company Act Amendments of 1970, the amount received as dividends from a corporation which is subject to taxation under this subchapter or under the provisions of sections 47-1701 and 47-1703, and in the case of any such bank holding company not engaged in carrying on any trade or business within the District, interest received by it from a corporation which is subject to taxation under such sections, shall not be considered as income from sources within the District for purposes of this subchapter. Provided further, That income derived from the sale of tangible personal property by a corporation or unincorporated business not carrying on or engaging in trade or business within the District as defined in sections 47-1551 to 47-1551c shall not be considered as income from sources within the District for purposes of this subchapter, with the exception of income from sale to the United States not excluded from gross income as provided in section 47-1557a(b)(13). (July 16, 1947, 61 Stat. 349, ch. 258, Art. I, title X, § 1; May 3, 1948, 62 Stat. 207, ch. 246, § 2; Apr. 17, 1974, Pub. L. 93-268, § 1, 88 Stat. 85.)

AMENDMENT

1974—Act Apr. 17, 1974, Pub. L. 93-268, amended the first proviso generally. Prior to amendment, the proviso read: "Provided, however, That, in the case of any corporation, the amount received as dividends from a corporation which is subject to taxation under this subchapter, and, in the case of a corporation not engaged in carrying on any trade or business within the District, interest received by it from a corporation which is subject to taxation under this subchapter shall not be considered as income from sources within the District for the purposes of this subchapter. The measure of the franchise tax shall be that portion of the net income of the corporation and unincorporated business as is fairly attributable to any trade or business carried on or engaged in within the District and such other net income as is derived from sources within the District;".

EFFECTIVE DATE OF 1974 AMENDMENT

AMENDMENT

1975—Act Oct. 21, 1975, D.C. Law 1-23, amended subsec. (b) (1) by striking out the figure "6" and inserting "9" in lieu thereof.

EFFECTIVE DATE OF 1975 AMENDMENT

Sec. 801(h) of act Oct. 21, 1975, D.C. Law 1-23, provided "Sections 606, 607, and 608 [amending §§ 47-1586l-1, 47-1589, 47-1589a, 47-1589c, 47-1589d] shall take effect on January 1, 1976."

TITLE XIII.—PENALTIES AND INTEREST

§ 47-1589. Failure to file return.

(a) Failure to file return.—In case of any failure to make and file a return required by this subchapter, within the time prescribed by law or prescribed by the Mayor or Council or Assessor in pursuance of law, 5 per centum of the tax shall be added to the tax for each month or fraction thereof that such failure continues, not to exceed 25 per centum in the aggregate, except that when a return is filed after such time and it is shown that the failure to file it was due to reasonable cause and not due to willful neglect, no such addition shall be made to the tax. With respect to declarations of estimated tax, for the purposes of this subsection, the amount and due date of each installment shall be the same as if a declaration had been filed within the time prescribed showing an estimated tax equal to the correct tax reduced by the amount of credit for tax withheld.

(b) Failure to pay.—In the case of any failure to pay the amount of tax required by sections 47-1571, 47-1571a, and 47-1574 to 47-1574e within the time prescribed by law or prescribed by the Mayor or Council in pursuance of law, 5 per centum of the tax shall be added to the tax for each month or fraction thereof that such failure continues, not to exceed 25 per centum in the aggregate except that when the tax is paid after such time and it is shown that the failure to pay was due to reasonable cause and not due to willful neglect, no such addition shall be made to the tax.

(c) Failure to file employer's return.—In the case of any employer—

(1) who pursuant to this subchapter is required to withhold taxes on wages, make a return of such taxes, and pay to the District the taxes required to be withheld pursuant to this subchapter, and

(2) who fails to withhold such taxes, make such return, or pay to the District the taxes required to be withheld pursuant to this subchapter, there shall be imposed on such employer a civil penalty (in addition to any criminal penalty provided for in this subchapter) of 5 per centum of the amount required to be shown as tax on such return if the failure is for not more than one month, with an additional 5 per centum for each additional month or fraction thereof during which such failure continues, not exceeding 25 per centum in the aggregate.

(d) Underestimate of tax by residents.—If 80 per centum of the tax, determined without regard to the amount of credit for tax withheld, exceeds the estimated tax, increased by such credit, there shall be added to the tax an amount equal to such excess, or equal to 9 per centum of the amount by which such tax so determined exceeds the estimated tax so increased, whichever is the lesser. This subsection shall not apply to the taxable year in which falls the death of the taxpayer, nor shall it apply to the taxable year in which the taxpayer makes a timely payment on April 15, July 15, and October 15, of such year, and January 15 of the succeeding year, and the total of all such payments is an amount at least as great as though computed on the basis of the facts shown on his return for the preceding taxable year.

(e) Collection of penalties added to tax.—The amount added to any tax under this section shall be collected at the same time and in the same manner and as a part of the tax unless the tax has been paid before the discovery of the neglect, in which case the amount so added shall be assessed and collected. (July 16, 1947, 61 Stat. 356, ch. 258, Art. I, title XIII, § 1; Mar. 31, 1956, 70 Stat. 79, ch. 154, § 13; Aug. 2, 1968, Pub. L. 90-450, title II, § 203(b), 82 Stat. 612; Oct. 21, 1975, D.C. Law 1-23, title VI, § 607, 22 DCR 2113.)

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

AMENDMENTS

1975—Act Oct. 21, 1975, D.C. Law 1-23, amended section as follows:

(1) Redesignated subsecs. (b), (c), and (d) as “(c)”, “(d)”, and “(e)”, respectively.

(2) In redesignated subsec. (d), struck the figure “6” and inserted “9” in lieu thereof.

(3) Added a new subsec. (b).

EFFECTIVE DATE OF 1975 AMENDMENT

See sec. 801(h) of act Oct. 21, 1975, D.C. Law 1-23, set out as a note under § 47-1586f-1.

§ 47-1589a. Interest on deficiencies.

(a) Assessment and collection.—Interest upon the amount determined as a deficiency shall be assessed at the same time as the deficiency, shall be paid upon notice and demand from the Collector, and shall be collected as a part of the tax, at the rate of three-fourths of 1 per centum per month or portion of a month from the date prescribed for the payment of the tax (or, if the tax is paid in installments, from the date prescribed for the payment of the first installment) to the date the deficiency is assessed.

(b) If extension granted for payment of deficiency.—If the time for payment of any part of a deficiency is extended, there shall be collected, as a part of the tax, interest on the part of the deficiency the time for payment of which is so extended at the rate of three-fourths of 1 per centum per month or portion of a month for the period of the extension. If a part of the deficiency the time for payment of which is so extended is not paid in full, together with all penalties and interest due thereon, prior to the expiration of the period of the extension, then interest at the rate of three-fourths of 1 per centum per month or portion of a month shall be added and collected on such unpaid amount from the date of the expiration of the period of the extension until it is paid. (July 16, 1947, 61 Stat. 356, ch. 258, Art. I, title XIII, § 2; Mar. 31, 1956, 70 Stat. 79, ch. 154, § 14; Oct. 21, 1975, D.C. Law 1-23, title VI, § 606, 22 DCR 2113.)

AMENDMENT

1975—Act Oct. 21, 1975, D.C. Law 1-23, struck out the words “one-half of 1 per centum” wherever they appeared and inserted “three-fourths of 1 per centum” in lieu thereof.

EFFECTIVE DATE OF 1975 AMENDMENT

See sec. 801(h) of act Oct. 21, 1975, D.C. Law 1-23, set out as a note under § 47-1586l-1.

§ 47-1589c. Additions to the tax in case of nonpayment.

(1) General rule.—Where the amount determined by the taxpayer as the tax imposed by this subchapter, or any installment thereof, or any part of such amount or installment, is not paid on or before the date prescribed for its payment, there shall be collected as a part of the tax interest upon such unpaid amount at the rate of three-fourths of 1 per centum per month or portion of a month from the date prescribed for its payment until it is paid.

(2) If extension granted.—Where an extension of time for payment of the amount so determined as the tax by the taxpayer, or any installment thereof, has been granted, and the amount the time for payment of which has been extended, and the interest thereon determined under section 47-1589d is not paid in full prior to the expiration of the period of the extension, then, in lieu of the interest provided for in subsection (a)(1) of this section, interest at the rate of three-fourths of 1 per centum per month or portion of a month shall be collected on such unpaid amount from the date of the expiration of the period of the extension until it is paid.

(b) Deficiency.—Where a deficiency, or any interest or additional amounts assessed in connection therewith under section 47-1589a or under section 47-1589b, or any addition to the tax in case of delinquency provided for in section 47-1589 is not paid in full within ten days from the date of assessment thereof, there shall be collected, as part of the tax, interest upon the unpaid amount at the rate of three-fourths of 1 per centum per month or portion of a month from the date of such notice and demand until it is paid. (July 16, 1947, 61 Stat. 357, ch. 258, Art. I, title XIII, § 4; Mar. 31, 1956, 70 Stat. 79, ch. 154, § 14; Oct. 21, 1975, D.C. Law 1-23, title VI, § 606, 22 DCR 2113.)

AMENDMENT

1975—Act Oct. 21, 1975, D.C. Law 1-23, struck out the words “one-half of 1 per centum” wherever they appeared and inserted “three-fourths of 1 per centum” in lieu thereof.

EFFECTIVE DATE OF 1975 AMENDMENT

See sec. 801(h) of act Oct. 21, 1975, D.C. Law 1-23, set out as a note under § 47-1586l-1.

§ 47-1589d. Time extended for payment of tax shown on return.

If the time for payment of the amount determined as the tax by the taxpayer, or any installment thereof, is extended under the authority of section 47-1586f(b), there shall be collected, as a part of such amount, interest thereon at the rate of three-fourths of 1 per centum per month or portion of a month from the date when such payment should have been made if no extension had been granted, until the expiration of the period of the extension. (July 16, 1947, 61 Stat. 357, ch. 258, Art. I, title XIII, § 5; Mar. 31, 1956, 70 Stat. 79, ch. 154, § 14; Oct. 21, 1975, D.C. Law 1-23, title VI, § 606, 22 DCR 2113.)

AMENDMENT

1975—Act Oct. 21, 1975, D.C. Law 1-23, struck out the words “one-half of 1 per centum” and inserted “three-fourths of 1 per centum” in lieu thereof.

EFFECTIVE DATE OF 1975 AMENDMENT

TITLE XV.—APPEAL

§ 47-1593. Appeal to Superior Court of the District of Columbia.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Construction

Where statutory period for challenging excessive tax payment had expired before sections of Court Reorganization Act of 1970 putatively eliminating common-law remedies became effective, the Act could not be construed to curtail or destroy the preexisting common-law rights of property owners to maintain an action at common law for recovery from the District of Columbia. E. P. Block et al. v. District of Columbia (1974, 492 F. 2d 646, 160 U.S. App. D.C. 380).

Evidence—Admissibility

Where taxpayer's business records were admissible under Federal Shop Book Act (28 U.S.C. 1732), and taxpayer alleged that such records were essential in judicial proceeding seeking redetermination of franchise tax deficiency, failure to admit such records at trial is reversible error despite trial court's posttrial admission of records for purpose of determining final order which dealt with dollar amount of tax deficiency. Petworth Pharmacy, Inc. v. District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1975, 335 A.2d 256).

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Jointly owned property

Where sister and brother, as partners, owned realty and savings accounts as joint tenants, all of the four unities of joint tenancy were present, record showed no evidence that any partnership creditors' claims were not met by partnership assets which were not held in joint tenancy there was no indication that partners did not understand and intend survivorship consequences of joint tenancy, and there was no evidence that they at any time intended to sever joint tenancy, such partnership assets became sister's by right of survivorship on brother's death and are subject to District of Columbia inheritance tax as part of sister's estate. District of Columbia v. The Riggs National Bank of Washington, D.C., Executor etc. (D.C. App. 1975, 335 A.2d 238).

District of Columbia regulation precluding, in computing inheritance tax, deduction from value of jointly held property, passing by right of survivorship, any funeral, administration or other expenses and debts of decedent, is to be considered in juxtaposition with, and is consistent with, statute providing that deduction will be allowed only when claim therefor can be enforced against jointly owned property and the regulation does not conflict with statute imposing inheritance tax. C. A. Hankin v. District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1973, 310 A.2d 56).

Inasmuch as no claims, excepting prior liens, can be enforced against a decedent's former interest in jointly owned property, regulation precluding allowing deductions against such property in computing inheritance taxes is reasonable and constitutional classification. Id.

Taxpayer who filed joint income tax return with her husband had individual obligation to pay all income taxes involved so that payment of such taxes was a payment of personal obligation and was not deductible from joint assets which became solely hers on her husband's death, for purposes of computing D.C. inheritance tax. Id.

Where husband and wife created inter vivos trust agreement whereby they contemplated ultimate contribution to student aid fund of $150,000 to be conveyed to university on basis of 30% of total income in one year, upon acceptance of offer by university, and similar contribution annually during life of surviving donor, with remainder upon death of survivor, the university could not validly have claimed prior lien against joint property upon death of husband and therefore wife was not entitled to deduct the amount she paid to fund upon death of husband from one-half of joint assets, in computing inheritance tax. Id.

Survivor annuity

Neither portion of survivor annuity unpaid on death of retired decedent and attributable to contributions to Federal Civil Service Retirement Fund by decedent, who had to make contributions as condition of government employment and whose annuity was reduced by statute so as to provide survivor benefits for spouse if she survived because decedent did not elect to receive a larger annuity without survivor benefits, nor portion attributable to federal contributions is subject to inheritance taxation, in that decedent did not die "seized or possessed" of the unpaid survivor annuity. District of Columbia v. C. K. Von Schrader (D.C. App. 1975, 345 A.2d 475).

47-1711. Declaration and payment of estimated tax

§ 47-1701. Banks, gas, electric-lighting, and telephone companies.

Each national bank as the trustee for its stockholders, through its president or cashier, and all other incorporated banks and trust companies in the District of Columbia, through their presidents or cashiers, and all gas, electric lighting, and telephone companies, through their proper officers, shall make affidavit to the board of personal-tax appraisers on or before the 1st day of August each year as to the amount of its or their gross earnings or gross receipts, as the case may be, for the preceding year ending the 30th day of June, and each national bank and all other incorporated banks and trust companies respectively shall pay to the collector of taxes of the District of Columbia per annum 6 percent on such gross earnings and each gas company, electric lighting company, and telephone company shall pay to the collector of taxes of the District of Columbia per annum 6 per centum on such gross receipts, from the sale of public utility commodities and services within the District of Columbia. And in addition thereto the real estate owned by each national or other incorporated bank, and each trust, gas, electric lighting, and telephone company in the District of Columbia shall be taxed as other real estate in said District. Each gas, electric lighting, and telephone company shall pay, in addition to the taxes herein mentioned, the franchise tax imposed by subchapter II of chapter 15 of this title, and the tax imposed upon stock in trade of dealers in general merchandise under section 47-1207. (July 1, 1902, 32 Stat. 619, ch. 1352, § 6, par. 5; July 26, 1939, 53 Stat. 1107, ch. 367, title IV, § 2(a); May 18, 1954, 68 Stat. 118, ch. 218, title XIV, § 1401; July 24, 1956, 70 Stat. 599, ch. 669, § 8(a); Oct. 21, 1972, Pub. Law 1-23, provided "The amendment made by section 501 [amending §§ 47-1701 to 47-1704] shall apply with respect to gross receipts or gross earnings for the year ending June 30, 1976, and for each succeeding year ending on the thirtieth day of June. The amendments made by section 501(b) [subsec. (b) of sec. 501 was added by sec. 2 of act Nov. 1, 1975, D.C. Law 1-30, 22 DCR 2545, and is classified to § 47-1711] shall take effect on the first day of the first month after the day this act becomes law according to the provisions of section 602(c) of the District of Columbia Self-Government and Governmental Reorganization Act [§ 1-147(c)]."

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in section 47-1580.

§ 47-1702. Bonding, title, guaranty and fidelity companies.

All companies, incorporated or otherwise, who guarantee the fidelity of any individual or individuals, such as bonding companies, and all companies who furnish abstracts of titles to real property, or who insure real estate titles, shall pay to the collector of taxes of the District of Columbia three per centum of their gross receipts in the District of Columbia. (July 1, 1902, 32 Stat. 619, ch. 1352, § 6, par. 6; Apr. 28, 1904, 33 Stat. 564, ch. 1815; Oct. 21, 1975, D.C. Law 1-23, title V, § 501(a) (2), 22 DCR 2105.)

AMENDMENT

1975—Act Oct. 21, 1975, D.C. Law 1-23, increased the gross receipts tax from one and one-half per centum to three per centum.

EFFECTIVE DATE OF 1975 AMENDMENT

See sec. 801(c) of act Oct. 21, 1975, D.C. Law 1-23, set out as a note under § 47-1701.

§ 47-1703. Savings banks.

Savings banks having no capital stock and paying interest to their depositors shall, through their president or cashier, make affidavit to the board of personal-tax appraisers on or before the 1st day of August in each year as to the amount of their surplus and undivided profits, and shall pay to the collector of taxes of the District of Columbia a sum equal to one and one-half per centum on the amount of their surplus and undivided profits on the 30th day of June preceding.

Incorporated savings banks paying interest to their depositors shall, through their president or cashier, make report under oath to the board of personal-tax appraisers on or before the 1st day of August in each year as to the amount of their gross earnings, less the amount paid as interest to their depositors for the preceding year ending June 30th, and shall pay thereon to the collector of taxes of the District of Columbia six per centum per annum. (July 1, 1902, 32 Stat. 619, ch. 1352, § 6, par. 7; Apr. 28, 1904, 33 Stat. 564, ch. 1815; Oct. 21, 1975, D.C. Law 1-23, title V, § 501(a) (3), 22 DCR 2105.)

AMENDMENT

1975—Act Oct. 21, 1975, D.C. Law 1-23, increased the gross earnings tax on incorporated savings banks from four to six per centum.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Solid waste disposal

As the business of disposing of solid waste is not a business or calling otherwise listed in licensing statutes, the District of Columbia may fix a license fee for the disposal of such wastes in such amount as will be commensurate with the cost to the District of regulating the disposal of such wastes, but any fee would be illegal to the extent that the revenue therefrom exceeded applicable costs. Metropolitan D.C. Refuse Haulers Association et al. v.

W. E. Washington, Commissioner et al. (1973, 479 F. 2d 1191, 156 U.S. App. D.C. 208; aff'g 360 F. Supp. 281).

Where licenses issued for collection and transportation of solid wastes in or through the District of Columbia did not cover disposal of solid wastes in the District, separate disposal fee of $5 per ton was a "license fee" authorized by statute, to the extent that the revenue therefrom was commensurate with the costs of supervision and regulation. Id.

Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

§ 47-2402. Retirement of Judge of District of Columbia Tax Court.

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

§ 47-2403. Appeal from assessment—Hearing and decision.

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in sections 40-603-1, 45-734, 47-646, 47-710, 47-712, 47-716, 47-801e, 47-1215, 47-1531, 47-1534, 47-1593, 47-2405, 47-2413, 47-2618.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Construction

Requirement of timely filing of petition contesting assessment of real property taxes is jurisdictional requirement which cannot be waived by failure to assert six-month limitation period as affirmative defense in answer to petition. National Graduate University v. District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1975, 346 A.2d 740).

Exhaustion of administrative remedy

Where taxing officials did not disclose change in assessment levels until after time for administrative review of District of Columbia tax assessments had passed, affected real property owners were not barred from seeking injunctive relief by their failure to exhaust administrative remedies. District of Columbia et al. v. C. Green et al. (D.C. App. 1973, 310 A.2d 848).

Injunctions

Where real property owners who had not sought administrative review of District of Columbia tax assessments were excused from so doing because of lack of knowledge that debasement factor had been raised, those property owners who had sought administrative review of assessments would not be required to wait statutory period and pay tax before applying for relief by injunction. District of Columbia et al. v. C. Green et al. (D.C. App. 1973, 310 A.2d 848).

— Compliance

Where previous judgment of trial court required real property tax assessment of all single-family property at 55%, trial court did not err in rejecting District of Columbia's method of computation which was designed to comply with such judgment and which resulted in average level of assessment of 55.00772%, in ordering that District recompute assessed value, correct tax roll and reissue supplementary tax bills or refunds within 90 days using method suggested by trial court which was designed to reach greater mathematical exactitude in computation of real property taxes, and in declining to view as de minimis differences in amounts of real property taxes between methods of computation. District of Columbia et al. v. C. Green et al. (D.C. App. 1975, 348 A.2d 305).

Payment of tax

Superior Court of the District of Columbia did not have jurisdiction to hear appeal from tax assessment where taxpayer had paid only the first installment on its taxes at the time it filed appeal, even though taxpayer paid the second installment before superior court dismissed the appeal and before the time had expired for the filing of the petition. George Hyman Construction Co. et al. v. District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1974, 315 A.2d 175).

Since taxpayer's allegation that taxes imposed on building which was completed in second half of the year should have been imposed only for the second half and should not have been imposed under statute providing for annual assessment was an attack on the propriety of the annual assessment, taxpayer's attack was on entire assessment, even though taxpayer recognized validity of assessment for the second half, and Superior Court was without jurisdiction to hear the appeal where taxpayer had paid only the first installment of the tax. Id.

Where taxpayer pursued statutory remedy provided for appeals of tax assessments, taxpayer was required to comply with the statutory requirements, including requirement that tax be paid prior to initiation of the appeal, even though taxpayer was arguing that the assessment was void and not merely excessive. Id.

Judicial review of income tax assessment did not lie in District of Columbia until disputed tax, together with interest and penalties, had been paid. C. O. Perry, Sr. et ano. v. District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1974, 314 A.2d 766; cert. denied 95 S. Ct. 63, 419 U.S. 836).

Time to appeal

Requirement that petition contesting assessment of real property be filed within six months "after payment of the tax" applies to tax exempt property, and such six-month period runs from date of assessment. National Graduate University v. District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1975, 346 A.2d 740).

§ 47-2404. Review by court—Decision of Superior Court, when final—Modification or reversal.

§ 47-2405. Appeals of real estate assessments.

(1) Repealed. Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407, title IV, § 474(g), 88 Stat. 1065; Jan. 3, 1975, Pub. L. 93-635, § 9, 88 Stat. 2177.

(2) Any person aggrieved by any assessment or valuation made in pursuance of section 47-710 may, within six months after October 15 of the year in which said valuation or assessment is made, appeal from such assessment or valuation in the same manner and to the same extent as provided in sections 47-2403 and 47-2404: Provided, however, That if the taxpayer shall be notified in writing not later than September 1 of a particular year of the valuation of the real estate valued in accordance with section 47-710, such taxpayer shall first make a complaint to the Board of Equalization and Review respecting such assessment as herein provided.

(3) Any person aggrieved by any assessment made in pursuance of section 47-711 may, within six months after April 15 of the year in which such assessment is made, appeal from such assessment in the same manner and to the same extent as provided in sections 47-2403 and 47-2404: Provided, however, That if the taxpayer shall be notified in writing not later than March 1 of a particular year of the valuation of the real estate valued in accordance with section 47-711, such taxpayer shall first make a complaint to the Board of Equalization and Review respecting such assessment as herein provided.

(4) Any person aggrieved by any reassessment made in pursuance of section 47-712, may within six months after notice of said reassessment, appeal from said reassessment in the same manner and to the same extent as provided in sections 47-2403 and 47-2404.

(5) Any person aggrieved by a reassessment or redistribution made pursuant to section 47-716, may within six months after notice of such reassessment or redistribution, appeal from such reassessment or redistribution in the same manner and to the same extent as provided in sections 47-2403 and 47-2404. (Aug. 17, 1937, ch. 690, title IX, § 5, as added May 16, 1938, 52 Stat. 372, ch. 223, § 8, and amended July 26, 1939, 53 Stat. 1109, ch. 367, title IV, § 5(b); July 10, 1952, 66 Stat. 544, ch. 649, § 3(c); July 29, 1970, Pub. Stat. 1065; Jan. 3, 1975, Pub. L. 93-635, § 9, 88 Stat. 2177.)

CODIFICATION

The five paragraphs of this section comprise, respectively, the last sentences of subsecs. (a), (b), (c), (d), and (e) of section 5 of the act Aug. 17, 1939, title IX. Such section 5 is classified in its entirety as follows: subsection (a) to sections 47-708 and 47-709; subsection (b) to section 47-710; subsection (c) to section 47-711; subsection (d) to section 47-712, and subsection (e) to section 47-716.

AMENDMENTS

1975—Act Jan. 3, 1975, Pub. L. 93-635, again repealed the first paragraph of this section, which was based on the last sentence of subsec. (a) of section 5 of Act Aug. 17, 1939. For further details, see following paragraph.

1974—Section 474(g) of Act Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407, repealed the first paragraph of this section, which was based on the last sentence of subsec. (a) of section 5 of Act Aug. 17, 1939. It read as follows:

"Any person aggrieved by any assessment, equalization, or valuation made pursuant to sections 47-708 and 47-709, may within six months after October 1 of the year in which such assessment, equalization, or valuation is made, appeal from such assessment, equalization, or valuation in the same manner and to same extent as provided in sections 47-2403 and 47-2404: Provided, however, That such person shall have first made his complaint to the Board of Equalization and Review respecting such assessment as herein provided, except that, in case of increase of valuation of real property over that for the immediately preceding year, where no notice in writing of such increase of valuation is given the taxpayer prior to March 1 of the particular year, no such complaint shall be required for appeal."

EFFECTIVE DATE OF REPEAL AND SAVINGS PROVISIONS

Section 474 of Act Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407, provided in part that the repeal of the first paragraph of this section is effective June 30, 1975. Section 476 of such Act, containing savings provisions, is set out as a note under § 47-621. Section 9 of Act Jan. 3, 1975, Pub. L. 93-635, also provided in part that the repeal is effective June 30, 1975.

§ 47-2501c. Annual Federal payment—Duties of Mayor and Council—Submittal of request to President.

(a) It shall be the duty of the Mayor in preparing an annual budget for the government of the District to develop meaningful intercity expenditure and revenue comparisons based on data supplied by the Bureau of the Census, and to identify elements of cost and benefits to the District which result from the unusual role of the District as the Nation's Capital. The results of the studies conducted by the Mayor under this subsection shall be made available to the Council and to the Federal Office of Management and Budget for their use in reviewing and revising the Mayor's request with respect to the level of the appropriation for the annual Federal payment to the District. Such Federal payment should operate to encourage efforts on the part of the government of the District to maintain and increase its level of revenues and to seek such efficiencies and economies in the management of its programs as are possible.

(b) The Mayor, in studying and identifying the costs and benefits to the District brought about by its role as the Nation's Capital, should to the extent feasible, among other elements, consider—

(1) revenues unobtainable because of the relative lack of taxable commercial and industrial property;

(2) revenues unobtainable because of the relative lack of taxable business income;

(3) potential revenues that would be realized if exemptions from District taxes were eliminated;

(4) net costs, if any, after considering other compensation for tax base deficiencies and direct and indirect taxes paid, of providing services to tax-exempt nonprofit organizations and corporate offices doing business only with the Federal Government;

(5) recurring and nonrecurring costs of unreimbursed services to the Federal Government;

(6) other expenditure requirements placed on the District by the Federal Government which are unique to the District;

(7) benefits of Federal grants-in-aid relative to aid given other States and local governments;

(8) recurring and nonrecurring costs of unreimbursed services rendered the District by the Federal Government; and

(9) relative tax burden on District residents compared to that of residents in other jurisdictions in the Washington, District of Columbia, metropolitan area and in other cities of comparable size.

(c) The Mayor shall submit his request, with respect to the amount of an annual Federal payment, to the Council. The Council shall by act approve, disapprove, or modify the Mayor's request. After the action of the Council, the Mayor shall, by December 1 of each calendar year, in accordance with the provisions in the Budget and Accounting Act, 1921 (31 U.S.C. 2), submit such request to the President for submission to the Congress. Each request regarding an annual Federal payment shall be submitted to the President seven months prior to the beginning of the fiscal year for which such request is made and shall include a request for an annual Federal payment for the next following fiscal year. CHAPTER REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This chapter is referred to in sections 47-504, 47-2413, 47-2701, 47-2706, 47-2712.

§ 47-2601. Definitions.

14. (a) "Retail sale" and "sale at retail" mean the sale in any quantity or quantities of any tangible personal property or service taxable under the terms of this chapter. Said term shall mean all sales of tangible personal property to any person for any purpose other than those in which the purpose of the purchaser is to resell the property so transferred in the form in which the same is, or is to be, received by him, or to use or incorporate the property so transferred as a material or part of other tangible personal property to be produced for sale by manufacturing, assembling, processing, or refining. For the purpose of the tax imposed by this chapter, these terms shall include but shall not be limited to the following:

(1) Food or drink served, prepared for immediate consumption, or sold, in or by, restaurants, lunch counters, cafeterias, hotels, snack bars, caterers, boarding houses, carryout shops and other like places of business, and food or drink sold ready for immediate consumption from carts, and motor vehicles or any other form of vehicle. Hot or cold sandwiches are considered prepared foods.

(4) Repealed. Oct. 21, 1975, D.C. Law 1-23, title III, § 301(3), 22 DCR 2098.

(7) Repealed. Oct. 21, 1975, D.C. Law 1-23, title III, § 301(3), 22 DCR 2098.

(8) The sale of or charges for admission to public events, except live performances of ballet, dance, or choral performances, concerts (instrumental and vocal), plays (with and without music), operas and readings and exhibitions of paintings, sculpture, photography, graphic and craft arts, but including movies, circuses, burlesque shows, sporting events, and performances or exhibitions of any other type or nature: Provided, That any casual or isolated sale of or charge for admission made by a semipublic institution not regularly engaged in asking such sales or charges shall not be considered a retail sale or sale at retail.

* * * * *

(11) The rental of textiles to commercial users, the essential part of such rental includes the recurring service of laundering or cleaning thereof.

(12) The sale of or charges made for the service of parking, storing or keeping motor vehicles or trailers. For the purposes of this paragraph "motor vehicles" mean any vehicle propelled by an internal-combustion engine or by electricity or steam, except road rollers, farm tractors, and vehicles propelled only upon stationary rails or tracks; and "trailer" means a vehicle without motor power intended or used for carrying property or persons and drawn or intended to be drawn by a motor vehicle, whether such vehicle without motor power carries the weight of the property or persons wholly on its own structure or whether a part of such weight rests upon or is carried by a motor vehicle.

(b) The term "retail sale" and "sale at retail" shall not include the following:

(1) (A) Sales of transportation and communication services.

(B) Repealed. Oct. 21, 1975, D.C. Law 1-23, title III, § 301(5), 22 DCR 2099.

* * * * *

(5) Food or drink sold in the same form, condition, quantities and packaging as is commonly sold in grocery type food stores, except when sold by businesses as described in paragraph 14(a)(1).

* * * * *

(As amended Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407, title IV, § 473, 88 Stat. 1064; Jan. 3, 1975, Pub. L. 93-635, § 8(b), 88 Stat. 2177; Oct. 21, 1975, D.C. Law 1-23, title III, § 301(1)-(6), 22 DCR 2097.)

SUCCESSION IN GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia Council and the office of Commissioner of the District of Columbia, as established by Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, were abolished as of noon Jan. 2, 1975, by § 1-131, and replaced by the Council of the District of Columbia and the office of Mayor of the District of Columbia, respectively, as provided by §§ 1-141 and 1-161.

CODIFICATION

Par. 14. (a)(8), being amended generally by title IV of Act Sept. 3, 1974, is therefore subject to the definitions and regulations provisions of such title IV, as set out in §§ 47-622 and 47-661.

AMENDMENTS

1975—Section 301 of act Oct. 21, 1975, D.C. Law 1-23, amended par. 14 as follows:

- (1) Amended par. 14(a)(1) generally.
- (2) Added par. 14(a)(12).
- (3) Repealed par. 14(a)(4) and (7).
- (4) Amended par. 14(a)(11) generally.
- (5) Amended par. 14(b)(1)(A) by striking out "other than sales of local telephone service"; and repealed par. 14(b)(1)(B).
- (6) Added par. 14(b)(5).

Section 8(b) of Act Jan. 3, 1975, Pub. L. 93-635, made a technical amendment to the 1974 amendatory act (sec. 473 of Pub. L. 93-407) without making change in the text of the section. Section 8(e) of such Act made this amendment effective on and after Sept. 3, 1974.

1974—Section 473 of Act Sept. 3, 1974, Pub. L. 93-407 amended par. 14(a)(8) generally. Prior to amendment, it read:

"(8) The sale of or charges for admission to public events, including movies, musical performances, exhibitions, circuses, sporting events, and other shows or performances of any type or nature, except that any casual or isolated sale of or charge for admission made by a semipublic institution not regularly engaged in making such sales or charges shall not be considered a retail sale or sale at retail."

EFFECTIVE DATE OF 1975 AMENDMENTS

Sec. 801(i) and (j) of act Oct. 21, 1975, D.C. Law 1-23, provided:

"(1) Section 301, with the exception of subsections (3), (5) and (9) of that section, [amending §§ 47-2601, par. 14(a)(1), (11), (12), (b)(5), 47-2602, 47-2604, 47-2605(o)] shall take effect on the first day of the first month which begins more than 30 days after the effective date of this Act.

"(j) Subsections (3), (5) and (9) of section 301 [amending §§ 47-2601, par. 14(a)(4), (7), (b)(1), 47-2605(l)] shall take effect on June 1, 1976."

EFFECTIVE DATE OF 1974 AMENDMENT

See note under § 47-621.

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in sections 47-2602, 47-2605, 47-2701, 47-2702.

§ 47-2602. Imposition of tax.

A tax is imposed upon all vendors for the privilege of selling at retail certain tangible personal property and for the privilege of selling certain selected services (defined as retail sale and sale at retail in this chapter). The rate of such tax shall be 5 per centum of the gross receipts from sales of or charges for such tangible personal property and services, except that—

(1) the rate of tax shall be 8 per centum of the gross receipts from the sales of or charges for the service of parking or storing motor vehicles or trailers;

(2) the rate of tax shall be 6 per centum of the gross receipts from sales of or charges for (A) any room or rooms, lodgings, or accommodations, furnished to transients by any hotel, inn, tourist camp, tourist cabin, or any other place in which rooms, lodgings, or accommodations are regularly furnished to transients; and (B) food or drink served, prepared for immediate consumption, or sold as described in paragraph 14(a)(1) of section 47-2601; and

(3) the rate of tax shall be 6 per centum of the gross receipts from sales of spiritous or malt liquors, beer and wines; and

(4) the rate of tax shall be 2 per centum of the gross receipts from the sales of food and drink as described in paragraph 14(a)(1) of section 47-2601 when sold from vending machines.

(As amended Oct. 21, 1975, D.C. Law 1-23, title III, § 301(7), 22 DCR 2099.)

Chapter 27.—COMPENSATING-USE TAX

CHAPTER REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This chapter is referred to in sections 47-504, 47-2413, 47-2601.

§ 47-2701. Definitions.

1. (a) "Retail sale", "sale at retail", and "sold at retail" means all sales in any quantity or quantities of tangible personal property, whether made within or without the District, and services, to any person for the purpose of use, storage, or consumption, within the District, taxable under the terms of this chapter. These terms shall mean all sales of tangible personal property to any person for any purpose other than those in which the purpose of the purchaser is to resell the property so transferred in the form in which the same is, or is to be, received by him, or to use or incorporate the property so transferred as a material or part of other tangible personal property to be produced for sale by manufacturing, assembling, processing, or refining. For the purpose of the tax imposed by this chapter, these terms shall include, but shall not be limited to, the following:

* * * *

(2) Repealed. Oct. 21, 1975, D.C. Law 1-23, title III, § 302(3), 22 DCR 2102.

* * * *

(5) The sale of any meals, food or drink, or other like tangible personal property for a consideration as described in paragraph 14(a) (1) of section 47-2601.

* * * *

(9) The rental of textiles to commercial users, the essential part of which rental includes recurring service of laundering or cleaning thereof.

(b) The terms "retail sale", "sale at retail", and "sold at retail" shall not include the following:

(1) Sales of transportation and communication services.

* * * *

vending machine operator, licensed under the District of Columbia Cigarette Tax Act, such licensee shall pay to the Mayor (in accordance with paragraph (2) of this subsection) an amount equal to the difference between the amount of tax represented by such tax stamps on the date of their purchase and the amount of tax which an equal number of cigarette tax stamps would represent if purchased on the effective date of the amendment.

"(2) Within twenty days after the effective date of such amendment, each such licensee (A) shall file with the Mayor an affirmed statement (on a form to be prescribed by the Mayor) showing the number of such cigarette tax stamps held by him as of the beginning of the day after the effective date of this amendment, or if such day is a Sunday, as of the beginning of the following day and (B) shall pay to the Mayor the amount specified in paragraph (1) of this subsection.

"(3) Each such licensee shall keep and preserve for the twelve-month period immediately following the effective date of such amendment the inventories and other records made which form the basis for the information furnished to the Mayor on the statement required to be filed under this subsection.

"(4) For purposes of this subsection, a tax stamp shall be considered as held by a wholesaler, retailer, or vending machine operator if title thereto has passed to such wholesaler, retailer, or operator (whether or not delivery to him has been made) and if title to such stamp has not at any time been transferred to any person other than such wholesaler, retailer, or operator.

"(5) A violation of the provisions of paragraph (1), (2), or (3) of this subsection shall be punishable as provided in section 611 of the District of Columbia Cigarette Tax Act (D.C. Code, sec. 47-2810)."

Chapter 29.—ADMISSION TO LICENSED PLACES—POSTING OF PRICE SCALE

§ 47-2902. Licensed hotels, restaurants and like establishments may not refuse admittance and service to orderly persons or exclude them because of race or color—Penalty.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Breach of contract

When restaurant patron was ordered to leave for being shoeless, her license to be on premises was revoked, whether legally or illegally, and she had no right to remain, even though restaurant had served patron food and received payment for it, and, her remedy, if any, was a civil action for breach of contract. S. M. Feldt v. Marriott Corporation (D.C. App. 1974, 322 A. 2d 913).

Common law

In the absence of constitutional or statutory rights, common-law rule that restaurant owner has right to arbitrarily refuse service to any guest still controls. S. M. Feldt v. Marriott Corporation (D.C. App. 1974, 322 A. 2d 913).

Dress requirements

Statutory requirement that a restaurant must serve any quiet or orderly person does not prevent a restaurant from having reasonable requirements as to dress of its customers, such as a requirement that all male customers wear coats and ties or that all customers wear shoes. S. M. Feldt v. Marriott Corporation (D.C. App. 1974, 322 A.2d 913).

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Decisions of Maryland courts

The United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia is not bound to follow decisions of courts of Maryland, particularly if they were handed down subsequent to the organization of the District of Columbia. L. Blair v. The Prudential Insurance Co. of America (1972, 472 F.2d 1356, 153 U.S. App. D.C. 281).

Jury nullification

In prosecution under statute [§ 9-123] making it unlawful for any person or group of persons wilfully and knowingly to obstruct or impede passage through or within any capitol building, court did not err in refusing to give requested instruction, essence of which was jury nullification and would have made jurors judges of the law as well as facts. A. J. Arshack v. United States (D.C. App. 1974, 321 A.2d 845).
